APPELLATE EXHIBITS

CSSN COPELAND: White Jeep.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, he took you, or you just took his keys?

CSSN COPELAND: No, he took me.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What store did you go to?

CSSN COPELAND: We went to Food Lion.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was that--which one?

CSSN COPELAND: I have no clue. There's like a lot of Food Lions.

SA GOKEY: That's fair. That's fair.

Do you know about what time you guys went?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You said you called her right, though?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I FaceTimed her.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you FaceTimed her, and then did you go to the store right after you FaceTimed her?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I hung up, and then after that, I was just telling him. I said, "Cool. Can we go to the store?" And he was like, "Yeah, let's go."

SA GOKEY: Okay.

MS. BEA: Did he go in with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Hmm?

MS. BEA: Did he go in with you? Like, y'all were both doing some shopping?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, he went in with me.

002509_COPELAND

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. And then, what'd you do after you left the store?

CSSN COPELAND: We went back home.

SA GOKEY: Back to your building?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, how did Resendez get there?

CSSN COPELAND: I came and picked her up.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And did--in what car?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate's car.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did he go with you on that one?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I came and picked her up.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

MS. BEA: Same Jeep you said?

CSSN COPELAND: Huh?

MS. BEA: Same Jeep?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Same roommate. Okay.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you guys went--or excuse me, you went and picked her up.

What was she wearing?

CSSN COPELAND: I can't recall. I remember she was wearing a black shirt and I believe black pants.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she have anything with her?

002510_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: I believe she had a--she had a purple backpack that she always carries with her.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I think that was it.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Any--anything more descriptive about what she was wearing? Was like--again, like you may be one of the last people to here before she went UA.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: And I'm really trying to find her.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: because she's UA and she needs to be at work, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: So, anything more descriptive that I can start looking for?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah, like, I can't really remember that. All I remember is her wearing a black shirt. I believe it was black pants and she had some Uggs.

SA GOKEY: Uggs. What kind of Uggs?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know the brand of--I--I just know of Uggs.

SA GOKEY: But--so, were they like slip-ons or were they boots or?

CSSN COPELAND: They were slip-ons.

SA GOKEY: They were the slip-ons. Okay. Okay. So, slip-on Uggs. Okay. Anything else?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Did you notice any jewelry that she was wearing?

CSSN COPELAND: I know she had a bracelet and I think a hair clip.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And a hair clip. Like one of the big ones to pull up a bunch of hair, or like a little big one.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was like a--a clip. Like an actual clip? Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But like, big one, little one.

CSSN COPELAND: It was like a medium-sized one.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know how females justify their hair clips, so.

SA GOKEY: No, that's fine.

MS. BEA: I never met [redacted]. Is she Hispanic? Is she black? Is she white?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe she's Hispanic.

MS. BEA: Okay. Does she wear, like, any kind of braids or anything like that? Or like, just kind of like, where's it long?

CSSN COPELAND: Military--military style, like in a bun.

MS. BEA: When you picked her up, was it in a bun?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. Was it in a bun the whole time?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. She always keeps her hair in a bun.

MS. BEA: Got it.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Does she have her nose pierced?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Do you recall about what time you picked her up?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't remember.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. All right. So, you picked her up, and then what did you do?

CSSN COPELAND: After that, we came home and we started making tacos.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she--did you say something about salsa on Sunday?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I mean, that shit is in the sink right now.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: In my room, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So did she--did she make it there or did you guys----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, she made it. I don't know if it was--it was like a guacamole or a salsa. It was one of the two. She made it in the room, so.

002513_COPELAND

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: She made everything, put it in the blender. The shit is still sitting in the sink right now, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was it good?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, it was good, but it--it was her and my stomach. I have a weak stomach, so.

SA GOKEY: That's fair. That's fair. Did she bring any of the ingredients with her?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I bought everything at the store.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

So, you bought all the ingredients, and then she just made it?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. So, you guys made tacos. She made the salsa. Y'all ate. Then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: From there, we started listening to music on my game on Apple Music and Spotify. It was going back and forth because too many people was on the internet at the time. So, obviously, it's going to start lagging. And then from there we just started talking. And she mentioned something about Gillespie, which is the dude that she talks to on the boat, and all this other stuff. And then, that's when I had brought up the fact that, like, something about he said something about him picking up a female. And she was like, that's crazy, because she went on a walk, so and so, and she basically saw him pick up a female that looked like it was on his bike because he wears all black. So, she said it looked like it was his. And from there, I'm pretty sure she knew that it was him. So, she texted him and she was like, "Fuck you."

Sorry for my language.

SA GOKEY: No, but we're all adults. So, you cuss, you say whatever you--you need to say to----

CSSN COPELAND: But it--it is just me out of respect. I don't--you know.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But from there she said that. And from there, that's when she called her ex-boyfriend, that lived in Texas. And I was sitting on the couch. She was--she was sitting on the floor, and then she told me to come over to meet him. And then from there I was like, "What's good, Brody?" And he was like, "What's good?" And from there, they were talking, and I would just put my feedback in or just like, say like little things, because at the end of the day, it's not really my conversation, it's theirs. They're having a conversation, so. They were talking whatever. And then, from there they hung up and she was just calling other people, talking about how Gillespie's not shit, this, that, the third, and just going on a rabbit spree, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, what is Gillespie and her's relationship?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't really know. It's not really my part to really say, because I don't know much about Gillespie. I mean, I know that he works on our boat. She did mention they previously dated. I don't know how, for how long.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she tell you anything about if there was any, like, emotional abuse or physical abuse or anything like that between the two of them?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. I know she was basically saying, like, how much money she spent basically on him paying for all his shit. He never done shit for her and so on. I know she mentioned--I think the thing that really like blew her over is how she said that she recently paid him $500 for a lawyer.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And from there I was like, that's crazy because I told him that he could have got a public defender for the--the--he was going to court for speeding.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And I remember previously talking to him that week about that, because I said he could have got a public defender, and I guess that blew her because she basically told him the same thing, and I guess he didn't listen to her and got a lawyer anyway. So, she spent $500 helping him pay for a lawyer.

SA GOKEY: Damn. She seems nice. I wouldn't do that.

CSSN COPELAND: Right.

SA GOKEY: Absolutely not. Sorry. Okay.

Anything else you know about the relationship?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't really know much about Gil. So, that's as far as--that's----

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: ----everything that I know.

SA GOKEY: Okay. From your own perception, do--what do you think of Gil?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like I said, I don't really know him that much.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, it's like, I can't really say what I know about him.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I've had a couple conversations to him, but I don't know him as a person, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you couldn't say if, like, he's mean or nice or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, from the conversations I had with him, he's--he's cool. Like, that's all I can say. I don't know him as a person, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Just asking mainly because you know, she--he's an ex-boyfriend, so.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I don't really know what they get into for their relationship, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. Okay. What about this ex-boyfriend from Texas? Do you know anything about that person?

CSSN COPELAND: That was my first time ever meeting, talking to him, seeing him, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What'd he look like?

CSSN COPELAND: He was kind of like my complexion.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Pretty much the same color. Same like, build. I believe he had dreads.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did--did you hear like a nickname or his name by chance?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And you saw him, so was she FaceTiming him?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, they were FaceTiming. Okay. All right. Okay.

So, then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: After what?

SA GOKEY: I guess, after you guys got off the phone with the ex-boyfriend from Texas.

CSSN COPELAND: She went on a, like, rampage calling other people and just talking about how Gilispe's not shit.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And when you say, rampage, I'm asking just because I want to--I want to understand like her mindset right then, like her--her mental capacity at that point.

Like, can you describe to me what that means to you?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, she was just calling other people.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And just talking about how Gil's not shit.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was she pissed off and cussing, or was she crying? Was she just like, you know, just kind of flailing around? Anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, she was like, she was cooling, but she--at the same time, you could tell that she's getting like agitated.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like I said, like, after we were talking, she mentioned that she spent $500. That's what blew her because she was, like, not only did I mention that, but she also told him, and on top of him telling her that, or, like, her telling him that, somebody else told her the same thing about getting a public defender, so.

It's just like she felt like he lied to him, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: All right. So, I mean, in your opinion--I know you might not know him--do you think he was using her for money?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't--I'm not--it's not my part. I don't know him, so.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. No. That's fine.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: So, I was, like, in your opinion--if you don't know, you don't know, okay? So, do you know who all she was calling?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am. The only person that I saw, or that I knew, was her ex-boyfriend, which she introduced me to.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, just the Texas guy?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you didn't know who else she called?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So. All right. So, then, what else happened?

CSSN COPELAND: From there, after she started making phone calls, like, she started getting emotional, started crying, and shit. From there, I just sat on the couch, you know, I was just like, all right, bro. Like, you just had her moment.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You were sitting on the couch. Where was she sitting?

CSSN COPELAND: She was sitting on the floor, like right in front of the table.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: From there, she was still crying, and then my other roommate, the Mexican one that's also across the room, he walked in, and he was just asking, is everything cool? And I was like, yeah, bro. I was like, she's just having her moment. And I was like--I was like, she's--she's going to be good. And then he was like, all right. Cool. And he walked in the room, and I guess, I don't know. He just walked in the room and just kept it pushing.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, he didn't really get involved?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Nah. He was just making sure if everything was good, and I told him, yeah, she's fine. Like, she just had some shit happen, so. She's just having her moment right now.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And he was like, all right. Cool. And he was like, if y'all need something, just come, let me know. I was like, all right. Back at cha.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: And from there, that's when the night started ending. Like, I was like, cool. I'm going to go to sleep. And she was like, all right. Cool. So, she came and went to sleep with me.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Where did you guys go to sleep?

CSSN COPELAND: My bed.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, then your bed. Okay. And she slept with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Did you guys have sex?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then what happened? What was the next thing you remember?

CSSN COPELAND: I went to sleep.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And then from there, that's when my chief came and knocked on the door the next day.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And what chief was that, again?

CSSN COPELAND: FCC Parker.

SA GOKEY: Parker. Okay. Do you remember about what time he knocked on the door?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was the sun out or was it still dark?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. The sun was out.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then walk me through what happened next?

CSSN COPELAND: He knocked on the door, and then I could hear somebody fidgeting with the doorknob. So, I thought it was my roommate because usually if I lock the door, if I close the door, he would just knock on the door until I wake up. So, I was like, hold on.

So, I woke up, and chief was there, and I was like, oh. I was like, good morning chief. And he was like, you having a late morning, like a late start? I was like, yeah. And he was like, is [redacted] here? I was, like, yeah, she's right there. He saw her. He was like, all right. Cool. And that's when he was asking like, do I got a ride to work and everything? And I was like, at the moment, like, my roommate, he can take me whenever he gets off work. And he was like, all right. Cool.

He was like, just make sure you call CS1 or whatever and let him know, like, you're heading to work and everything. I was like, all right. Cool.

So, my roommate, he still never came through like when he was supposed to get off. So, I--I didn't go to work and I was just like, fuck it. I didn't go to work.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's when everything processed through, all the way up to Saturday, when CS1 and chief told me I was marked UA.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: But I feel like it was all a misunderstanding because obviously, I had the weekend off, but I guess that's how the military is. If you are marked UA or whatever the day I wasn't present, it still builds up until I actually go in and basically----

SA GOKEY: And show face.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, how many days did you get marked UA then?

CSSN COPELAND: Thursday, Friday, I think it was four. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday. Yeah. Sunday, around like the evening time, I came and I went to the CDO, and from there the CO is--was like, yeah, your mom called and she was worried [inaudible 00:39:26]. I didn't know about that part either, so.

I was like, yeah, I was like, I'm here. So, he told me I just got to standby until, until they can get somebody to basically do a urinalysis on me.

So, I waited, and then they ended up calling my MA1 because they couldn't find whatever they needed to find for her to get my sample. So, I waited until she got to the ship.

She got there. She got my information, and then after that, I did urinalysis. And then from there, they said I was good to leave.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. So, then, you said you were marked UA Thursday through Sunday?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, then what were you doing Friday?

CSSN COPELAND: I was at home.

SA GOKEY: At the barracks?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What were you doing?

CSSN COPELAND: In the lounge.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did you go anywhere?

CSSN COPELAND: I never left the building.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. What about Saturday?

CSSN COPELAND: I was also in the lounge. I was just in the barracks.

SA GOKEY: In your lounge? In your bedroom or in your----

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, in the building.

SA GOKEY: Oh, gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, I think my roommate knows by now, I don't really fuck with him. Like, ever since I've been in the barracks, I either sleep on the couch or whenever he is not in the room, that's when I'm in the room.

Obviously, when he goes to the room, I go into the living room or outside the room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, the one that you share a space with?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You--you guys don't get along?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He's just fucking filthy.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, it--it fucking irritates me every day that I have to go into a room with another grown man--you don't shower, you don't maintain yourself.

SA GOKEY: Gross.

CSSN COPELAND: And it came up until, I believe, yesterday morning, when his CO came to inspect the room and basically saw how shitty and fucked up his side was, that he had to fully deep clean the entire room.

It just annoys and irritates me that I have to live with someone like that, so.

SA GOKEY: No.

CSSN COPELAND: I go to the front desk every day. Like, they can't really move him because he's in a squadron. All right. Cool.

They offered if I wanted to move, but I told them, yeah, and--with just with me working my hours, I couldn't move because obviously when I had work, I wouldn't been able to move out within the timeframe they gave me, so.

They gave me like a timeframe. It was like three days or something. So, I couldn't switch rooms. So, it was what it was, but it just irritates me.

I think my roommate should know by now, like, whenever he's up or in the room, I'm outside the room or I'm in the living room. Whenever I go to sleep, I either go to my homeboy's room, or I go somewhere else, or I sleep on the couch.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Sometimes I sleep in the room because I'm--I'm just exhausted and tired, and--yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I don't blame you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It is--it annoys me, and he's older than I am.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. How old is he? Do you know?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe he's like, 21.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Or 22, something like that.

MS. BEA: Yeah. It's just gross.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. I would not be able to handle living in a situation like that. I would lose my mind.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, it is what it is. At the end of the day, I mean, deployment is the same way.

SA GOKEY: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: The fact that you're on land, you have all the time in the world to take a shower, clean up, do what you need to do, but he just chooses not to.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know why. It's----

SA GOKEY: Some people weren't raised right. Okay.

So, that Saturday, you were in a lounge in the barracks. Do you know which lounge?

CSSN COPELAND: I was like, on the third floor--fifth floor.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you were on both of them, or, you know----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Cool. Were you with anybody in there?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I was by myself.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do they have TVs in there or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha. Okay.

So, then Sunday, what were you doing?

CSSN COPELAND: I was also in the lounge.

SA GOKEY: Of the barracks?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's when I went to go take a shit, and I went to--I was taking a shit, and I heard somebody knock on the door, and I believe it was Ms. Mary's voice, and she asked who was in here, and I said, Copeland. And she was like, okay.

A couple minutes later, I heard somebody else like, trying to get in. I was like, I'm taking a shit. But he asked if he could come in here. I was like, bro, I'm taking a shit. He was like, all right. Cool.

And I believe like three, five minutes after that, that's when I believe the MAs came knocking on the door, asking--telling me to basically come out. From there, I was just like, what the fuck?

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: After that, I told him, just lemme wipe my ass. I got up, washed my hands, and everything. Cool. Walked out, and he was basically asking, do you know why I'm here?

I was like, yeah, because my chief texted me this morning saying basically--or the morning before that I was marked UA. And they were like, all right.

And from there, they weren't really saying much, but I guess, they were just asking me questions, like, more about myself, like, who--like, where I'm from and shit. Like, what school I graduated from, what sports and stuff do I play.

And then from there, the MA that was talking to me had left, went downstairs to go find his chief. And then from there, I was just upstairs talking to the two--the other MAs that were there.

After that, we walked down there. And from there, they basically talked to their chief, whatever. And he basically told me, just go check in to my command because obviously, I'm marked UA and to not make things worse on myself than what it already is, so.

I was like, all right. Cool. And I was like, I'll go do that. So, after that, I called my chief, and I was like--I [inaudible 00:46:15] asking my chief like, should I go basically to the barge right now with the time that it is right now? Or should I just wait till Monday when I have work?

And my chief was basically saying, it doesn't really make a difference. He said it would be--it could be better if I just go now, so it can be up and out the way. And he was like--he was saying, it's not really going to make a difference though because even if I do go Monday, it's going to be the same thing.

So, I was like, all right. Cool. And I hung up, and I put on my uniform, and I went to the barge. And then from there, that's when they did urinalysis and everything.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

So, your chief texted you Saturday and told you you were UA?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Why didn't you go in then?

CSSN COPELAND: because I was off. I already--I already told him. He asked the same thing. I was just like, if I'm off, then I'm off.

I mean, I read that you marked me UA. Cool. But if I'm off, like, they already know I'm not going to answer my phone. Like, even my CS2s, when they call, if I'm off, I'm not answering the phone.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you thought you were just off and not being marked as UA for the days you originally had off?

CSSN COPELAND: I--yeah. I didn't know what UA fully was, obviously, up until now. And they basically told me, cool.

So, if I'm marked UA, I'm just thinking, all right. When I go in Monday, they're just going to ask me basically what happened over the weekend, or why didn't I come in?

I didn't know that it keeps continuously going every day until I go and check in.

SA GOKEY: [Affirmative response.]

002531_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Until the MAs basically came in and told me that, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did command or the MAs ever come knocking on the door, like, Thursday or Friday, or Saturday?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. I was--I wasn't home at the time if they did come in.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So.

SA GOKEY: So, then where were you?

CSSN COPELAND: In the lounge.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha. Okay. But you were in the building somewhere?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Is there anybody that I can talk to to verify that you were in the lounges? Did anybody see you? Any friends, any passerby?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, shit if--whoever was there. I mean, you could talk to Ms. Mary.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: She walked in the lounge. I was on the fifth floor. She asked if I was good. I told her, yes, ma'am. I just told her--she walked by again and asked if everything was good. I told her, yeah. I just told her I didn't want to be in my room.

She obviously knows the state of my roommate.

SA GOKEY: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: because she was literally the only person that I went to every time I had an issue with my roommate. So, she can vouch and say the same thing, because I honestly do not like my roommate.

SA GOKEY: That's fair.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, he's a cool person. Like, he's a--he's a caring person, but it's just the way that he lives. I don't--I--I can't--like, I can't accept that.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: It's just filthy. Like, I respect him as a person, everything you do, cool. It's just the way that he lives as a person, it's filthy.

SA GOKEY: That's fair. That's fair. Okay.

So, Ms. Mary saw you the whole weekend in one of the lounges?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not going to say the whole weekend.

SA GOKEY: Well, I'm sorry. Like, one of the days or one of the times of these?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Anybody else?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

I mean, there was another dude that was in the lounge with us at the time, but I don't know him.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I'm sorry. I'm just picking up. You say with us. Were--was it just you and that other person, or were there like multiple people?

CSSN COPELAND: So, when I say us, it's like, it was me and another dude. We were inside the lounge, and at the time, they made him come into the lounge because they were people, like the workers there. They were cleaning the floor. They were waxing the floor. So, they made him come inside the lounge until they were done waxing the floor.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: But you don't know who that person is?

CSSN COPELAND: I've never seen him a day in my life.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Okay.

And then--so, then you guys go--do you go do your analysis? Who took you to do that?

CSSN COPELAND: So, when I walked in, one of my homeboys was--he was on watch and I was like, what's good, bro? He was like, what's good? And I was like, can you call the CDO for me? And he didn't know how to call the CDO. So, he walked into one of the--he walked into like, this little area. It's like when you first walk into the barge and he asked for one of the chiefs.

And he was like, chief, do you think you could help me call for the CDO? And that's when one of the chiefs walked out, and he was like, you can't call for the CDO, like on the radio----

SA GOKEY: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: ----so, because it goes straight to the ship. And he was like, what do you need the CDO for? And then that's when I walked up and I was like, I need the CDO. And he was like, oh, okay.

And he picked up on his radio. He was like, CDO--he was like, CSSN Copeland here. And I guess like, basically, just telling him that I'm here to check in. So, he was like, give him a minute, he's going to head down.

From there, the CDO came down, it was a--it was, I believe, a lieutenant. And from there, he was talking to me, and he was basically saying that my mom said she hasn't heard from me. So, she called the base, and then she also called my command.

And from there, that's when they did the welfare check and everything. So, the lieutenant was basically telling me, my mom, and everything was worried. And I was like, yeah. I was like, she was, because obviously when I called her she was.

SA GOKEY: Your momma was mad at you?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. So, I was--I was just letting him know that she was irritated.

Well, she wasn't irritated. She was just worried and mad, so. Yeah. So, then from there, he was basically saying, he's going to get somebody to go do your analysis.

So, he told me just to hang tight, and I was like, all right. So, he left to go basically find the urinalysis, and that's when me and the chief was talking. We were just talking about how he used to be a CS.

And then from there, I was just telling him how I wanted to cross rate because me personally, I don't like being a CS, and I don't think I can do like a full--like, my whole entire life is just being a CS.

So, I was talking to him about cross rating--being another rate, and he pulled me into like his little office and he pulled up like my ASVAB score. And he was basically saying, if I study whoopie woo, I can cross rate and become something else, like a yeoman.

We were also talking about like CBs. And then from there, the officer was basically saying, MA1 one was on the way because they couldn't find where the sample holder was for me to take urinalysis.

So, from there, I was just waiting for MA1 to come. Eventually, MA1 showed up and she told me to go downstairs with her. It was the same class that was there. And the lieutenant--the CDO walked into the office where we first were. And I believe the chief followed down. He went downstairs with us, and from there, everyone asked for my CAC, and she was just taking notes down and everything, jotting everything down from my CAC.

And from there, she waited. I guess she was like filling out a piece of paper, and from there she took my chief. Or not my chief, but the chief basically walked me upstairs to go pee. I went pee. Went back downstairs, gave her the bottle, and from there she gave me back my CAC and said I was good to go.

And then, with chief and the CDO, I both verified--they both made me verify, when I had to come back to work, and I was basically saying, chief told me Monday.

So, I called chief to verify when I left. And he was just saying, just come Monday, 7:30. And I was like, yes, chief.

SA GOKEY: Okay. How did you get to the ship?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate drove me.

SA GOKEY: Okay. The same roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was anybody else with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Our other roommate, that was in the room with him. We went to get--he took me to the ship, and then afterwards we went to his Chipotle.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: We went home after.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And you guys--you stayed at the room the rest of the night then?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

So, you didn't leave at all after you guys had gone to the ship, Chipotle came back. Nobody--or excuse me. Not nobody leaves.

You never left again?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then, presumably, you went up--got up and went to work the next morning?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Who took you to work?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate.

SA GOKEY: Your roommate.

Is he on the same ship as you?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Whew. That man is a nice human. Where's he work? Do you know?

CSSN COPELAND: He works on base.

SA GOKEY: On this base?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

002538_COPELAND

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

MS. BEA: I'm sorry. Is this the stinky roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Different roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Which one are we talking about?

CSSN COPELAND: The black African dude across.

MS. BEA: Black African dude. And your stinky roommate is which guy?

CSSN COPELAND: Sean.

MS. BEA: Sean. And what does he look like?

CSSN COPELAND: He's white.

MS. BEA: White dude. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Just want to make sure I'm keeping everybody straight. Okay. And the person that drove you around pretty much every time we talked about is your African dude, roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. Perfect. Thank you.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you have anything else right now?

MS. BEA: Yeah. I'm sorry. I know you got a ton of questions. I'm going to go back.

So, I know that you probably discussed a lot of this with Jess, like prior to me getting involved, right? So, I just wanted to make sure I understood.

So, what was your relationship with [redacted]? So, like, I know you said y'all didn't have sex that night, right? But I mean, like, were y'all talking, were you like getting to the point where you're going to be talking?

CSSN COPELAND: We just worked together.

MS. BEA: How long did you know her, like prior to her coming over?

CSSN COPELAND: Ever since I checked into the James E. Williams. On top of that, we went to A School together.

MS. BEA: Oh. Okay. So, you guys go way back?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, she's a CS as well?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it.

So, did you guys like hang out in A School? Like, essentially, what I'm asking is like, it sounds like you guys were pretty tight.

CSSN COPELAND: Nah. I mean, at A School, we just knew of each other. When I checked into the James E. Williams, we hung out a couple times, and yeah.

We hung out with a couple other people. I remember we would go out sometimes. We would go to--we went to Dave and Buster's. We went to Dirty Buffalo.

So, there's been previous times where we've hung out before. We hung out when she came over.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, would you say you guys are just like platonic friends, or was there like a romantic interest there?

CSSN COPELAND: There was never a romantic interest.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. So, that's like way out of left field type scenario. You're just friends.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Understood. Okay.

So, you've known her for--for a while. So, you said that, you know, we already beat the whole salsa thing to death for certain. But you said that you guys were talking after you ate, and you mentioned something about--what's his name, Gilispe, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, I got confused. So, you said you saw him picking up a girl on his motorcycle. Tell me more about that.

CSSN COPELAND: He told me, like, that he was at work, and I was sitting down, and obviously, we were talking. The ship's not big, so.

MS. BEA: It is not.

002541_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. We were sitting there talking, and he was basically saying how we picked up a female in his car and so on. Like, he was basically saying like, he didn't really say much. He picked her up.

Like, she was--well, she was in her car. It was two females, and a female asked him in the passenger seat, how fast did your bike go? And he basically nodded and said, come find out yourself.

So, she hopped on his bike and she drove down the street, or not she, but he drove down the street with her, and then from there he picked up her number and they've been talking ever since.

But [redacted], she initially got mad because--I'm guess--I'm guessing, the day that he was with the female, he was asking for his--his--helmet back that he bought [redacted]. And [redacted] was basically asking him like, why do you want the helmet? And he was basically saying like, because it brings back all the times, like, all the places they've could have gone together, this, that, the third.

And she basically just went off about the helmet, like, what does he specifically need the helmet for? And they were going on back and forth.

And then from there, he was just like, he cut it, and he was like, fuck it. Like, you could just keep the helmet.

MS. BEA: Did this all happen on Thursday night, did you say----

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: ----or this is Wednesday?

CSSN COPELAND: No. That--no. That was like the night that she came over. Like, she was basically telling me about that.

MS. BEA: Oh. Okay. So, she started talking to you about that whole shit?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But I'm saying, like with Gillespie and the female driving.

MS. BEA: Got it.

CSSN COPELAND: That was--that was when he told me when I was at work, the same day that she came over.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. So, let me make sure I have it right. So, when she came over, at some point, she started talking about Gillespie. Was she just like talking about her relationship, and were they still dating at the time, or they had already broken up?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. I----

MS. BEA: It's messy. Okay. And then, she was like telling you about an argument that she had with Gillespie about this motorcycle helmet, and you were like, oh, well, Gillespie told me----

CSSN COPELAND: No. So, she was talking about Gillespie, and she had mentioned something about him and a female, and I was like, that's crazy because so and so, and that's when I started talking about when you told me at work about the female.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And she was like, no fucking way you said that because he basically texted me the day that basically, I told him about her--told her about it.

She was--basically, put two and two together. And the same day that he was talking to the female was the same day that he was asking for the bike helmet back.

MS. BEA: Oh. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: I get it now. All right. And that really pissed her off, and it sounds like she--yeah. Flipped out about that. Okay.

So, she texted Gillespie, and she was like, fuck off or wherever--whatever, something like that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: And then you said that she called her--oh, I'm sorry. Did she call her boyfriend in--ex-boyfriend in Texas before or after that?

CSSN COPELAND: After that.

MS. BEA: After that. Okay. And so, it sounds like--I mean, she was probably--was she talking to her ex-boyfriend about stuff with Gillespie?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. When did she like lose it, lose it? Because you said that she was like on the ground, crying. Everything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Like, after she got done calling everyone. Like, after she got off the phone with her ex-boyfriend. Cool. Then she just started calling other people, and I guess she just lost it. Like, she was just done calling people, and she was just like, she was done.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I was just like, cool. And that's when I sat there and just let her have her moment, and I was like, all right, bro.

MS. BEA: Was she drinking?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She had like a shot or two of buzz ball. But then again, Buzz Ball's not strong. So, I don't----

MS. BEA: I don't know what buzz ball is.

SA GOKEY: You don't know what buzz ball is?

MS. BEA: I'm so sorry. Oh, is that like the balls you see at the liquor store? Okay, my bag. Sorry. As we've talked about multiple times in the past, I'm pretty old. Okay.

So, she had like a shot or two out of the buzz ball?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Would you consider her to be drunk? I mean, have you seen her drunk before?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She was--I've never seen her drunk, but I don't think she was drunk because she was totally impaired of everything that she was doing, so.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it.

CSSN COPELAND: She was aware of everything she was doing.

MS. BEA: Okay. What do you mean when you say that?

CSSN COPELAND: Say what?

MS. BEA: Like, that she was aware of everything that she was doing.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, obviously, if somebody's drunk, you can tell if somebody's drunk because like, obviously, if they're having like a speech impediment or----

MS. BEA: Can't walk.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: So, like, when I say, she was visible and aware of everything she was doing, like she was obviously, like, you can tell there were no symptoms, that she was drunk.

MS. BEA: Got it. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: And let me see here. I have a bunch of questions written down. Okay. I just want to make sure I understood the timeline a little bit.

So, you were like, all right. Well, I'm going to go to sleep, and she came into the room with you. Was your roommate in there at the time?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe so. Shit. I dunno because by the time I woke up, everybody was gone.

MS. BEA: Was this Wednesday night into Thursday morning?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe so.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, you said, when you woke up, everybody was gone? Where--I never figured out where was she?

CSSN COPELAND: She was in my bed.

MS. BEA: She was in your bed? She hadn't left yet?

CSSN COPELAND: No. My chief was there.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: When he walked in, he saw her. Cool. And he told me, all right. When I'm obviously done and everything, he told me, just get ready for work and head to work.

MS. BEA: Here's what I'm confused about, too. Why didn't Chief just drive you to work? You didn't go back there anyway, right? Did he offered----

CSSN COPELAND: No. That's--no. He should have. That's why I was pissed off because they fucking marked me UA.

MS. BEA: Right.

CSSN COPELAND: That's the thing that, like, I don't know, because he--I feel like he set me for failure. I told--I fucking told him that, bro.

MS. BEA: Did you ask him for a ride? And he was like, no.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I--I feel like I should have offered, like, I should have been like, can I get a ride to work?

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: But then again, like, I feel like, he knows, obviously, I don't have a car, so.

MS. BEA: Right. Yeah. That doesn't make any sense. Okay. So, it just doesn't make sense, period.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: It's not just to me, it doesn't make sense. It just doesn't sense.

CSSN COPELAND: But like, he--like, he was also saying when he called me, he was just saying it was just a big miscommunication about me being UA.

So, I was like, all right. Cool. But I still was like a little irritated with the fact that it just--like, they marked me UA and like they made it this big fucking deal, this issue. I'm like, cool. I just left how it was.

I'm not finna argue. I'm not finna start a hissy fit or nothing. At the end of the day, I was UA. Cool. I'm going to own up to it. So.

MS. BEA: Okay. And [redacted] was also UA with you, right? Like, essentially--because you know, are you both on the same schedule?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Was she supposed to be at work on Thursday as well?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She worked Friday and the weekend.

MS. BEA: Oh, I see.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: So, she was off.

CSSN COPELAND: We were opposite watch bill. So, when I'm working, she's not working. When she's working, I'm not working.

MS. BEA: And can you help me understand, are you on days all the time, or do you still have to work nights on the barge? Do you know what I mean?

You know how the carrier's like 24 hours?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah, but no.

MS. BEA: No. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, our schedule's like, obviously, you come in on a turnover day, 7:30.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And you work 7:30 and we get off around 17, which is like what, 5, 6, 7, 5:30, 5:40.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, it's pretty much 7:30 to five in the evening?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. And then--so, she was supposed to be off. Was she at work on Wednesday? The day y'all had the conversation about the salsa?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was a turnover day.

MS. BEA: That was turnover. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: So, you came in and was she there as well?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes. Every turnover day, both watch supposed to be there.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. And then she was supposed to be off, I would assume, like, you know, from Wednesday until Thursday, and she was supposed to go back to work on Friday?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. Thank you for helping me understand that.

And, so, after chief woke y'all up--I mean, how did she seem that morning?

CSSN COPELAND: She was fine.

MS. BEA: She was fine. When did she leave?

CSSN COPELAND: After Chief had left. Like, an hour or two later. I was just--she was just helping me clean, and then from there we left. And then that's when I called Chief, or I didn't call him, but I was just telling him--I texted him.

I was like, when my roommate gets here, I'll go to work. He never showed up. He got there by the time I got off work. So, from there, I didn't think to call or text. At the end of the day, I didn't show up. All right. Cool.

MS. BEA: Where did [redacted] go?

CSSN COPELAND: She went back home.

MS. BEA: Where did she live at?

CSSN COPELAND: On base.

MS. BEA: Same place or somewhere different?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Somewhere different. I think it is like, from this building, it's down the street.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I believe so.

MS. BEA: Did she walk? Did somebody come pick her up? Did she mention anything about how she was going to get back?

CSSN COPELAND: Getting a Uber.

MS. BEA: A Uber. On base?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. They got a zTrip.

MS. BEA: Oh, yeah. Not that they can't get on base, it's just kind of like she didn't want to walk.

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, the zTrip. It's on base teleportation. It's an Uber.

MS. BEA: I see. Okay. Got it.

Do you remember what time that was that you saw her last?

CSSN COPELAND: After chief left, and then after she got ready and everything and she helped me clean up my room.

MS. BEA: This might be a dumb question, but cleaning up how?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, the mess that was left in the living room.

MS. BEA: From what?

CSSN COPELAND: The food.

MS. BEA: From the food?

CSSN COPELAND: Cleaning up.

MS. BEA: Okay. Well, I just didn't--I don't know what type of mess y'all make. So, like, the messy kitchen type scenario?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: The food--there was food left out. We didn't throw none of the food away. So, everything was sitting on the countertop, on the stove, the pans and pots, and everything. There was dishes in the sink.

So, he was like, y'all need to get that cleaned up because obviously, if he's coming to inspect, that's unsat. If you have trash into the trash can, it's unsat. You have to take the trash out every day.

MS. BEA: Who's coming to inspect? I'm sorry.

CSSN COPELAND: My chief.

MS. BEA: I didn't know that part. Keep in mind, I didn't talk to you to begin with, right. So----

CSSN COPELAND: I believe I said that already. When he came into the room, he said like, he was coming to inspect.

MS. BEA: I didn't know that part. Okay.

So, he was coming into inspect, because why?

CSSN COPELAND: Monthly inspection.

MS. BEA: Oh. I've never lived in the barracks, and I've never been in the Navy. You know that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: I'm just trying to ask questions. Okay.

So, he was coming in to inspect.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Did he tell you that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He didn't text, call, nothing. He just came in. But like I said, I was asleep, and when I heard like the fidget on the door, I thought it was my roommate. So, I said, hold up. I got up, opened the door, it's my chief.

MS. BEA: Okay. And this is the same time he came and woke y'all up when you like, were supposed to be at work, and he was like, late day. You got a late start or something like that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, he was supposed to come by anyway to inspect. He just didn't tell you he was going to do that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't--I don't know. I don't know if it was because either I was late or if he actually was coming to do a room inspection.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: At the end of the day, that's above my pay grade. Chief is the chief. I'm not going to argue with the chief. So.

MS. BEA: Okay. Did he say he was--okay.

Like, I wasn't there. Right. So, keep in mind, when I'm asking these questions, just because I wasn't there.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Did he say like, I'm going to come back and inspect? Did he say--did he walk in and he was like, this room's a mess. You got to clean up before you come to work. Like, how did that go? How did you know that this was like an inspection?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, when he woke up, he was just like, is it a late start? I was like, yeah. Cool.

I mean, obviously, on top of that, if you're supposed to be at work, you're supposed to have the room clean if you leave. So, regardless, you're supposed to have everything clean. But he was basically saying, I need to clean up, and when I'm done cleaning head--head to work.

So, I was like, all right. Cool. And then he was like, do you have a way of getting to work? And that's when I went to--I mentioned my roommate. I was like, my roommate, when he gets off work, he could probably take me. And he was like, all right. Cool.

When you get off work--when he gets off work, then just head to work. Make sure you call CS1 and somebody and notify them.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's when I was like, all right. Cool. I got you.

MS. BEA: Got it. So, she helped clean. And then did you like--did she just like leave straight out of your room? Did you like walk her down to the front? Like, how did that go?

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, I had to start getting ready for work, and I called my roommate, and he didn't answer. All right. Cool. So, I just waited until he got to the room. By the time he got there, I was just like, fuck it. I'm not--I'm not going because by the time he got there, we were--they were already off work.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not finna go into work, like, who am I supposed to check into? So, I was just like, all right. Cool. And I left it. I let the days pass by until Saturday hit and they texted me saying, I'm UA.

At that point, I'm not finna argue. I was just like, fuck it bro. I'll just go in Monday. And then, obviously, all that shit happened Sunday. So, I had to go in, and that's when I went in.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, to be really clear with you, like normally, you know, being UA is not a crime that NCIS investigates, right? We're really worried about [redacted], which is, you know, why we want to talk to you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: So, you know, like all of the background is appreciated. I just, you know, I really want to know more about [redacted] as far as, like, what was her mental state when she left.

Like, do you have any information that would be helpful for us to find her? Like, did she say that she was like not doing well? Did she say she was sad she was going to go somewhere?

CSSN COPELAND: She was fine. If you want to know more about her mental health, I'd probably say go to Mitch or Gillespie because, obviously, Gillespie had all the answers when he talked to me the other day, so.

MS. BEA: What do you mean by that?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm just saying, like he had everything, like, he was just saying, like, he was saying she liked to go on walks, saying that she wanted to buy plane tickets, this, that, the third.

He was basically stating how, when he would talk to her, he'd be like, randomly, what do you want to do? She would be like, I want to buy a plane ticket to so and so. Cool.

So, out of anything, I don't really know what [redacted] does. Cool. I just wanted to hang out. Cool. Obviously, it went bad because she had an attitude with Gillespie. They're not on good terms, or they got into an argument. Cool.

But out of anything, Mitch and Gillespie knows more than what I do about [redacted] because, obviously, they've been in relationships with her.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And they know her as a person. I don't fully know her as a person.

MS. BEA: Okay. And, you know, I'm getting that you're saying that you don't know her as well as a person.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Like, fully understand that. It's just that I think, you know, be like, you might have been the last person to see her that we've talked to. Unless there's somebody else that saw her after you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Like, that's why I'm asking you. Did she say she had plans to go meet somebody else? Was she like, I'm just going to go back to my room and sleep?

Like, anything you have would be helpful for us.

CSSN COPELAND: It was just like, I'll see you later. All right. Cool. If you need something, just call or text me. All right. I got you.

MS. BEA: Okay. Was she still crying when she left, or she seemed like she was fine?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She was cool.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, like, if you go to sleep after having a bad night, usually if you go to sleep and you wake up, you're fine.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Well, that's just how I see it. I'm not going to speak for her.

MS. BEA: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, if you're holding your emotions, you can hold your emotions. Cool. But from the talk that I had and when I--when she woke up and shit before she left, she said, I was just like, have a good day. If you need something, just call her, text me. And she was like, all right. And she left.

MS. BEA: And then did you hear from her again after she left?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah. Until I got back, and then my chief was basically saying we're both marked UA.

And then from there, that's when I texted her and I was like, yo, like are you good? I was like, they just barked--they marked me and you, UA. And then I was just like--I think I asked her to call or text me if she get the text or whatever. She never responded.

And then, I was talking to Gillespie when I went to the ship, fucking--the day that I went Sunday. And he was basically asking if I heard anything from her after that. I was like, nah. But I was just telling him like, if--like, when she left, like, if she needed something, just to call or text me, and he was like, all right. Cool.

After that, like, we just left it as that until, obviously, I went to work the next day, and he was just like talking about it and shit. I was just like, all right, bro.

MS. BEA: What kind of stuff was he saying?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, obviously, the stuff I was talking about, how she liked to go on walks, and she wanted to put plane--like, plane tickets and shit.

Like, he was asking me basically what you guys are asking me, like if she, like, said anything, like she wanted to go anywhere. I was like, nah.

Like, she was--I was like, I don't know what you did, but she was mainly just talking about how you fucked up, bro. I was like, I don't know what the fuck you did, like what the hell you told her, what you guys [inaudible 01:16:37] head up into? But I was like, "Bro, I was like, bro, you had her crying and shit. She was just mad as fuck at you." He was like, "Yeah, she text me so on." And I was like, "All right, bro." I was like, "I don't know what you did, but that's between y'all, bro."

Like--and people--like, most people already know, like, I don't like getting involved in other people's bullshit--like, what ya'll got going on is what ya'll got going on. I'm not fin'to get myself involved. As you already know, I like to [inaudible 01:17:04]. I don't roll with that shit. After that situation, I just been chilling obviously until shit like this happens. They asked if they want to come over. I'm being a nice guy. Cool. And shit like that happens.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. I mean, you seem like, you feel like a certain type of way because shit like you--you're involved even though you don't want to be.

I mean, you got any type of feelings about that?

002560_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: No. I mean, it's like I can't do shit about it. Like, obviously, if I'm pulled into the bullshit, I'm pulled into the bullshit. There's no way I can get myself out of it. And once you're in, you're in.

I'm not going to sit here, nick and nag about it. At the end of the day, I allowed her to come over. She did what she did. That's just me being the nice guy, and now I'm involved in the bullshit. It's not shit I can do to get myself out of it. Cool.

SA GOKEY: Did you--that like, she ever mention if she had any type of like mental health struggles or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: She didn't mention it, or she did like----

CSSN COPELAND: She never said anything about that.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Got it.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, another thing that you mentioned that I wanted to chat about is you said that your roommate, Skipper, came by--the CO came by, and like, had him clean the room, and like it was nasty.

Did I mishear that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Your nasty roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Did you say his CO came and inspected it? The room?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: When did that happen?

CSSN COPELAND: I think yesterday. Yeah. I think it was yesterday.

MS. BEA: Okay. And if you don't know, it's okay. Do you know what command he's with?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He is in a squadron.

MS. BEA: Squadron. You know what type of squadron? Are we talking helicopters, jets?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I don't--I dunno.

MS. BEA: That's okay if you don't know.

CSSN COPELAND: Because his--his command is decommissioning soon. So--yeah. When his command decommissions, he's going on the deployment with the new squadron that's attached to the FORD. So, that's the only thing that I know about his squadron.

MS. BEA: That's kind of positive. Right. They'll be gone.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, cool. But eventually, it's--somebody going to replace them.

MS. BEA: Hopefully, they're cleaner.

CSSN COPELAND: Hopefully.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, yesterday is when--if we think, the Squadron CO came by and, like, made him clean everything. Like, clean the room really well and everything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was like mainly just his side and shit.

MS. BEA: Okay. Okay. And then the other thing--I know I already asked you. I just wanted to clarify. When you said that your roommate drove you to the barge on Sunday, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Did he wait around with you until you were done doing your urinalysis and everything, and then that's when y'all went to Chipotle? Or like----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: ----did he come back?

CSSN COPELAND: He stayed there, but he can't--obviously, he can't go on to the ship. So, he stayed in the car. So, like, where I walk is like I need to--my chip is like a reader to a CAC scan for me to enter.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And then from there I walked on, and he stayed, and then I texted him. I was like, just wait like 25 minutes because I got to wait for my MA1 to come. And when she gets here, they're going to make me fucking do urinalysis. And after that, they said, I'm good to go.

So, he was like, okay, bro.

MS. BEA: Okay. And this is the same African dude with the white Jeep?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. Okay. So, we spent a ton of time asking you questions. What do you think is relevant, as far as like, do you have any information that would help us or other people that we should talk to?

I know that they've been doing a lot of investigation and, you know, the name Gillispie and Mitch, sure is not unusual to them, but is there anything else you can think of, because we're really worried?

CSSN COPELAND: That'd be the only two.

I mean, obviously, they go back and forth, and they're so in love with her, so. Obviously, the only two people I would think that actually know [redacted] is Mitch and Gillespie, so.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. Did she--so, sometimes people like mention things and you don't think it's going to be important at the time, but then like, when you think back, you're like, oh, okay.

Is there anything that she might have mentioned to you in the amount of time that she was with you about, you know, like what she wanted to go do, or like, anything that was like indicative of her mental state, anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Even if you don't think it's important.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

MS. BEA: Okay.

Anything else, Jess, because I think we--we'll take a break real quick.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Let's take a break.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Do you need anything?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: You need to use restroom [inaudible 01:22:18] good?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. We'll be right back with you. All right.

CSSN COPELAND: All right.

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 01:22:31.]

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea returned to the room at timestamp 02:05:19.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Sorry about that. Are you good?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You don't need to use the restroom or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, just a couple more things. So, with you going UA, what do you think--do you think the command's going to get pissed off at you? And like anything--like, do you think you're in trouble with them?

CSSN COPELAND: What you mean?

SA GOKEY: Like, do you think they're going to--you're going to---

MS. BEA: Yeah. You're going to----

SA GOKEY: ----put you on restriction or, you know, anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, with me going UA? Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Okay. So, one thing I wanted to pitch is--so, you said with--you told us that you were in the barracks the whole weekend, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: So, it's not like you were out, you know, in another state doing whatever God knows what, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: And a lot of times when Sailors go UA, that's what we're worried about, is you guys are out doing dumb shit, getting arrested, doing dumb things.

Hell, some of them, the defect to frigging North Korea. So, I would like then to look at your phone and place you in the room, and that could potentially maybe help you with your command.

Like, we could pitch it to him like, 'Hey, man, he didn't go to work, but it's not like he was fucking missing or gone or whatever.' Right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

002566_COPELAND

SA GOKEY: You would be cool with that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Cool. What's your passcode?

CSSN COPELAND: 982--wait. [redacted].

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, [redacted]----

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted].

SA GOKEY: ----77. Okay. All right. I'm just going to fill this out real quick. It's June, oh, Lord, have mercy on my soul.

And I spell your name wrong. I'm tired too. J-E-R-M-I-A-H, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: And then Copeland. What kind of phone you got?

CSSN COPELAND: iPhone 15.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Working--86 and 107. So, you said iPhone. I'm sorry, what?

CSSN COPELAND: 15.

SA GOKEY: iPhone 15. Okay. Conducting on June 25, by NCIS. Okey-dokey. All right.

So, I'm going to scoot back over to you and we're going to go over this. All right. So, did I spell your name correct that time?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, I'll read this to you.

So you, Jeremiah Copeland, after being advised by me, Special Agent Jessica Gokey, that the Naval Criminal Investigative Service is conducting an investigation into the Article 86 and 107, which was the two we discussed earlier.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: You have been--have--excuse me. Our goal 86 and 107 have been requested to permit a search of my iPhone 15.

You have been informed of count--of your constitutional right to refuse to permit this search in the absence of a search warrant.

So, what that means is, again, I don't have a search warrant to go into it----

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: ----but you're just giving me permission to go ahead and go into that, okay?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay.

In full understanding of this right, you have nevertheless decided to permit this search to be made. This search may be conducted on 03 June 25 by NCIS, and you hereby give your permission to remove and retain any property or papers found during the search, which are desired for investigative purposes.

You make this decision freely and voluntarily, and is made with no threats having been made or promises extended to you?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. I'll say it again.

Do you--did I--have I threatened you today?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Have I made you any promises?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you agree with this statement?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm going to be able to get my phone back. Like, I got to call my mom.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: It's too much shit going on.

SA GOKEY: No. That's fair. Are you good with signing this?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But is it cool if I can call my mom?

SA GOKEY: Yeah. You want to call your mom?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you want to call her right now?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. Do you want to go ahead and sign that, and then I will----

CSSN COPELAND: Can I wait first?

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Sure. Absolutely.

MS. BEA: Let me--so, just to make sure that everything on the phone is like essentially, pristine, no problem with you calling your mom. I'll give you my phone to do it. You know her number by heart, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. Do you mind if we ask you a couple more questions before we do that, or do you want to just call her right now?

CSSN COPELAND: Go ahead and ask the questions.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Okey-dokey. Okay. So, like I told you earlier, we're conducting a cast in your room, and you do have that roommate that lives in there.

Can you tell me what electronics are his?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, everything that's on his side.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, nothing would be on--nothing on his side would be yours and vice versa?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you have any other additional electronics in that room?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I have another phone. That's my phone that I have to go turn into AT&T.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I got my PS5, and that should be it.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Out in the common room, are there any electronics that stay out there?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, my PS5 is what I was saying. It's also in the living room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, your PS5's out there. Okay.

Is there anything else out there that's yours or anybody else's that you know of?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm mean, the TV.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But the TV's the barracks, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, the PS5 out in the common area is yours, and then you have another phone in your room.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: What kind of phone is that?

CSSN COPELAND: It's an iPhone 15 as well.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know what color it is?

CSSN COPELAND: It's gray.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Is it broken?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It's not broke, but I fucked it up, so I broke it, but I got it fixed. They replaced the front, so I have to go turn it in.

So, they basically gave me like 31 days in order for me to turn it in, or else they're going to charge me for that phone---

SA GOKEY: Oh.

CSSN COPELAND: ----with the one I'm already purchasing, so.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha. Okay. So, it's like a trade thing, so you get to keep----

CSSN COPELAND: It was part of my insurance.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha. Oh, that's nice. Okay. Do you have any, like iPads or laptops?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. What about any--nope. There wasn't a desktop in there. Right? That desktop's his, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.] Yeah. It's an Xbox.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Oh, it's a Xbox. It's just--okay. I got you. Okay. All right. I want to kind of talk about--go back to [redacted] Can I just call her [inaudible 02:13:05]--yeah, [redacted] Just a couple more questions. Okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: I know you're tired.

When she came over to your house, did she--she had her phone, right? What kind of phone does she have?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe it was the same as mine. It was a black iPhone 15.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she have any other electronics?

CSSN COPELAND: She just had her phone.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And she was just wearing that bracelet, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Does she have an Apple watch that you know of?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.] I don't think she's ever had one.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Have you ever had an Apple Watch?

CSSN COPELAND: I do have an Apple Watch.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Where's that at?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe it's in my desk.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. When [redacted] was on the phone with whoever, when she was--I'll use your word on like a rampage, did she--when she was on the phone, did she ever ask anybody to come pick her up or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. I mean, like I said, I was on the couch. I know she did call Rich. And she was on the phone with her ex, but from what I recall, I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

So, you don't recall hearing her tell somebody like, yo, come get me, come pick me up, I want to leave, or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Who--what roommate was it again that walked in and was like, yo, is she good?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know his name, but it is--it's the other one that's across the room. Not the African one, but the other---

SA GOKEY: The other guy?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Cool. Not stinky white boy?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then you guys--when you went to bed, you guys went to bed in your bed?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, I just wanted to clarify that.

So, this--this statement is the true statement, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. True and accurate to the best of your knowledge, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. It says, on--and I might've heard you wrong on Sunday. So, I'm not trying to come at you sideways. Okay. I just want to make sure everything I got it right.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Because on Sunday, I thought you told me that either you had slept on the couch and she slept in the bed, or vice versa.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I must have misspoke or misheard. I apologize. But you guys did sleep together in the bed?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But you guys didn't have sex?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What did you guys wear whenever you went to sleep?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe I had the same thing on. It was just blue shorts and a black shirt.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Is it the same black shirt you got on right now?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, what was she wearing?

CSSN COPELAND: The same thing she had on the whole night.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And what was that again?

CSSN COPELAND: Black shirt, black pants.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, the--another reason why I'm bringing that up, so FCC, we talked to him, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: He has a bit of a different story, right? He said that when he walked into the common space----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: ----that you two were on the ground in front of the couch completely naked.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Is that true?

CSSN COPELAND: When chief walked in, he knocked on the door. So, obviously, when he knocked, I was in my room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you weren't on the floor naked with her?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I was in my room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And she was also in the room with you, though?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes. When I opened the door, she was there.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And he watched her when she was in the bed, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she say anything to him?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She was asleep.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, FCC's not telling the truth?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He is not.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: When he--when I opened my door when he knocked on it, she was asleep. I opened the door, and he's standing right there.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: He asked me was it a late start, and I said, "Yes, Chief."

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. I'm just going back through my notes real quick. Okay.

So, just to reiterate, so, Thursday--Thursday was the day that FCC got to your barracks?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then Friday, Saturday, you sat in the barracks all day?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And went from various lounges?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then Sunday, the MAs got there, knocked on the door, and was like, yo, bro, you're UA?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right.

So then, the Jeep, so you went to go pick [redacted] up, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did you ask permission to take the Jeep at that time?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. He let me.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay. I wasn't sure if, like, maybe he had left the keys on the counter, and he's just like, yo bro, you can use my car whenever, as long as I get to work, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you did ask permission to take those keys?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: To go get her, to bring her back?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then, the next morning, whenever you guys were up--so, you added a couple more details. So, I just want to make sure.

So, you guys got up after FCC was there, and y'all cleaned the room?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then, can you give me an about what time she may have left?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know because I don't even know what time she had came into the room, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, the reason again, I'm asking is because on Sunday you told me that you, your roommate, and her got in the car and y'all dropped her off at Miller Hall.

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't say that Sunday.

SA GOKEY: You sure?

CSSN COPELAND: I said, "It--it was me, my roommate that--like, two roommates.

SA GOKEY: Oh, I'm sorry. Not Sunday. I do apologize. When you guys took her home Thursday morning. I'm sorry. You--you're right. You didn't say that Sunday.

So, Thursday, you told me that you, the roommate, and her got in the car car and then y'all dropped her off at Miller Hall.

CSSN COPELAND: Miller Hall is my barracks.

SA GOKEY: And you're at X2?

CSSN COPELAND: Which is Miller Hall, isn't it?

SA GOKEY: That's Willis Hall. Miller Hall is the one right down the road. Her barracks.

CSSN COPELAND: Now, I'm confused. Miller Hall is my barracks.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, then, let's just say it this way, then. Sunday, you told me--on Sunday when we talked, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Right.

SA GOKEY: That you, roommate, her got in the car and y'all together dropped her off at her barracks.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't remember saying that.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, what--so, she got in an Uber then now?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know it was Uber or zTrip?

CSSN COPELAND: Probably a zTrip.

I mean, obviously, most Ubers, you have to be like on base or base access.

SA GOKEY: Right.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: I was just asking if you knew either way, because again, she's still UA, right?

CSSN COPELAND: When I say Uber, it's like, zTrip.

SA GOKEY: You're talking interchangeably?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. That's fine. I just wanted to clarify. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Did she tell you she was taking a zTrip?

CSSN COPELAND: No. That's what suspected. She was like, she's trying to go----

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: ----back to her room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But she didn't tell you she was taking it? She just----

CSSN COPELAND: No. I assumed it was a zTrip.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Why did you assume it was a zTrip and her not just not walking home like she normally walks?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. I mean----

SA GOKEY: I'm just asking.

CSSN COPELAND: I never said she likes walking, so why would I assume she walks?

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, she left the room sometime that morning. You guys--you never got in a car with her and took her anywhere?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. What time--so, the roommate that you gets rides from mostly, do you know his work schedule?

Is he on days or nights?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know what his schedule is.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But Thursday morning, he had already gone to work then?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, presumably, he would be at work for the entire day.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: But you told FCC you're going to wait until he gets home to go to work.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Which would've been 16, 1700.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Did you have anybody else to call or anything like that to get you a ride to work?

CSSN COPELAND: That's the only person. I'm not fin'to go out my day and ask other--somebody else to come pick me up.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, everybody works on a daily. I mean, I know my schedule's a little bit different with me being a CS.

SA GOKEY: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: So, theoretically, everybody's like daily duty and they have to report every day, Monday through Friday.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And theoretically get the weekends off, so.

SA GOKEY: Fair.

CSSN COPELAND: He would be the only person I call. Sometimes I call my homeboy, or I'll call my CS2, but they're already at work, so there's only to call them because I know they're not going to come pick me up.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha. It just seems like you presumably should have known he was going to be at work all afternoon.

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't know, because usually I'll tell him or sometimes I'll wait. Sometimes he comes home early, sometimes he doesn't. Same with my roommate.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Because obviously, Squadron, they're--they're so much different from being--working on the ship.

SA GOKEY: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, Squadron is honestly love, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. You brought up this homeboy a couple times.

So, you guys--you go sleep in his room sometimes because of the stinky boy?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's his name?

CSSN COPELAND: It's a lot of them. It just depends on who--like, where we're going.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha. Who would you consider like your best friend out here?

CSSN COPELAND: Probably my homeboy on the Truman, but they just got back, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's his name?

CSSN COPELAND: His name's Devonte Williams.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Well, since they got back, that's not one that you sleep in his room?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Who do you mostly--whose room do you mostly sleep in?

CSSN COPELAND: So, my homeboy's name is Dee Dee?

SA GOKEY: Dee Dee?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Is that a nickname?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe that's his name.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know the last name?

CSSN COPELAND: Williams.

SA GOKEY: Williams. What command's he with?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe he's on the Ike.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Anybody else that you sleep in the room?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Just his.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Let's see.

Do you have anything?

002583_COPELAND

MS. BEA: Not right now. You know, because of our interactions in the past, you know, that like I shoot straight and I'm not trying to bullshit you or anything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: You know that we're just trying to find [redacted], right?

So, do you know where she is?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Did you have anything to do with her disappearance?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: If you were to take a polygraph and we asked you those questions, would you pass?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, you got nothing to hide?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I've been straight up, everything you've been asking, I've been responded to.

MS. BEA: Okay. Yeah. I think a lot, you know--I know you're tired. I know you're frustrated. I know that this--it sucks being in this situation.

I know that, like, you know, we're asking questions like a 5-year-old would ask, but most of that is because we want to make sure that we understand you.

002584_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: And you know, kind of like we've been through this before, right? So, we talk to everybody, and everybody's got something different to say, usually.

So, sometimes people say pretty much the same thing, and sometimes there's wild shit differences. And what FCC told NCIS is just like real different. So, that's why, like, we really want to talk more about that, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Like, why--would this man lie on you?

CSSN COPELAND: I wouldn't say he would. I mean, he hasn't given me a reason to, but he literally walked in, and he knocked on my door. I opened--physically opened my room door and saw him.

MS. BEA: Yeah. Just want to make sure we're talking about the same thing. He knocked on the door to your suite, like with those two bunks in it, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Not to the main door, into the main living area. He knocked on your door?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. And--I mean, that's--because FCC told NCIS that y'all were naked.

CSSN COPELAND: I wasn't naked. I had shorts on.

MS. BEA: Oh, were you like not wearing a shirt?

Is that maybe why he got confused?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I didn't have a shirt on when I opened the door.

MS. BEA: Okay. What about [redacted]?

CSSN COPELAND: She was laying in the bed.

MS. BEA: And what about her clothes?

CSSN COPELAND: She had on a black top.

MS. BEA: When we're talking top, what kind of top were we talking? Like, a t-shirt. We talking a crop top bra?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes. The same t-shirt she's been wearing the whole night.

MS. BEA: Okay. Yeah. I guess that's kind of where I'm at. Right. Is like, he said that he saw her like nude up top, and he saw her breasts.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Do you know, like, what's the deal with that? It's hard for you to speculate you're not him, right? But do you know, like, why he would think that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

I mean, I don't know why he's saying that. He walked in, and we were both butt naked on the floor when he specifically knocked on my door.

MS. BEA: Were any of your roommates home at this time----

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: ----that you know of?

CSSN COPELAND: No. They were all at work.

MS. BEA: Okay. Tell me what Ms. Mary's schedule is. Like, does--do you think she would've been working at the time? Because it seems like y'all get along pretty well.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure. I mean, she works pretty much every day.

MS. BEA: Okay. Does she usually work during the day or at night?

CSSN COPELAND: During the day.

MS. BEA: During the day. Okay.

Is there anybody else we could talk to who would know--like, did you maybe talk to somebody at work about, like, [redacted] spending the night? Anything else? Anybody come at you sideways about that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Did Gilispe talk to you about it?

CSSN COPELAND: I've already stated, "he did."

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.] You said that it was like-- was it twice afterwards?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. And help me remember when that was.

CSSN COPELAND: Sunday, when I went to do urinalysis, and then the day after that, when I had work on Monday.

MS. BEA: Did you get the vibe he was being accusatory?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He was just asking me questions about [redacted] or where she would be. That was Sunday.

Like, he was just like asking where she would be. And then Monday, he was just asking the same shit, and then was just saying like, was she being weird or anything? I was like, no. And then that was it.

MS. BEA: Okay. I'm going to do a hard left question, but it's mostly because I'm concerned about you----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: ----because, you know, we've--we've talked about your mental health struggles in the past and not feeling so great and everything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Is that why your mom was worried when she couldn't get in touch with you?

CSSN COPELAND: About what?

MS. BEA: Your mental health.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. Like, at the end of the day, I don't answer my phone sometimes, and she knows that. Cool.

There was a female that I'm talking to, like she was calling, I didn't answer either. It just comes to times I would just want a break. My mom knows this, and I don't talk to nobody for days.

MS. BEA: Why?

CSSN COPELAND: Just because. I mean, at the end of the day, that's my life. If I don't want to pick up the phone, I don't got to pick up the phone.

MS. BEA: I mean, that's true. I have no problem with that. Sometimes I don't want to talk to my fucking family, but like, usually that coincides with times in my life where I'm having a hard time.

So, that's why I'm asking. You know, Jeremiah, you might not believe me, but I do care about you. I've always cared about you.

Are you doing okay?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm fine.

MS. BEA: Okay. If you weren't--I mean, I know that, you know, on the ship, you have mental health resources. I don't know what it's like on the--on the James E. Williams.

Do you--do you have somebody you can talk to?

CSSN COPELAND: Always.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, on top of that, I have my homeboy that's on the ship. Whenever I'm down or something, I'll go talk to him, or whenever I'm frustrated, I need somebody to talk to, he's like the only person I really talk to on the ship, so.

MS. BEA: Which one's that? I'm sorry. I don't know any----

CSSN COPELAND: J.J. He is a CS as well.

MS. BEA: That's J.J. Okay.

So--so, you're feeling okay right now? You--you just didn't answer the phone because you just didn't feel like--it's not because you're not feeling good mentally?

Like, my CS2s told me multiple times--even like, they've been serious situations--like, for instance, when I said the female tried to stab me, where--when I was chilling at home, they were calling me. I wouldn't answer my phone. Or it will be like, I'll call them and they don't answer, and they call me back because they saw that, you know, they missed my call and I don't answer.

So, they get mad because my phone stays on do not disturb. So, they'd be like, you need to take your phone off or do not disturb. If you see, obviously, I'm trying to call you. And I'd be like, okay. I just leave it at that.

If I'm in the mood to call them, then I'll call them. If not, I'll just be like, all right. If I see them at work, then I'll just talk to them at work.

MS. BEA: Okay. I mean--and another reason I ask too is like, sometimes when we have Sailors go UA, it's because like they have like, personal problems.

Have you--have you been UA before? Is this the first time?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It's my first time.

MS. BEA: Okay. What made it--so, what got you to the point that when they were like, you know, come into work or--or chief came by and was like, Hey, you got to come into work, that you were just like--you said fuck it, right?

What--what got you to that point? because I know you talked about not being happy there.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm saying like, my roommate didn't come. So, by the time he got home, they were off work.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. So, it was like, this isn't worth it, essentially?

CSSN COPELAND: It--it is not really about----

MS. BEA: Not a shitty thing.

CSSN COPELAND: ----not worth it, but I'm just like, fuck. Like, there--there ain't shit I could do about it.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: They're off work. So, who am I reporting to? Cool.

So, from there I was just like--when I got work on Monday, I'm going to just go to work and tell them what happened, which I told them this whole time. Whole time, my chief kept saying it was a misunderstanding or miscommunication. All right. Cool. I'm not finna argue.

MS. BEA: Yeah. I don't blame you. Okay.

And then--just for my own curiosity, right. Don't they have shuttles that take you to the different bases?

CSSN COPELAND: No. They don't.

MS. BEA: because like, how the fuck are you supposed to get--there's--how are you supposed to get where you're going?

CSSN COPELAND: They don't have shuttles. They have a shuttle----

MS. BEA: They just expect you to figure it out?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. They have shuttles on base that take you different parts on base.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: But they don't have a shuttle that goes different places off base.

MS. BEA: Okay. because I remember----

CSSN COPELAND: They used to.

MS. BEA: ----the Truman was in Portsmouth, they had--yeah. because like, a lot of people were up at Little Creek, and then they just had duty drivers take people down. Nothing----

CSSN COPELAND: They had a shuttle bus that went from Little Creek to Norfolk Base when I first checked on board, which was after A School, and then months down the road, they ended up closing it down.

So, it was there for a minute, and then they ended up shutting that shuttle down.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it.

CSSN COPELAND: But I don't think I was on the Truman when they were in--in wherever you just said.

MS. BEA: Yeah. Portsmouth. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. And, you know, has your mom ever had to call the police before to see if you were okay?

Is this the first time?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure.

I mean, there's been times where, like, she called other people to make sure I'm fine, but it's due to the fact that I--I think somebody texted her and they were asking, like, have they heard from me? And she was like, no.

So, from there, obviously, she called me a couple times and then text me, and I didn't respond. So, then, that's what made her call my command or whatever.

MS. BEA: Do you know who texted her and asked if she could get in touch with you? Was it the command?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It was a female that I talked to.

MS. BEA: Okay. Is she a Sailor as well?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She's a civilian.

MS. BEA: Okay.

Does she live around here, or is she back in----

CSSN COPELAND: No. She's back home.

MS. BEA: Back home. Home, Whidbey, or home Carolina?

CSSN COPELAND: Whidbey.

MS. BEA: Whidbey. Okay. Got it.

So, she got in touch with your mom because she hadn't heard from you either? I'm understanding now. That's why you mentioned her to begin with. Okay. Got it. Okay.

So--I mean, you kind of had--you kind of know how we work at this point, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: All we're really interested in is finding [redacted]. Everybody we talked to is going to get the same questions that you just answered for me about having anything to do with her disappearance or knowing where she's at.

002594_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: You know, and at the end of the day, what I really want you to know is that is all we are interested in.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: So, if we could like--theoretically coordinate a polygraph for you tomorrow, is that something you'd be willing to do?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Fuck it.

MS. BEA: Fuck it. Yeah. I feel you. Okay. We're going to take another quick break. Unless you--I'm sorry.

SA GOKEY: No.

MS. BEA: Didn't mean to speak for you.

SA GOKEY: No. You're fine.

MS. BEA: Okay. We're going to take another quick break, and then we'll be back. All right.

CSSN COPELAND: All right.

MS. BEA: Do you need to use the bathroom?

CSSN COPELAND: Naw.

MS. BEA: You want more CheezIt?

CSSN COPELAND: Naw.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Oh, I'm sorry. I just kicked you.

MS. BEA: No. You're good. You're good.

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 02:36:41 and returned to the room at timestamp 02:58:21.]

SA GOKEY: Okay-dokey. Sorry, Jeremiah.

MS. BEA: You okay? I know you're tired. We're about done. Okay. I just had a couple more things that we wanted to ask you about. As always, it is your choice.

Like we talked about, we are really, really interested in finding [redacted] and we don't know what's going to be important when we start investigating. We just got to try to get as much as we can. Okay?

So, I wanted to ask you if it's okay--we're, you know, we're searching the barracks and everything else. Specifically, we wanted to go into spaces, like, you know, any kind of backpacks you have or anything else like that. You can be present for that as well. It's no problem either way.

And then, you know, I know we already talked about your phone and you were okay with us, you know, looking through that. And I wanted to ask you about the other iPhone that you have in your room. Is that something you would also be okay with us going through?

CSSN COPELAND: It's broke.

MS. BEA: Will it turn on?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Won't even turn on?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, it's broke.

MS. BEA: Okay. And then other electronic devices we talked about that was your PS5.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: And then the watch. Does the watch work?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. And what does that one look like? Like, what kind of band do you have? Do you have like a----

CSSN COPELAND: It's a white band.

MS. BEA: A white band. Okay. So, if you'd be okay with us looking through that stuff, that would be cool, but again, it is completely up to you. It is always your decision.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Is that something you're all right with?

CSSN COPELAND: That's fine. Go ahead.

MS. BEA: Okay.

So, I have the--the same kind of verbiage of the--I can read this over to you again. You want me to?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Yeah. Okay.

So, I, CSSN, Jeremiah Copeland, after being advised by me, that the Naval Criminal Investigative Service is conducting an investigation into Articles 86 and 107, have been requested to permitt a search of my backpack, barracks room, and electronic devices that we talked about.

And you telling us--essentially, like, you tell us what's okay for us to search and what's not.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

MS. BEA: Okay. I have been informed of my constitutional right to refuse to permit this search in the absence of a search warrant. In full understanding of this right, I have nevertheless decided to permit this search to be made. This search may be conducted on today's date by NCIS, and I here grant my permission to remove any--and retain any property or papers found during the search which are desired for investigative purposes. I make this decision freely and voluntarily is made no--with no threats having been made or promises extended to me. All sound good? Okay.

So, if you could sign where it says sign.

CSSN COPELAND: When you say like, sign, like you say backpack, bedroom, and electronic devices.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: When is that going to be?

MS. BEA: Tonight. Like, right now. I'm tired too.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm just trying to go home.

MS. BEA: Yeah. No. I feel you. I'm tired too.

CSSN COPELAND: And you say--what'd you say? When you said, whenever I choose, right?

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: But if I'm putting this on paper for--you saying all three of those, then you have by--what by choice do you have? You're obligated to go through all three with me, sign that, right?

MS. BEA: I--yeah. If you want to be present for when we go through those things, you're welcome to be there because we're also trying to go.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But I'm just saying, like, let's say I don't want you going through a certain backpack, but I already signed you--you're obligated to go through my backpack.

MS. BEA: So, this means consent. So, if at any point you say, "No, I don't want you to search this specific thing," we cannot search in there.

Does that make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Answer that question well enough?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. Okay. And then, I wanted to revisit the one we talked about with your phone. Are you still okay with that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I just--can we just--I'm just trying to go home.

MS. BEA: Understood. Okay. All right. So, let's make some moves to do that and we will make those coordination and we will get right back. Okay.

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 03:02:09 and Ms. Bea returned to the room at timestamp 03:03:35.]

MS. BEA: Hey, Jeremiah. I'm just realizing that I didn't give you my phone in order to call your mom. You want to do that?

CSSN COPELAND: I'll just wait.

MS. BEA: You just wait. Okay. Cool. I don't want to deprive you that opportunity.

CSSN COPELAND: How--how long is this going to take?

MS. BEA: How long until we leave this office----

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: ----to get back to you? 10 minutes.

[Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 03:03:56.]

[SA Gokey returned to the room at timestamp 03:16:21.]

SA GOKEY: Okay, Jeremiah. You ready to go? Got your stuff.

EVIDENCE

1. On 04Jun25, DFE BUSH obtained the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND maintained on NCIS evidence custody log number NFFO 13Y9L Item XUQP3 for examination from SA Caroline ROBINSON, NCISRA Norfolk, VA.

2. DFE BUSH copied the GrayKey extraction of the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND to a Seagate hard drive with serial number Z9A4RSFN. On 12Jun25, DFE BUSH enter the hard drive into evidence under NCIS evidence custody log number NFFO K8J9D Item 8JY7H to the Temporary Evidence Locker, NCISRA Norfolk, VA.

FORENSIC ACQUISITION AND VERIFICATION

1. On 04Jun25, DFE BUSH obtained a full file system extraction of the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND using the Graykey Extraction Tool OS version 1.26.3.31482045, App Bundle: 6.3.1.31921520. SA ROBINSON provided DFE BUSH the Personal Identification Number (PIN) 980377 to access the device. The device was isolated from network connectivity via airplane mode and could not be write-protected due to established forensic processes. The digital forensic extraction was verified through established forensic processes.

WORKING COPY

1. On 05Jun25, SDFE DAVISON obtained a working copy of the Graykey extraction of the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND from DFE BUSH for examination.

EXAMINATION DETAILS

1. Between 05Jun25 and 08Aug25, SDFE DAVISON conducted a digital forensic examination of an iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND using Magnet Axiom Version 9.2.1.44383, Magnet Axiom Version 9.4.1.45125, Cellebrite Inseyets Physical Analyzer version 10.5.0.1027, and ILEAPP version 2.2.0. The Apple ID associated with the iPhone 15 Pro Max listed as [redacted] and the Directory Services Identifier (DSID) listed as 17163425203. A DSID is a unique numerical value associated with an Apple ID account to ensure each account has a unique number in case a user changes an email address associated with an Apple account. The phone number associated with device is PII - [redacted] and the device phone name is listed as "Jermiah's iPhone." SDFE DAVISON took the following screenshot from the device information displayed in Axiom and took a screenshot of the Graykey Extraction report.

BACKGROUND: On 31May25, NCIS was contacted by Norfolk Police Department (NPD) in reference to a missing person's report. NPD relayed ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95), was attempting to make a missing person's report regarding CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted]), USN, DDG 95. NCIS subsequently contacted Command who advised V[redacted] and CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, were in a status of Unauthorized Absence (UA) beginning on Thursday, 29May25. Command advised they believed V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND were involved romantically, but did not know to what extent. On 01Jun25, NCIS made contact with Naval Station Norfolk Base Police to conduct a welfare check on the rooms of S/COPELAND and V[redacted]. Base Police stated they found S/COPELAND in his barracks room; however, received no answer at V/[redacted]'s door when they knocked. NCIS responded to Naval Station Norfolk and was able to gain entry to V[redacted]'s barracks room, in which she was not located. Subsequently, NCIS' Multiple Threat Alert Center (MTAC) initiated cell phone pings on V/[redacted]'s mobile phone, which yielded no location data due to the phone possibly being powered off. NCIS conducted an interview of S/COPELAND who stated V[redacted] came over to his barracks on Wednesday, 28May25. S/COPELAND stated V[redacted] stayed the night and the next day, 29May25, FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG 95, came to his barracks room because he failed to report for work. S/COPELAND stated he borrowed his roommate's vehicle and drove V/[redacted] back to her barracks around 1000 on 29May25. During the interview of S/COPELAND, he signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for his cellular device which was provided to NCIS Digital Forensic Examiners (DFE) for review. The DFE observed a screenshot on the device of S/COPELAND of a saved marked location near Cary Avenue in Norfolk, VA. During the course of this investigation, NCIS would launch search teams near known phone pings and last locations of both V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND. On 09Jun25, subsequent to receiving the screenshot from the DFE, NCIS conducted a foot search of the area near the marked location and discovered a black duffel bag containing human remains, later identified through DNA as V/[redacted].

JURISDICTION AND ARRIVAL: At approximately 1700, NCIS arrived to the location of Cary Avenue in Norfolk, VA, and conducted a foot search around the Broad Creek neighborhood and Richard Bowling Elementary School. Figure [1] is the screenshot of the marked location utilized by NCIS. At 1735, Reporting Agent (RA) received a phone call from Participating Agent (PA) Tiffany MARTINEZ stating a bag had been located off of a brush covered path behind a row of townhomes. Due to the location of the bag, at 1740, NCIS initiated contact with the Norfolk Police Department (NPD) who responded to the scene to assist. A copy of the NPD incident report detailing their response is appended as Enclosure (A).

SCENE SECURITY: Upon arrival to the scene, no other persons were present in the area but residents going about their daily routine. The area which was searched was not secured prior to arrival and was an open, wooded area, behind a school and residential community. NCIS participants divided into groups and ultimately located the bag by following the smell. Once the duffel bag was located, Andrew PISKE, CIV, K9 Handler, Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM), and K9 Kyra, Certified Human Remains Detection Dog, approached the bag where she presented a positive alert to PISKE. An aerial topography image of the area searched by PISKE and K9 Kyra is appended as Enclosure (B). NCIS partially unzipped the bag to verify its contents to which human remains were observed. NPD was immediately contacted, and all searching immediately ceased. Due to rain, at approximately 1755, to protect the duffel bag, PISKE placed a black tarp over the bag. Figure [2] is a photo of the overall brush area where the remains were located. Figure [3] is a photo of the duffel bag in place. Figure [4] is the approximate GPS location of the duffel bag after conducting the foot search with the assistance of CalTopo. Figure [5] is the confirmation of the human remains inside the bag.

CENTRAL JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

UNITED STATES v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3 USN	DEFENSE MOTION TO COMPEL WITNESS PRODUCTION 26 November 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to 10 U.S.C. § 846, Article 46, Uniform Code of Military Justice, and Rule for Courts-Martial 703, as well as the Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, the Defense moves this Court to compel production of CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN, Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez, and Dr. Nemanja Rodic as a necessary Defense witnesses at trial.

BURDEN

The Defense, as the moving party, bears the burden of persuasion and the burden of proof on any factual issue the resolution of which is necessary to decide the motion by a preponderance of the evidence. R.C.M. 905(c).

FACTS

1. CSSN Copeland is charged, inter alia, with committing premeditated murder of CS3 A.R., in violation of Article 118, UCMJ. (Charge Sheet).

2. On 29 October 2025, the Defense requested the Government produce thirty-one (31) witnesses at CSSN Copeland's trial in accordance with the Trial Management Order. (Enclosure A).

3. On 5 November 2025, the Government denied two of the requested witnesses: CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN, and Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez. (Enclosure B).

4. In its response, the Government stated:

    a. CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN – Denied. You have not made the requisite showing under R.C.M. 703.
    b. Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez – Denied. You have not made the requisite showing under R.C.M. 703. (Enclosure B).

5. On 19 November 2025, the Defense submitted a supplemental request for the production three additional witnesses. (Enclosure C).

6. On 24 November 2025, the Government denied one witness: Dr. Nemanja Rodic. (Enclosure D).

7. In its response, the Government stated:

    a. Dr. Nemanja Rodic. Denied. You have not made the requisite showing under R.C.M. 703. Dr. Rodic did not designate a manner of death because his exam was limited by a variety of factors. Per BS #1790, Dr. Rodic advised that strangulation (asphyxiation) was a possible or probable method of death in this case. This finding is consistent with Dr. Lameira's conclusions (BS #1448). As such, any testimony from Dr. Rodic on that point would be cumulative and unnecessary. Moreover, Dr. Rodic's testimony is even less relevant than Dr. Lameira's as the body was further decomposed at the time of his autopsy. Of note, per BS #1646, BS #1663-64 is a voice to text transcription of a call that appears to contain numerous errors. This transcription was provided by Ms. Castle to the trial counsel via her VLC. (Enclosure D).

8. CSSN Miguel became very close friends with CS3 A.R., such that CS3 A.R. would refer to him as her brother. NCIS interviewed CSSN Miguel on 3 June 2025. (Enclosure E).

9. At times, CSSN Miguel has spent time with CS3 A.R. outside of work, even as friends inside her barracks room. (Enclosure E).

10. CSSN Miguel told NCIS that CS3 A.R. was a very emotional person with traumatic family past. He explained that she has had mental health episodes that would involve someone having to constantly talk to her to bring her back to reality. CSSN Miguel has personally witnessed CS3 A.R. have three of these episodes. (Enclosure E).

11. ET2 Daniel Rich, who was CS3 A.R.'s ex-boyfriend, received a phone call from CS3 A.R. at 0214 the day she went missing where he described her as frantic; experiencing one of her episodes that he has also witnessed personally in the past. (Enclosure F).

12. According to ET2 Rich, a trigger of CS3 A.R.'s panic attack episodes are sexual advances upon her. (Enclosure F).

13. In addition to CSSN Miguel's previous statements, he also mentioned that CS3 A.R. took medication but had to be closely monitored to avoid her overdosing. (Enclosure E).

14. CSSN Miguel is currently stationed on board USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). (Enclosure G).

15. On 13 June 2025, NCIS interviewed Mr. Teelez Mendez, who lives in Illinois. (Enclosure H).

16. On 20 May 2025, just nine days before CS3 A.R. went missing, CS3 A.R. sent Mr. Teelez Mendez Instagram messages that stated, "I just don't like my chain of command my division it's toxic as fuck." This was the last time Mr. Teelez Mendez heard from CS3 A.R. (Enclosure H).

17. Mr. Teelez Mendez provided screenshots of the Instagram messages to NCIS. (Enclosures H, I).

18. On 10 June 2025, an autopsy was performed on CS3 A.R.'s body. The results of that autopsy indicates that the manner and cause of CS3 A.R.'s death is undetermined. (Enclosure J).

19. On 28 June 2025, a second autopsy was performed on CS3 A.R.'s body by Dr. Rodic. (Enclosure K).

20. Dr. Rodic is a board certified pathologist located in Washington, D.C. In recorded notes, which were enclosed to his autopsy report, Dr. Rodic ruled out foul play and strangulation as probable causes of CS3 A.R.'s death. (Enclosure K).

LAW

The Sixth Amendment to the U.S Constitution provides that "[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right […] to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor." U.S. Const. amend. VI, cl. 7. This right is "well established in military law and has been guarded by [our highest Court]." United States v. Hinton, 21 M.J. 267, 269 (C.M.A. 1986) (citing United States v. Carpenter, 1 M.J. 384 (C.M.A. 1976; United States v. Iturralde-Aponte, 1 M.J. 196 (C.M.A. 1975)). Consistent with the constitutional mandate, the prosecution and the defense at a court-martial "shall have equal opportunity to obtain witnesses and evidence, including the benefit of compulsory process," R.C.M. 703(a), and "[e]ach party is entitled to the production of any witness whose testimony on a matter in issue on the merits or on an interlocutory question would be relevant and necessary." R.C.M. 703(b)(1).

Evidence is relevant when it has "any tendency to make the existence of any fact more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence; and the fact is of consequence to the determination of the action." Mil. R. Evid. 401. Evidence is necessary when it is not cumulative and would contribute to a party's presentation of the case in some positive way on a matter in issue. R.C.M. 703(b)(1), Discussion, Manual for Courts-Martial, United States (2019 ed.); see United States v. Williams, 3 M.J. 239 (C.M.A. 1977). In determining whether a requested witness' testimony is cumulative of a witness whose appearance at trial is assured, the military judge should consider: whether the requested witness' credibility is greater than that of the attending witness; whether the testimony of the requested witness is relevant to the accused with respect to character traits or other evidence observed during a different time period from the attending witness; and whether there is any benefit to the accused from having an additional witness say the same thing other witnesses have said. United States v. Jones, 20 M.J. 919, 927 (N-M. Ct. Crim. App. 1985) (internal citations omitted). If the court determines that a defense witness is cumulative, the Defense is entitled to choose which of the cumulative witnesses it desires to call. United States v. Harmon, 40 M.J. 107, 108 (C.A.A.F. 1994).

An accused's "right to present his own witnesses to establish a defense" is a "fundamental element of due process of law." United States v. McAllister, 64 M.J. 248, 249 (C.A.A.F. 2007) (quoting Washington v. Texas, 388 U.S. 14, 19 (1967)). Therefore, his "opportunity to obtain witness and other evidence" must be equal to the Government's. United States v. Warner, 62 M.J. 114, 118 (C.A.A.F. 2005) (internal quotation marks omitted).

The court-martial rules which implement these rights require that in order to obtain witnesses for trial, the defense must first submit a request to trial counsel. R.C.M. 703(c)(2). The request must include the witness' name, telephone number if known, and address or location of the witness "such that the witness can be found upon the exercise of due diligence." R.C.M. 703(c)(2)(B). It must also include a synopsis of the witness' expected testimony. Id. If the trial counsel contends that production is not required under the rule, the defense may submit the matter to the military judge. R.C.M. 703(c)(2)(D). If the military judge grants the motion, trial counsel "shall produce the witness or the proceedings shall be abated." Id. "Corroboration witnesses must be produced if unfairness in the court-martial process would result from their absence." Id. (citing United States v. Williams, 3 M.J. 239, 243 n.9 (C.M.A. 1977)).

ARGUMENT

I. CSSN Junrogel Miguel's testimony is relevant and necessary during the merits and presentencing phases of CSSN Copeland's court-martial.

The Defense has an equal right to evidence and witnesses to make an adequate defense against the charged allegations. The Government has charged CSSN Copeland with premeditated murder for killing CS3 A.R. by some act. CSSN Miguel has personal knowledge that CS3 A.R. suffered from mental health issues and had to be watched closely to prevent her from overdosing on the medication she took. Not only that, CS3 A.R. suffered from these mental health issues for quite some time, considering it more than likely stemmed from her traumatic family history. CSSN Miguel knows this because he had a very close friendship with CS3 A.R.

CSSN Miguel will testify that he witnessed CS3 A.R. have what he described as mental health "episodes". CSSN Miguel observed her have episodes on three occasions. This is relevant because the night CS3 A.R. was last seen, and was with CSSN Copeland, she called her ex-boyfriend, ET3 Rich to come pick her up. He explained that CS3 A.R. was having one of her panic attacks while he was on the phone with her. According to ET3 Rich one of the potential triggers of her panic attacks were sexual advances. CSSN Miguel describe how CS3 A.R. acted during her episodes and also what he has known to trigger her episodes, which was not a sexual advance.

The evidence CSSN Miguel will testify to leads to the possibility that CS3 A.R. died from suicide opposed to an act committed by CSSN Copeland. CSSN Copeland's defense has a right to present alternative theories to the trier of fact. The Government cannot prevent the Defense from exercising that right by denying the Defense its requested witnesses. Furthermore, CSSN Miguel is located here in Norfolk, VA, stationed on board USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). Producing him as a witness should be easy for the Government without the cost of any travel expenses. Even if the Government had to use travel expenses to produce this witness, that does not justify the Government denying to produce him or outweigh CSSN Copeland's right to have him present. As such, the Court should order the Government produce CSSN Miguel for trial.

II. Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez's testimony is relevant and necessary during the merits phase of CSSN Copeland's court-martial.

Mr. Teelez Mendez spoke with CS3 A.R. just nine days before she was last seen through social media. In CS3 A.R.'s messages to Mr. Teelez Mendez she expressed dissatisfaction with the chain of command on the ship she was attached to and described her working environment as toxic. This is how she felt in the days right before she died. The temporal proximity of the feelings she expressed in her messages make them relevant to the Defense's case. Similar to the Defense's request for CSSN Miguel, Mr. Teelez Mendez's testimony provides context to other evidence that ultimately leads to the possibility that CS3 A.R. may have committed suicide. As mentioned previously, CSSN Copeland's defense has a right to present alternative theories to the trier of fact and should not be precluded from doing so by the Government refusing to produce its witnesses. Importantly, Mr. Teelez Mendez is the only witness the messages CS3 A.R. sent can be admitted through, which makes his presence even more vital.

Mr. Teelez Mendez is located in Illinois, which means the Government has the ability to subpoena him. There are not any unduly cumbersome barriers that would warrant the Court not ordering the Government produce this witness. As such, the Government should be made to have him present.

III. Dr. Nemanja Rodic's testimony is relevant and necessary during the merits phase of CSSN Copeland's court-martial.

Dr. Rodic is a relevant and necessary witness to the Defense's case and should be produced. Dr. Rodic is the only other pathologist to have completed an autopsy of CS3 A.R.'s body, which was completed only 18 days after CS3 A.R.'s first autopsy done by the medical examiner for the Commonwealth of Virginia, at the request of CS3 A.R.'s mother. Similar to the first examiner, Dr. Rodic also made a finding that the manner of death was undetermined. Despite this being the same as the first examiner's conclusions, this is not cumulative and unnecessary, as the Government suggests in their response to the Defense's production request. In a case where the Government has refused to charge an act done by CSSN Copeland to allegedly cause CS3 A.R.'s death, yet chooses to argue strangulation through M.R.E. 404(b) from allegations of other alleged victims[1], this information is highly relevant and gives the factfinder concrete evidence in the results that a cause and manner of death could not be determined regardless of the examiner.

Dr. Rodic also made statements that are exculpatory to CSSN Copeland. In recorded notes, Dr. Rodic ruled out foul play and strangulation as probable causes of CS3 A.R.'s death. Although Dr. Rodic has made findings the Government may not like or agree with, that is grounds for cross-examination not denying the witness outright. The Government claims Dr. Rodic says asphyxiation was a possible cause of death, along with other possibilities, which proves strangulation occurred. Even if so, the Government fails to realize that asphyxiation does not automatically mean strangulation.[2]

Dr. Rodic is located in Washington, D.C., which means the Government has the ability to subpoena him and secure his travel for a relatively low cost—he is located less than 300 miles. There are not any unduly cumbersome barriers the Government has mentioned that would warrant the Court not ordering the Government produce this witness. As such, the Government should be made to have him present.

RELIEF REQUESTED

The Defense respectfully requests that this Court compel the Government to produce CSSN Junrogel Miguel and Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez for trial, as their testimony on the merits is relevant and necessary.

1. Per references (a) through (c), the Defense requests that the government produce the following witnesses:

Witnesses for the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

a. CSSN Jada Knight, USN, Norfolk, VA, Airborne Command & Control Squadron (VAW) 126. CSSN Knight was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and at the same bar with S.S. and CSSN Copeland at the time of the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CSSN Knight can attest to appearance of CSSN S.S.'s intoxication, or lack thereof, the night of the alleged assault. Additionally, CSSN Knight provided exculpatory evidence to NCIS during her interview off CSSN S.S. drinking with her after the alleged sexual assault happened. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

b. CSSN Kaylee Parks, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75), ([redacted]). CSSN Parks was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and at the same bar with CSSN S.S. and CSSN Copeland at the time of the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CSSN Parks saw CSSN S.S. and CSSN Copeland interacting with each other while at the bar. She will testify to seeing CSSN S.S. walk unassisted to the bathroom along with CSSN Copeland and have conversations with people afterwards. CSSN Park is also aware that CSSN S.S. had a boyfriend on board the same ship when the alleged sexual assault happened, which goes to CSSN S.S.'s motive to fabricate. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

c. CS2 Kirsten Click, USN, Norfolk, VA, (VFA-11). CS2 Click was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and at the same bar with CSSN S.S. and CSSN Copeland at the time of the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CS2 Click saw CSSN S.S. and CSSN Copeland kissing each other's necks and touching all over each other. She observed CSSN S.S. both before and after the alleged sexual assault and can attest to appearance of CSSN S.S.'s intoxicated condition, or lack thereof. She is aware that CSSN S.S. had a boyfriend on board the same ship when the alleged sexual assault happened. Her testimony similar to CSSN Parks and provides a motive for CSSN S.S. to fabricate the allegation. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

d. CS3 Shamel Eaddy, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75). CS3 Eaddy was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and was CSSN S.S.'s boyfriend at the time of the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CS3 Eaddy was initially approached by CSSN Copeland about the fact that CSSN Copeland had sexual contact with his girlfriend, CSSN S.S., and learned of that fact from CSSN Copeland for the first time. After CS3 Eaddy's conversation with CSSN Copeland, he then confronted CSSN S.S. about the alleged sexual contact she had with CSSN Copeland. His testimony will provide a motive for CSSN S.S. to fabricate the allegation. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

e. CSSN Jaelen Owenskemper, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75), [redacted]. CSSN Owenskemper was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and at the same bar with CSSN S.S. and CSSN Copeland the night of the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CSSN Owenskemper will testify to seeing CSSN S.S. cuddled up with CSSN Copeland at the bar they were at. CSSN Owenskemper's testimony establishes the intimate nature of CSSN S.S.'s interactions with CSSN Copeland the same night of the alleged sexual assault. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

f. CDR Brett Ballard, USN, Norfolk, VA, Helicopter Sea Combat Squadron (HSC-11) ELEVEN. The night after the alleged sexual assault, CDR Ballard was serving as the Senior Shore Patrol representative and went to retrieve CSSN Copeland when he refused to return to the ship after experiencing a mental health decline upon becoming aware that he was being accused of sexually assaulting CSSN S.S. the night before. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

g. CSSA McKenzie Saunders, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) [redacted]. CSSA Saunders was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and was at the bar with CSSN S.S. at the time of the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CSSA Saunders noticed CSSN S.S. in the bathroom where her motor skills worked fine and observed her dancing with CSSN Copeland. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

h. LSCM Ronnie Didier, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75), ([redacted]. During the time of the alleged allegations, LSCM Didier served onboard USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and was CSSN S.S.'s Department Leading Chief Petty Officer. He supervised the complaining witness and will testify about her character for untruthfulness. This is relevant and necessary as it goes directly to CSSN S.S.'s credibility during the merits phase of the trial.

i. CSCM Aneuric Robles, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75), [redacted] During the time of the alleged allegations, CSCM Robles served onboard USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and was the Master Chief in charge of CSSN S.S.'s entire division. CSSN S.S. serving under his leadership, and he will testify about her character for untruthfulness. This is relevant and necessary as it goes directly to CSSN S.S.'s credibility during the merits phase of the trial.

j. CS3 Raela Spratling, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75), [redacted]. During the time of the alleged allegations, ENS White, served onboard USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75). She worked directly with the complaining witness and had enough interactions with her to opine about her character for truthfulness. CS3 Spratling will testify that CSSN S.S. has a character for untruthfulness. This is relevant and necessary as it goes directly to CSSN S.S.'s credibility during the merits phase of the trial.

k. CSSN Kaulise Cousins, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER (CVN-69). CSSN Cousins was assigned to USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) and was CSSN Copeland's liberty buddy the night after the alleged incident in Oslo, Norway. CSSN Cousins stated CSSN Copeland's demeanor when he told him about having sex with CSSN S.S. was happy. However, there was an immediate, drastic decline with CSSN Copeland's mental state when CSSN Copeland stepped away to take a call where he learned that a claim of sexual assault was about to be made against him. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

l. Special Agent Bernadette Duffy, NCIS, Norfolk, VA. SA Duffy interviewed CSSN Copeland twice in reference to the allegations involving CSSN S.S. CSSN Copeland chose to waive his right to remain silent, provided a statement, and also provided SA Duffy text messages sent between him and the alleged victim surrounding the night of the alleged incident. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.S.

Witnesses for the allegations involving CSSN S.R.

m. CS2 Joshua Bryant, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). CS2 Bryant noticed a hickey on CSSN S.R.'s neck just days before the alleged incident where CSSN S.R. claims CSSN Copeland strangled her. CS2 Bryant's testimony provides alternatives reasons for a mark on CSSN S.R.'s neck. As such, his testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.R.

n. Detective S. Gaston, CIV, Norfolk, VA. Det. Gaston was one of the responding officers to the alleged assault involving CSSN S.R. and CSSN Copeland. Furthermore, Det. Gaston interviewed CSSN Copeland and other witnesses, whose interviews were not recorded but provides exculpatory evidence inculpating CSSN S.R. as the offender. Det. Gaston also obtained images of CSSN Copeland's personal property that corroborates CSSN Copeland's statement to police at the scene. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.R.

Witnesses for the allegations involving CSSN A.R.

o. YN3 Sean Monaghan, USN, Norfolk, VA, Airborne Command & Control Squadron (VAW) 124. Monaghan was CSSN Copeland's roommate at the time of the alleged incident between CSSN S.R. and CSSN Copeland. He provides exculpatory evidence that proves CSSN Copeland did not assault CSSN S.R. In fact, Monaghan will provide testimony that CSSN S.R. assaulted CSSN Copeland and damaged his personal property. He also returned to the room the night CS3 A.R. came to their barracks room and saw her alive. He can provide a general description that matches CS3 A.R. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CSSN S.R. and CS3 A.R.

p. FCC Brad Parker, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). FCC Parker went to CSSN Copeland's room the morning after CS3 A.R. spoke with her two ex-boyfriends on the phone and went missing. FCC Parker will testify that he saw CS3 A.R. in CSSN Copeland's bed, and she was alive; she acknowledge his presence, rolled over and went back to sleep in CSSN Copeland's bed. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

q. CSSN Gladis Garcia-Barrera, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). Prior to CS3 A.R. going to CSSN Copeland's room later on 28 May 2025, CSSN Garcia-Barrera was with CS3 A.R. at Target together. CSSN Garcia-Barrera will testify that CS3 A.R. told her she was going to CSSN Copeland's room to make tacos and sent her pictures of the food. This corroborates statements that CSSN Copeland provided to NCIS as well. Additionally, CSSN Garcia-Barrera, as a friend of CS3 A.R., has personal knowledge of CSSN A.R.'s mental health issues/struggles. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

r. AR John Calisse, USN, Norfolk, VA, Airborne Command & Control Squadron (VAW) 124. AR Calisse was CSSN Copeland's suitemate at the time of the alleged death of CS3 A.R. AR Calisse saw CSSN Copeland and CS3 A.R. the morning of 29 May 2025 laying together with CS3 A.R.'s breast exposed. CS3 A.R. stated that he observed them on their back while both appeared to be breathing, right before he left the room to go to work. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

s. PSSN Irbin Gordillocruz, USN, Norfolk, VA, Airborne Command & Control Squadron (VAW) 124. PSSN Gordillocruz, similar to AR Calisse, was CSSN Copeland's suitemate at the time of the alleged death of CS3 A.R. PSSN Gordillocruz also saw CSSN Copeland and CS3 A.R. the morning of 29 May 2025 laying together on the floor in the common area with CS3 A.R.'s breast exposed. PSSN Gordillocruz testimony will corroborate the evidence provided by AR Calisse. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

t. HT3 Michael Gillespie, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). HT3 Gillespie had previously dated CS3 A.R. He has personal knowledge of CSSN A.R.'s history with mental health issues, her emotional state when having "episodes" and her overuse of medications. Additionally, the day CS3 A.R. went missing she had an argument with CS3 A.R. and expressed anger with him via a text message saying "fuck you". His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

u. ET3 Daniel Rich, USN, Norfolk, VA, Mid-Atlantic Regional Calibration Center. ET3 Rich had previously dated CS3 A.R. He has personal knowledge of CSSN A.R.'s history with mental health issues, and her emotional state when having "episodes". Additionally, the day CS3 A.R. went missing she called ET3 Rich asking him to pick her up. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

v. CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). CSSN Miguel was close friends with CS3 A.R. and worked with her onboard USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). CSSN Miguel has personal knowledge of CSSN A.R.'s relationship with HT3 Gillespie. Furthermore, CSSN Miguel has had his own experiences and personal knowledge with CS3 A.R. when she experienced "episodes" and also described having to closely monitor CS3 A.R. to prevent her from overdosing. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

w. Special Agent Lisa Carroll, NCIS, Norfolk, VA. SA Carroll was one of the agents that completed a search of HT3 Gillespie's barracks. During the search SA Carroll found and documented bottles of pills belonging to CS3 A.R. There will be evidence presented that HT3 Gillespie kept CS3 A.R.'s medications for her because of a potential fear she would overdose, based on her history with mental health issues and suicidal ideations. SA Carroll's testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

x. LSC Robert Janson, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). LSC Janson was CS3 A.R.'s Departmental Leading Chief Petty Officer onboard USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). He can attest to her mental decline and stress before CS3 A.R. was admitted to NMC Portsmouth and after she returned (BS 1016, 1044). His testimony provides context to show the timeline of CS3 A.R.'s mental decline based on what he perceived on her at work. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

y. LCDR Joseph McClelland, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). LT McClelland was the Command Duty Officer onboard USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) on 28 May – 29 May 2025, which is the night CS3 A.R. went to CSSN Copeland's room and the day she went missing BS 1069. LT McClelland received the reports of CS3 A.R. missing and spoke directly to ET3 Rich about his phone call with CS3 A.R. Depending on what ET3 Rich's testimony will be at trial, LT McClelland will serve a witness that could potentially provide evidence of prior inconsistent statements from ET3 Rich. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

z. Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez, CIV, Mr. Teelez Mendez was contacted by CS3 A.R. just nine (9) days before she went missing. CS3 A.R. contacted Mr. Teelez Mendez through social media where she complained about how toxic her division's chain of command was. Mr. Teelez Mendez provided a copy of these text messages to NCIS when interviewed (BS 1202). When put in context with her overall mental health issues and stress, this shows her negative perspective had not improved. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

aa. PS1 Clarissa Impelidodayoan, USN, Norfolk, VA, Helicopter Sea Combat Squadron (HSC-2) TWO. PS1 Impelidodayoan was one of the Sailors that came to CSSN Copeland's room and cleaned the room on 2 June 2025 to assist CSSN Copeland's suitemate, YN3 Monaghan, prepare for his room inspection (BS 1360). PS1 Impelidodayoan was even on CSSN Copeland's side of the room and stated she didn't see any unusual stains and only described the smell as vomit and alcohol (party room). This contradicts the Government's theory that CSSN Copeland stored a body in his room for days. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

bb. LTJG Sean James, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95). LTJG James is relevant and necessary because he provides evidence of prior inconsistent statements of ET3 Rich, whom he supervises, in relation to when CS3 A.R. went missing. Furthermore, he has personal knowledge of CS3 A.R. and ET3 Rich having a "distressed" phone call close in time to CS3 A.R.'s death. His testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

cc. NCC Lorenzo Carter, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS JOHN C. STENNIS (CVN-74). NCC Carter was the other Sailors that came to CSSN Copeland's room and cleaned the room on 2 June 2025 to assist CSSN Copeland's suitemate, YN3 Monaghan, prepare for his room inspection (BS 1364). NCC Carter was also on CSSN Copeland's side of the room, similar to PS1 Impelidodayoan, and he stated that he didn't notice any unusual stains or smells in CSSN Copeland's room. This contradicts the Government's theory that CSSN Copeland stored a body in his room for days. Her testimony is relevant during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R. and corroborates PS1 Impelidodayoan's expected testimony.

Witnesses for Sentencing

dd. Ms. Rochell Brown, CIV, Oak Harbor, WA, [redacted] Ms. R. Brown is CSSN Copeland's mother. She will testify positively about CSSN Copeland's character as a father and son. Telephonic testimony is not sufficient, as CSSN Copeland is charged with premeditated murder. If CSSN Copeland is convicted of premeditated murder, he is facing a minimum sentence of life with the possibility of parole and a maximum punishment of life without the possibility of parole. Based on the seriousness of the allegations and punitive exposure, he should be able to have all his witnesses present in-person. Her testimony is relevant during the pre-sentencing phase of trial.

ee. Ms. Kathleen Brown, CIV, Oak Harbor, WA, [redacted] Ms. K. Brown is CSSN Copeland's grandmother. She will testify positively about CSSN Copeland's character as a father and son. Similar to Ms. R. Brown, telephonic testimony is not sufficient, as CSSN Copeland is charged with premeditated murder. If CSSN Copeland is convicted of premeditated murder, he is facing a minimum sentence of life with the possibility of parole and a maximum punishment of life without the possibility of parole. Based on the seriousness of the allegations and punitive exposure, he should be able to have all his witnesses present in-person. Additionally, Ms. K. Brown will be support for Ms. R. Brown. Her testimony is relevant during the pre-sentencing phase of trial.

1. Per references (a) through (c), the Defense requests that the government produce the following witnesses:

a. Dr. Nemanja Rodic, M.D., Ph.D, CIV, Washington, D.C. [redacted]. Dr. Rodic is a board certified pathologist that performed a second autopsy on CS3 A.R.'s body at her mother, Ms. Esmerelda Castle's, request. Dr. Rodic performed the autopsy on 28 June 2025. In his notes, which were enclosed to his autopsy report, Dr. Rodic ruled out foul play and strangulation as probable causes of CS3 A.R.'s death (BS 1663-64). The Government alleges in its M.R.E. 404(b) notice sent on 5 November 2025 that the "evidence supports that the Accused strangled CS3 A.R." Dr. Rodic's testimony will contradict that theory. As such, his testimony is relevant and necessary during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving CS3 A.R.

b. LSSN Omeri Smoot, USN, Norfolk, VA, USS DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER (CVN-69). LSSN Smoot was present during the alleged sexual assault of Y.J. Prior to CSSN Copeland allegedly having sex with Y.J. without her consent, LSSN Smoot had just had a threesome with Y.J. and CSSN John Bradford inside CSSN Copeland's room. Based on Y.J.'s statement, LSSN Smoot witnessed the sexual assault happened. As such, his testimony is relevant and necessary during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving Y.J.

c. Mr. Brendon Doria, CIV, Oak Harbor, WA [redacted]. Mr. Doria invited CSSN Copeland to his house while L.L. was present the day she was allegedly assaulted by CSSN Copeland. Based on the statements L.L. made, Mr. Doria was present to witness many interactions between her and CSSN Copeland. His testimony will provide context to the relationship between L.L. and CSSN Copeland. Additionally, Mr. Doria was able to witness L.L. immediately after the alleged sexual misconduct. The Government provided notice under M.R.E. 413 that it intended to use L.L.'s allegations as propensity evidence to prove Charge I, Specifications 1, 2, and 4. As such, Mr. Doria's testimony testimony is relevant and necessary during the merits phase of the trial regarding the allegations involving ABHAN C.R. and Y.J.

a. LSSN Omeri Smoot, USN.

b. Mr. Brendon Johnson (formerly Doria), Civilian.

2. The following witness request is denied:

a. Dr. Nemanja Rodic. Denied. You have not made the requisite showing under R.C.M. 703. Dr. Rodic did not designate a manner of death because his exam was limited by a variety of factors. Per BS #1790, Dr. Rodic advised that strangulation (asphyxiation) was a possible or probable method of death in this case. This finding is consistent with Dr. Lameira's conclusions (BS #1448). As such, any testimony from Dr. Rodic on that point would be cumulative and unnecessary. Moreover, Dr. Rodic's testimony is even less relevant than Dr. Lameira's as the body was further decomposed at the time of his autopsy. Of note, per BS #1646, BS #1663-64 is a voice to text transcription of a call that appears to contain numerous errors. This transcription was provided by Ms. Castle to the trial counsel via her VLC.

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF CSSN JUNROGEL MIGUEL, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and participating Agent (PA) Lisa CARROLL conducted an interview of CSSN Junrojel MIGUEL, USN, James E. Williams (DDG 95), in regard to the above caption investigation.

2. The interview of CSSN MIGUEL was recorded using an audio/visual recording system, and a digital copy was downloaded onto a Digital Video Disc-Recordable (DVD-R). This document is a summary of the interview and not a verbatim transcription. For full details of the interview, refer to the working copy of the original DVD-R; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. CSSN Miguel stated he met CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted]), USN, DDG 95, while working in the galley. CSSN MIGUEL reported that he and V/[redacted] became very close friends in JAN25, to the extent V/[redacted] started referring to him as her brother. CSSN MIGUEL explained that he and V/[redacted] only socialize when he is not on restriction. When hanging out V/[redacted] would often invite CSSN MIGUEL and CSSN Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG 95, to her barracks room. CSSN MIGUEL stated V/[redacted] and CSSN GILLESPIE began dating in late MAY24, and their relationship ended in DEC24.

4. CSSN MIGUEL described the relationship between V/[redacted] and CSSN GILLESPIE as a being like soulmates. CSSN MIGUEL noted they understood each other deeply, shared similar emotions, and were extremely compatible. CSSN MIGUEL said the relationship between CSSN GILLESPIE and V/[redacted] because their personalities did not align. CSSN MIGUEL added that V/[redacted] initiated the breakup to focus on herself, which CSSN GILLESPIE agreed to. CSSN MIGUEL that he often served a bridge between the two. According to CSSN MIGUEL, V/[redacted] would sometimes states how she misses CSSN GILLESPIE during conversations.

5. CSSN MIGUEL described V/[redacted] as a very emotional person with a traumatic past. CSSN MIGUEL recalled that in MAY24, V/[redacted] went to the bar alone, became intoxicated and later mention having an "episode". When asked CSSN MIGUEL what he meant by "episodes" he clarified that V/[redacted] has had mental health episodes. CSSN MIGUEL stated V/[redacted] would occasionally have episodes where she seemed mentally detached or unresponsive. During these times, she would start looking around and stop replying to everyone. CSSN MIGUEL noted CSSN GILLESPIE would have to constantly talk to her to bring her back to reality. Since knowing her, CSSN MIGUEL stated he witnessed three such episodes. He confirmed that V/[redacted] takes medication but have to be closely monitored to avoid her from overdosing. CSSN MIGUEL emphasizes V[redacted] has a traumatic family history, which could explain her mental health challenges.

6. CSSN MIGUEL stated while he was on restriction, V[redacted] failed to show up for work, when he was released from restriction and retrieved his phone back, he noticed a text message from V[redacted] thanking him for his support and friendship. Once off restriction, CSSN MIGUEL reconnected with CSSN GILLESPIE and was excited to see him. CSSN GILLESPIE told CSSN MIGUEL, V[redacted] was no longer communicating with him, possibly because she was unsure about continuing a relationship with either ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95, or CSSN GILLESPIE. CSSN GILLESPIE advised CSSN MIGUEL he asked V/[redacted] about returning his motorcycle helmet. CSSN MIGUEL also reported CSSN GILLESPIE advised him V/[redacted] was missing. CSSN MIGUEL stated he was already aware of the information after overhearing a conversation at work. CSSN MIGUEL stated he overheard that V[redacted] had last been seen with CSSN Jeremiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, in his barracks room, as reported by command. CSSN GILLESPIE also told CSSN MIGUEL that V[redacted] had expressed a desire to leave the Navy, which CSSN MIGUEL initially took as a joke. However, CSSN MIGUEL began to feel that things he was hearing were not adding up. He concluded that if someone doesn't want to be found, as V[redacted] appeared to be, by not answering calls or texts, it is likely because they don't want to be found.

7. CSSN MIGUEL advised his last official conversation with V[redacted] was 24MAY25. At the conclusion of the interview CSSN MIGUEL signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure to obtain copies of the text messages between him and V/[redacted]; Enclosure (B) pertains. CSSN MIGUEL provided RA with five (5) screenshot photos of text messages between him and CSSN [redacted], all of which were placed on a CD-R; Enclosure (C) pertains. Five (5) photos were placed on a photo template; Enclosure (D) pertains.

8. There is nothing further to report.

RESULTS OF INITIAL INTERVIEW OF ET3 DANIEL RICH, USN

1. On 01Jun25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Jessica GOKEY interviewed ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95) regarding his knowledge of the whereabouts of V/[redacted] As background, CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted]), USN, DDG 95 and CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, were placed into a Unauthorized Absence (UA) status subsequent to 29May25, after failing to report to work. ET3 RICH was identified as an ex-boyfriend of V/[redacted].

2. ET3 RICH stated he dated V/[redacted] for approximately three (3) weeks. ET3 RICH explained V/[redacted] ended their relationship approximately one (1) month prior, citing she had too much going on in her life. ET3 RICH stated that when he dated V/[redacted] she routinely shared here location with him and he could track her phone. ET3 RICH stated that on Wednesday, 28May25, into Thursday, 29May25, he and HT3 Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG 95, (another or V/[redacted]'s ex-boyfriends) went searching for V/[redacted] because they were worried about her when her phone seemed to power off. ET3 RICH stated he and HT3 GILLESPIE along with Naval Station Norfolk Base Security Forces went to CSSN COPELAND's barracks room in the early morning hours (approximately 0400) of 29May25 as that was the last location of her pone. ET3 RICH said they discovered neither V/[redacted] nor S/COPELAND present in the room. When asked about his relationship with HT3 GILLESPIE, ET3 RICH said he and GILLIESPIE get along fine even though they both dated V/[redacted] ET3 RICH said he was told from command V/[redacted] was located along with S/COPELAND after he and HT3 GILLESPIE looked for her Wednesday, 28May25 into Thursday, 29May25.

3. ET3 RICH explained V/[redacted]'s father is in prison for assaulting V/[redacted] when she was younger. ET3 stated V/[redacted] is very threatened by her father and is scared for when he is released from prison. ET3 RICH said V/[redacted] has a strained relationship with her mother and doesnot talk to her often. However, ET3 RICH said V/[redacted] speaks with her aunt often.

4. ET3 RICH said V/[redacted] suffers from some type of depression related issues as he would help her regulate her prescribed medication. ET3 RICH stated he was worried that she would take too much and hurt herself. When asked where V/[redacted] would go if she were to seek mental health treatment, ET3 RICH stated she would go to Naval Medical Center Portsmouth, VA.

5. When asked about finances, ET3 RICH stated to his knowledge, V/[redacted]

GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH COPELAND CSSN/ E-3 USN	R.C.M. 701(a) DISCLOSURE

On 5 September 2025, CDR Lauren Mayo and LT Christopher Dempsey, JAGC, USN, interviewed ET3 Daniel Rich, USN, in the presence of Ms. Marie Rendell and Special Agent Jessica Gokey, NCIS, at RLSO MIDLANT. The following is a summary of the interaction and is not intended to be verbatim:

ET3 Rich received a call from CS3 A.R. at 0214 on 29 May 2025 that woke him up. He stated she sounded was like she was having a panic attack. She was frantic and crying. She kept repeatedly stating that she needed to be picked up as soon as possible. At some point, a male who he later assumed to be CSSN Copeland, took the phone and asked how far away he was. It was not clear if the phone was passed to him or taken from her. ET3 Rich told the male that he would be there in about 10 minutes. The male replied "all right" and CS3 A.R. was then put back on the phone. She continued to be frantic and repeatedly stated she needed to be picked up. She also told ET3 Rich that she loved him. ET3 Rich hung up after telling her he was on the way.

While the male was on the phone with ET3 Rich, his tone was frantic as well, although not as frantic as CS3 A.R.

CS3 A.R. has had panic attacks in ET3 Rich's presence before. ET3 Rich opined that one possible trigger for her panic attacks would be a sexual advance.

ET3 Rich stated he had previously speculated that CS3 A.R. was outside based solely on the location of her phone according to her shared location. He advised he only believed that he heard car noises in the background because of that belief and that the background noise he heard could very well have been something else.

ET3 Rich also advised he had learned only after speaking with CS3 A.R.'s roommate later on that CS3 A.R. had lost her room key. He did not recall CS3 A.R. mentioning anything to him about having lost her room key or being locked out of her room on the phone call. He only recalled her repeatedly stating that she needed to be picked up.

RESULTS OF TELEPHONIC INTERVIEW OF BRIAN TEELEZ MENDEZ, CIV

1. On 13Jun25, Reporting Agent (RA) telephonically interviewed Brian TEELEZ MENDEZ, CIV, regarding Instagram messages received from CSSN [redacted] ([redacted]), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95). RA identified themself verbally. RA interviewed TEELEZ MENDEZ telephonically due to residing in Illinois.

2. TEELEZ MENDEZ stated in May 2025, he received Instagram messages from V/[redacted] stating, "I just don't like my chain of command my division it's toxic as fuck." TEELEZ MENDEZ stated he had not heard from V/[redacted] since 20May25. TEELEZ MENDEZ provided RA with two (2) screenshots of Instagram messages, which were subsequently placed onto a photograph template and appended as Enclosure (A). RA appended two (2) photographs of Instagram messages onto a Digital Video Disc-Recordable (DVD-R); Enclosure (B) pertains.

GROSS DESCRIPTION: Note: exam limited by decomposition changes.

SKIN: Tattoos. Partially skeletonized.

SEROUS CAVITIES: No adhesions or fluid accumulation. The diaphragm is intact. The organs are in normal anatomic position.

NECK ORGANS: Layered dissection reveals unremarkable soft tissue of the anterior neck. The larynx and hyoid are intact. The thyroid gland has a normal size and shape.

HEART: 77 g. The coronary arteries arise normally and have a right dominant posterior circulation. There is no significant atherosclerosis. The valves are normally formed. The foramen ovale is closed. The great vessels are unremarkable and free of obvious injury.

AORTA: The aorta and its major branches are normally distributed, with no significant atherosclerosis.

LIVER: 299 g. The liver capsule is smooth and glistening, covering red-purple congested parenchyma.

GALLBLADDER: No bile. No stones were identified.

SPLEEN: 80 g. The splenic capsule is smooth, glistening, and intact. There is unremarkable underlying red-purple parenchyma.

LYMPH NODES: No lymphadenopathy is appreciated.

PANCREAS: Unremarkable.

ADRENALS: Examination limited due to decomposition changes; no evident lesions present.

GI TRACT: The tongue is absent. The esophagus is lined by gray-white smooth mucosa and courses to the stomach without focal lesions. The stomach is empty. A small amount of yellow chyme is present in the small bowel, and soft brown stool in the large bowel. An unremarkable appendix is identified in the right lower quadrant.

BLADDER: Contains no urine. Unremarkable mucosa and wall.

GENITALIA: Unremarkable uterus, fallopian tubes, and ovaries.

BRAIN AND MENINGES: 784 g. Complete loss of normal architecture. The brain is a brow/gray soft tissue.

SKULL: Intact.

MUSCULOSKELETAL: Aside from the postmortem changes, the bony framework, supporting musculature, and soft tissues are grossly unremarkable. The cervical spinal column is removed, visualized, and it is intact.

MICROSCOPIC DESCRIPTION:
Liver (Slide 2): Interpretation is limited due to postmortem artifact. No evidence of inflammation, steatosis, or necrosis.

Kidney (Slide 2): Interpretation is limited due to postmortem artifact. Well-distributed tubules and glomeruli with no histopathological abnormalities.

Lungs (Slide 1): Interpretation is limited due to postmortem artifact. Edema and no other significant histopathological changes were observed.

TOXICOLOGY:
Samples were submitted for toxicological analysis. See Certificate of Analysis.
Waiting for another toxicology analysis. Still pending.

DNA AND FINGERPRINTS:
Samples of blood and fingerprints were taken and retained.

POSTMORTEM PHOTOGRAPHY:
Postmortem photographs were taken and retained.

EVIDENCE:
Suitcase, personal effects, DNA card x2, patch from inside the suitcase, PERK kit (219M00468), round disk from inside the suitcase, possible string from inside the suitcase, paper from inside the suitcase, fingernails, CD with exam photos to law enforcement. Second CD with exam photos to law enforcement (Norfolk PD).

Summary of Circumstances:

Angelina Resendiz was a 21-year-old woman, missing since May 29, who was found inside a suitcase in a wooded area on June 9. At autopsy, her body was partially skeletonized and relatively complete. No acute trauma was noted. Postmortem toxicology was only positive for ethanol. Ethanol may be postmortem, antemortem, or both. If antemortem, the low level would not explain the death. The degree of decomposition precluded a comprehensive assessment of soft tissue injuries or natural disease. Still, there was no indication that natural disease or drugs played a role in the death of this young woman. Suffocation cannot be ruled out at the autopsy. A definitive cause of death was not determined at autopsy.

CONSENT FOR AUTOPSY

Consented and reviewed by Dr. Nemanja RODIC. Consenter was, Esmeralda CASTLE. The relationship of the individual, providing consent for autopsy, to the decedent is mother. Type of autopsy was complete, including brain.

PRIOR POSTMORTEM PROCEDURES

Following macroscopic examination there was NO EVIDENCE of organ donation. Following macroscopic examination there was EVIDENCE of prior autopsy.

EXTERNAL EXAMINATION

The body was that of a well-developed & well-nourished female. The body weighed about 120 pounds, was 4 feet 5 inches in height, and appeared compatible with the reported age of 21 years [calculated body mass index 20.6(1)]. There were no personal effects identified. The body was cold. The body was in state of late decomposition marked by skin discoloration, desquamation, and skeletonization. Rigor and lividity designation deferred. The scalp hair was black. The eye examination deferred. The nose examination deferred. The lips examination deferred. Some upper and lower teeth were present with good dental hygiene. Dentures were not present. The skin was free of any significant abrasions, bruises, lacerations, lymphadenopathy, or burns. Examination of the neck revealed no evidence of injury. No injury of the ribs or sternum was evident externally; negative for deformity and increased anterior-posterior diameter. The abdomen was grossly unremarkable. The extremities were grossly unremarkable. Leg circumference 10 cm from medial malleolus were, 20 cm on the right, and 20 cm on the left. Negative for pitting edema. The fingernails examination deferred. Negative for palpable lymph nodes. Negative for joint deformity, abnormal mobility, and non-therapeutic punctures or needles track marks. The external genitalia were those of a normal adult female. The posterior torso was without note; negative for sacral decubitus ulcer. Negative for tenting of skin. Negative for sunken eyes.

EVIDENCE OF THERAPY:

ID band with decedent name and case number (T-246-25 T2025-00840) were identified on patient body bag and bilateral lower extremities. Negative for nasogastric tube, central venous line, intravenous line, PEG tube, endotracheal tube, and Foley catheter.

INTERNAL EXAMINATION

BODY CAVITIES:

The body was re-opened by the usual Y-shaped thoraco-abdominal incision and the chest plate was removed. No adhesions nor abnormal collections of fluid were present in any of the body cavities. The subcutaneous fat layer of the abdominal wall was less than 1" thick. There were no abnormalities of the omentum and mesenteries. There was no internal evidence of blunt force or penetrating injury to the thoraco-abdominal region.

CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

The head was normocephalic. External examination revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for dry surface of the galea. The dura showed no lesions. The leptomeninges showed no lesions. The cerebral hemispheres were symmetrical and showed no lesions. The brain base showed no lesions. The cerebellum showed no lesions. The brainstem showed no lesions. The superior spinal cord showed no lesions. The eyes were not submitted for microscopic examination.

NECK:

Examination of the soft tissues of the neck, including strap muscles, thyroid gland and large vessels revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for trauma of the gingiva, lips, or oral mucosa.

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM:

The epicardial fat was mild. The coronary ostia were normally positioned. The foramen ovale was closed. The coronary arteries arose normally, followed the usual distribution and were free of grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis of the right coronary artery, left common/main coronary artery, left anterior descending artery, and circumflex artery. The chambers, valves, leaflets, and chordae tendinae exhibited the usual size-position relationship and were unremarkable. The myocardium was red-brown, firm and unremarkable; the atrial and ventricular septa were intact; negative for infarcts/lesions of the myocardium. The endocardium was smooth and thin; negative endocardial hemorrhages and endocardial discoloration. The aorta was fairly elastic and of even caliber throughout with its major branches distributed normally, followed the usual course and were widely patent. Negative for significant abdominal/thoracic aorta atherosclerosis. Negative for tortuosity or widening of the thoracic segment. Negative for dilation of the lower abdominal segment. Negative for aortic aneurysm. The venae cavae and their major tributaries returned to the heart in the usual distribution and were free of thrombi. No focal endocardial, valvular, and myocardial lesions were seen.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM:

Scant secretions were found in the lower bronchial and upper respiratory passages. The mucosa has pink-tan postmortem discoloration. The upper airway was clear of debris and foreign material; the mucosal surfaces were smooth, yellow-tan and unremarkable. The pleural surfaces were smooth, glistening, well-expanded, and unremarkable bilaterally. Lungs were atelectatic and subcrepitant. The pulmonary parenchyma was red-purple in color, congested, and edematous. There was dependent congestion and postmortem softening. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions/scarring. The pulmonary arteries were normally developed The bronchi were patent with no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The lungs were cut fresh.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM:

The hepatic capsule was smooth, glistening and intact, covering dark red-brown parenchyma with minimal congestion. Serial sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The extrahepatic biliary tree was patent, without evidence of calculi. The gallbladder was present and showed thin wall, velvety mucosa, and no calculi. The portal vein, hepatic arteries, and hepatic veins were patent.

ALIMENTARY TRACT:

The mucosa was pink-tan with normal mucosal folds. No tablets or capsules could be discerned in the stomach or the stomach contents. No residual medications were identified. The external and in situ appearance of the small intestine and colon were grossly and palpably unremarkable. The small intestine and colon were opened along the anti-mesenteric border to reveal soft liquid fecal material in the small bowel and soft semi-formed, thick green stool in the colon. The small bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The vermiform appendix was grossly and palpably unremarkable. The large bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan peri-circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The distal large bowel contents were stool. The superior mesenteric artery was free of grossly identifiable and palpable atherosclerosis. The pancreas occupied a normal position, had a normal pink-tan lobulated parenchyma, and the ducts were patent, not ectatic. No parenchymal calcifications; negative for necrosis or trauma.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM:

The red-brown surface of renal capsules were rough and uneven to touch. The ureters were patent. The renal arteries showed no grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis. The cortices were sharply delineated from the medullary pyramids, which were red-purple to tan and unremarkable. The calyces, pelves and ureters were unremarkable. The urinary bladder contained minimal urine; the mucosa was gray-tan and grossly unremarkable.

LYMPHORETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM:

The spleen had a smooth, intact capsule covering red-purple, moderately firm parenchyma; the lymphoid follicles were unremarkable. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The regional lymph nodes appeared normal. The bone marrow was dark red. The lymph nodes were not enlarged. The thymus was not identified.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM:

The thyroid was symmetrical in appearance and sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The breast tissue was sectioned in the usual manner and contained small amount of white fibrous tissue; negative for significant abnormality.

MUSCULOSKELETAL SYSTEM:

The diaphragm was intact. Skeletal muscles were red-brown and firm. The calvarium was intact. The vertebral columns showed normal curvature. The ribs were negative for fractures. The vertebral bodies were negative for fractures. No bone or joint abnormalities were noted.

AUTOPSY PROCEDURES AND ANCILLARY TESTING

The approach to autopsy dissection was M. Letulle's Technique (en bloc from tongue to rectum). There were not special dissections performed. Tissue retained in stock jars until signout. Additional samples taken as follows, homogenized viscera. Ancillary testing, toxicology.

HISTOLOGIC SECTIONS (2&3):

HISTOLOGIC SECTIONS (2&3)

Trimmed from larger formalin-fixed blocks:

A. Head cutis ventral, multiple fragments;

B. Head cutis dorsa, multiple fragments;

C. Neck cutis ventral, multiple fragments;

D. Neck cutis dorsa, multiple fragments;

E. Thorax cutis ventral, multiple fragments;

F. Thorax cutis dorsa, multiple fragments;

G. Right upper extremity, ventral, multiple fragments;

H. Right upper extremity, dorsal, multiple fragments;

I. Left upper extremity ventral, multiple fragments;

J. Left upper extremity dorsa, multiple fragments;

K. Right lower extremity, ventral, multiple fragments;

L. Right lower extremity, dorsal, multiple fragments;

M. Left lower extremity ventral, multiple fragments;

N. Left lower extremity dorsa, multiple fragments;

O. Central nervous system, multiple fragments;

P. Viscera, multiple fragments; and

Q. Additional viscera, multiple fragments.

MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM: Sections showed cardiac parenchyma and stroma free of significant interstitial-type fibrosis and nuclear & cytoplasmic hypertrophy, acute & chronic inflammation, hemorrhage, and necrosis. Sections of coronary arteries were free of significant cholesterol clefts and dystrophic calcifications within narrowed vascular walls. Sections of aorta were free of significant cholesterol clefts deposits. Negative for malignant cells.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM: Bilateral sections of pulmonary parenchyma and stroma notable were free of significant congestion, variably sized & increased alveolar spaces, acute inflammation, chronic inflammation, fibrosis, hemorrhage, and hemosiderin-laden macrophages. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Sections of hilar lymph nodes showed benign primary follicles. Sections of larynx were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM: Sections showed hepatic parenchyma and stroma free of significant acute & chronic inflammation, macrosteatosis, glycogenated nuclei, and fibrosis. Negative for malignant cells.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM: Sections showed bilateral renal parenchyma and stroma notable for medial hypertrophy of medium sized vessels and interstitial/subcapsular lymphocytic inflammation, but free of significant basement membrane thickening, hyaline change, thyroidization, and interstitial fibrosis. Section of urinary bladder were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Sections of genitourinary tract were histologically unremarkable. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Negative for malignant cells.

ALIMENTARY TRACT: Sections showed histologically unremarkable pancreatobilliary and tubular gastrointestinal tract. Negative for malignant cells.

RETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma, free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

INTEGUMENTARY SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for malignant cells.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for adrenal hemorrhage. Negative for malignant cells.

MEDICAL RECORDS REVIEW

Accompanying medical information collected from pre-autopsy verbal report by _Esmeralda CASTLE, the mother of the decedent, was notable for following medical findings:

Past Medical History: negative for suicidal attempts; equivocal for prior past suicidal ideation (10/2024);

Surgical Procedures: none;

Medical Laboratory: antemortem COVID-19 negative test.

Additional Notes: Clinical symptoms/signs, not in acute distress (5/28/2025-5/29/2025), asymptomatic (interim). The decedent did not receive blood transfusions or lived in Europe prior to death. The decedent was vaccinated against COVID-19 prior to death. The decedent had been consuming alcoholic beverages (wine and liquor)/tobacco (vaped) prior to death. The decedent had not been consuming illegal habit-forming drugs prior to death. The decedent did not have history of cancer prior to death. External and macroscopic images taken for posterity. Examination limited by autolysis and tissue preservation. Preliminary diagnosis called to and confirmed by Esmeralda CASTLE on 7/3/2025 at 1615. See accompanying Axis 3327991 report. Final diagnosis called to and confirmed by family friend on 8/1/2025 at 1615.

OPINION:

Based collectively on my autopsy findings herein as well as my review of the accompanying submitted medical information, in the case of this 21-year-old female, [redacted], the manner of death is deferred (1,4-6,&9). I reserve the right to amend my opinion(s) upon the receipt of additional material (7).

Comment: "The following statement applies to tests, i.e. to dye(s), chemical solution stains, and Class I IHC reagents and kits. Dye(s), chemical solution stains are defined in the Code of Federal Regulations as "mixtures of synthetic or natural dyes or nondye chemicals in solutions used in staining cells and tissues for diagnostic histopathology, cytopathology, or hematology" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1850). This definition encompasses many of the common materials found in a conventional histopathology laboratory, such as routine hematoxylin and eosin stains, as well as special stains like trichrome, iron, and Grocott-Gömöri's methenamine silver, among others, and are considered Class I devices subject to general controls. Class I IHC reagents and kits are defined as those that "provide the pathologist with adjunctive diagnostic information that may be incorporated into the pathologist's report, but that is not ordinarily reported to the clinician as an independent finding," noting that "these IHC's are used after the primary diagnosis of tumor (neoplasm) has been made by conventional histopathology using nonimmunologic histochemical stains, such as hematoxylin and eosin" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). The 1998 final rule further describes these as "adjunctive tests [to conventional histopathologic diagnostic examination] and presenting a low risk to public health."37 An example of a Class I IHC specifically mentioned in the IHC reagents and kit regulation is keratin (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). Many other Class I IHC reagents and kits can be found by searching for the "NJT" product code on the FDA establishment registration and device listing database.47 These IVDs are exempt from premarket notification/510(k) submission, although they are still subject to FDA general controls and QS/CGMP requirements. Most IHC stains used by anatomic pathologists are considered diagnostic markers and therefore are categorized as Class I by the FDA. The tests herein have not been cleared or approved for the specific use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. FDA does not require this test to go through premarket FDA review. These tests are used for clinical purposes. It should not be regarded as investigational or for research. This laboratory is certified under the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendments 1988 (CLIA) as qualified to perform high complexity clinical laboratory testing. All stains and tests are performed with general controls, i.e. positive and negative control reactions as necessary, and all controls show appropriate reactivity. However, stains and tests have not been validated on decalcified tissues. Results should be interpreted with caution given the likelihood of false negativity on decalcified specimens. Certain tests utilize Class I Analyte-Specific Reagents (ASR); these tests are developed, and their performance characteristics determined by this laboratory. ASRs used in this laboratory have been established and verified for accuracy and precision.(8)"

But again Please remember that what I like to do in order for the due diligence we observe is that after the military final autopsy document becomes available ask miss missus cancelled to submit it to our secure Dropbox shared folder and then send us an e-mail at sometime in the two-minute whenever the report is available maybe like 10 weeks from now or 16 weeks from now whenever OK and then I will review that and then either then or correct the report as needed OK so the so microscopic examination of multiple sections on this case showed no evidence of any blunt force trauma so that's something I think was important to rule in or out the toxicology studies were pertinently positive and there was a significant level of ethanol or alcohol there was detected and I think that is a significant finding now this upon microscopic examination on the organ systems there's no other changes either on microscope events or inflammation infection or cancer of any kind so I think the major other cause of that has been have been formally ruled out so this substance is detected in the bodily fluid I think is significant in the quantity and quality of it and I think that's something that informs the cause of death in this case um so in other words you know from our end we don't see any evidence of foul play as far as UM trauma to the remains and I think this is again let me just I'm careful what kind of language I'm using here I think this is suggestive of an accidental ingestion OK now um again what I'd like to do in order for all of the due diligence be observed is that once the the military is available I will review that material and then appropriately if I identify any additional diagnostic features that can help better classify the findings will attend the mandatory OK do you do you have any questions for me from your end yes so a couple questions um does the the findings or are there any other pending tests that that need to be deducted or awaiting results that will impact your final report the due diligence worked that I wanted to perform from our end is available is completed and but when and if the final autopsy documents from the first examination becomes available I'll be very happy to review that and again because you may be sometime in the future like a month two months maybe even six months depending on how complex this is on there and um whatever that is I just asked you and the family yeah we we did I I wanted to check we did open the Dropbox folder OK their e-mail maybe I should actually add you let me just add you on on that e-mail as well because you are you know the point of contact here and and then once you do that because it may be again sometime in the future just please drop me an e-mail OK and say something like hey doctor Aldrich dismiss cancel or miss poor yeah you're missus amber esmeralda I'm ibra so esmeralda is is miss castle and then my name is Debra I'm her colleague from law school yes her friend got it OK so let me see here then please just send me an e-mail that way I can see that it's in the archive that's the only problem with the Dropbox automatically not familiar it's there and then within about a week or two I will schedule us for follow up or attended or amend their correct report as needed OK the second question that I had was are any of the tests are able to indicate or any of the anything that you were able to see and able to show whether there was any strangulation or any type of of anything of that nature I took very meticulous examination both externally of the remains and systematic microscopic examination to rule out even some small or difficult to detect ecchymosis or petechiae or other force or signs of one force trauma and I look very carefully there there's none so I and considered it formally ruled that out OK so sometimes by external examination you cannot see the you know the evidence of trauma but but this way that I performed it there's just simply no way of missing it because I'm looking at singular cells at that level right and if there's any kind of level of of change in I'm I'm I'm able to see it now there is that there has been formally considered and ruled out so I will add you to the to do a Dropbox share folder and let's then be communication whenever the report becomes available OK and once that report comes out we'll as well as I'll call her as me I'm sorry we'll miss castle get a copy of of your findings or will or will she get a copy of this additional report after I just feel like she's going to ask him no I'm gonna explain this to thank you so we're going to release our report automatically this is our standard operating procedure we're gonna release our reported automatically to to to her to Monday morning OK and then electronically and then they will mail her a hard copy those are typically dashed that same went Friday OK perfect and then once we reviewed the additional material we will follow the same sequence OK we'll release the report basically as if it's a new report one thing we have you know that's confirmed so that's fine but to confirm the address should we mail her report to [redacted] yes that's it OK wonderful thank you so much and lesbian communication then the first report OK thank you so much thank you bye bye

NAVY-MARINE CORPS TRIAL JUDICIARY
CENTRAL JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

UNITED STATES v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3 USN	DEFENSE MOTION TO SUPPRESS (3 and 6 June 2025 Statements) 26 November 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to 10 U.S.C. § 831(b), Rules for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 903(b)(3), and Military Rules of Evidence (M.R.E.) 304 and 305, the Defense moves this Court to suppress CSSN Copeland's statements made during his 3 June 2025 and 6 June 2025 NCIS interviews.

BURDEN

Upon motion by the Defense to suppress statements of the Accused under Mil. R. Evid. 304, the prosecution has the burden of establishing the admissibility of the statement. Mil. R. Evid. 304(f)(6). The military judge must find by a preponderance of the evidence that the Accused's statement was made voluntarily before the statement may be admitted into evidence. Mil. R. Evid. 304(f)(7).

FACTS

1. CSSN Copeland is charged, inter alia, with committing premeditated murder of CS3 A.R., in violation of Article 118, UCMJ. (Charge Sheet).

3 June Interview

2. On 3 June 2025, CSSN Copeland was interrogated by NCIS agents about the unauthorized absence and disappearance of CS3 A.R. (Enclosure A).

3. As soon as the recording of his interview starts, CSSN Copeland is seen with his head down on the desk resting it in his hands. (Enclosure B to Defense Mot. to Suppress Phone; timestamp 00:00:00).

4. In total, the duration of his time in the interview room was approximately 3 hours and 17 min, starting at 2113 EST and ending at 0030 EST. (Enclosure D to Defense Mot. to Suppress Phone).

5. After collecting biographical information but before reading CSSN Copeland his rights, NCIS provided CSSN Copeland his Article 31(b) rights, notifying him that he is suspected of committing only unauthorized absence and false official statement, in violation of Articles 86 and 107, UCMJ. There was no mention of Article 118, murder, or any offense that includes harm to CS3 A.R. (Enclosures B, E to Defense Mot. to Suppress Phone).

6. During the interrogation, one of the NCIS Agents stated NCIS' main purpose for interviewing CSSN Copeland stating, "Being UA is not a crime that NCIS investigates . . . we're really worried about [CS3 A.R.], which is why we want to talk to you." The agent proceeded to ask about CS3 A.R.'s mental state when he was last with her and where to find her. (Enclosure B to Defense Mot. to Suppress Phone; timestamp 01:12:00).

7. Earlier in the interview, NCIS informed CSSN Copeland that NCIS had been executing a Command Authorized Search and Seizure (CASS) of CSSN Copeland's barracks room that day, 3 June 2025, because it was CS3 A.R.'s last known location. (Enclosure B to Defense Mot. to Suppress Phone).

8. During the search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room on 3 June 2025, NCIS discovered what they identified as blood in CSSN Copeland's closet and on his bathroom sink. (Enclosure G to Defense Mot. to Suppress Search of Room).

9. Although it could easily be seen, CSSN Copeland expressed to agents several times throughout the entire interview that he was tired and wanted to go home. (Enclosure B to Defense Mot. to Suppress Phone).

6 June Interview

10. On 6 June 2025, NCIS brought CSSN Copeland back to their offices to take a polygraph examination and conduct another interview regarding CS3 A.R.'s disappearance. (Enclosures B, C; timestamp 05:30).

11. In trying to convince CSSN Copeland to take a polygraph examination, the NCIS agents stated, "If this goes well and they say, 'Hey, like we don't have to worry about him anymore. He's not on our, you know, interesting list of people anymore, not the most interesting man in the world.' Like, we can sort of put you on the back burner. That invasiveness will likely decrease a significant amount." (Enclosure D).

12. CSSN Copeland declined the polygraph examination and stated that he has not even had time to sleep; expressing concerns with his mental health "going downhill". In response to this, the NCIS agents proceeded with trying to convince CSSN Copeland to at least proceed with a second interrogation. (Enclosure D; pgs 7-11).

13. NCIS did not even mention the Article 31(b) Rights Advisement form until approximately 10 minutes into them speaking with CSSN Copeland. NCIS did not start going over the form with him until approximately 14 minutes into the interview. (Enclosure C).

14. Before NCIS went through his Article 31(b) rights, CSSN Copeland cut through their conversation and asked about the Article 31(b) rights form that was referenced earlier in the conversation but never gotten to. (Enclosure C).

15. The Article 31(b) rights form shows that NCIS notified CSSN Copeland that he is suspected of "making a false official statement and knowledge of the possible death of CSSN [A.R.]." Once again, there was no mention of Article 118, murder, or any offense that involved him harming CS3 A.R. (Enclosure E).

16. NCIS told CSSN Copeland that he was not specifically suspected of killing CS3 A.R.'s at minute 15:30 of the interview. (Enclosure C).

17. However, after reading CSSN Copeland his rights, the agents stated that people fear CS3 A.R. may be dead and directly asked CSSN Copeland, "Did you do that?" (Enclosure C; timestamp 19:00).

18. The agent even said at one point in the interview that all fingers seems to point to CSSN Copeland solely because he was the last person to see CS3 A.R. alive. (Enclosure C; timestamp 30:00).

19. Additionally, the interview summary the agents drafted states that CSSN Copeland is a "person of interest in the disappearance and death of [CS3 A.R.]." (Enclosure B).

20. Throughout the interview and before CSSN Copeland answered either of the NCIS agents' questions about CS3 A.R.'s disappearance or his prior statements, CSSN Copeland made it clear to the agents that he was extremely tired, was going through a lot of stressful personal situations, and thought it would be better to speak with them at a later date. (Enclosure C).

21. Between 4-5 June 2025, CDR Lauren Mayo, Chief, Office of Special Trial Counsel (OSTC) were provided updates by NCIS. (Enclosure F).

LAW

Article 31 prohibits a person subject to the U.C.M.J. from interrogating or eliciting a statement from a servicemember accused or suspected of an offense without first (1) informing them of the nature of the accusation, (2) advising them that they have the right to remain silent, and (3) advising them that anything they say may be used against them later at court-martial. 10 U.S.C. §31(b). These rights warnings are required when (1) a person subject to the U.C.M.J. (2) interrogates or requests any statement (3) from an accused or person suspected of an offense, and (4) the statements pertain to the offense of which the person is suspected or accused. United States v. Jones, 73 M.J. 357, 361 (C.A.A.F. 2014). "No statement obtained from any person in violation of this Article […] may be received in evidence against him in a trial by court-martial." 10 U.S.C. § 831(d). Military Rules of Evidence 304 and 305 implement the Code's prescription.

a. Rights advisements pursuant to Article 31(b) must be provided by any person subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

For the purposes of Article 31 and Mil. R. Evid. 305, a "person subject to the code" means a "person subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice" and "includes […] a knowing agent of any such person or military unit." Mil. R. Evid. 305; see also 10 U.S.C. §31(b).

b. Military questioners must warn a servicemember who is suspected of or accused of an offense when the questioner is participating in an official law enforcement or disciplinary investigation or inquiry.

Military questioners are required to warn servicemembers under Article 31(b) if the servicemember is suspected of an offense and "the person conducting the questioning is participating in an official law enforcement or disciplinary investigation or inquiry." Jones, 73 M.J. at 361 (internal quotation marks omitted)(citations omitted). Whether a person is suspected of an offense is a question that "is answered by considering all the facts and circumstances at the time of the interview to determine whether the military questioner believed or reasonably should have believed that the servicemember questioned committed an offense." United States v. Good, 32 M.J. 105, 108 (C.A.A.F. 1991)(citations omitted).

Courts must consider "all the facts and circumstances at the time of the interview to determine whether the military questioner was acting or could reasonably be considered to be acting in an official law-enforcement or disciplinary capacity." Id. Where there is a mixed purpose for questioning "the matter must be resolved on a case- by-case basis, looking at the totality of the circumstances, including whether the questioning was designed to evade the accused's constitutional or codal rights." United States v. Cohen, 63 M.J. 45, 50 (C.A.A.F. 2006).

The purpose of the requirement to inform the accused of the nature of the accusation is to orient an accused as to allow him to intelligently weigh the consequences of responding to an investigator's questions. It is not necessary to spell out the details of the alleged misconduct, it suffices if the accused is made aware of the general nature of the allegations involved. United States v. Reynolds, 37 C.M.R. 23, 25 (C.M.A. 1966) (citations omitted).

c. A statement obtained in violation of Article 31 is involuntary and inadmissible against an Accused at court-martial pursuant to Mil. R. Evid. 304 and 305.

Under Mil. R. Evid. 305, a "statement obtained from the accused in violation of an accused's rights under Article 31 is involuntary and is therefore inadmissible against the accused," subject to a handful of exceptions. Mil. R. Evid. 305(c)(1). The Government bears the burden to establish compliance with the rights warning requirements by a preponderance of the evidence. Mil. R. Evid. 304(e); see also United States v. Simpson, 54 M.J. 281, 283 (C.A.A.F. 2000).

Under M.R.E. 305(b)(2), an interrogation includes "any formal or informal questioning in which an incriminating response either is sought or is a reasonable consequence of such questioning." Not all questions from law enforcement are found to constitute an "interrogation" that requires law enforcement officials to provide rights warnings to the accused. See Rhode Island v. Innis, 446 U.S. 291, 301 (1980); United States v. Byers, 26 M.J. 132, 134 (C.M.A. 1988). In United States v. Eneliko, the court instructed lower courts to consider how comments made prior to right's advisement can impact an accused's decision to waive his or her rights. No. 202400058, 2025 CCA LEXIS 410 *7 (N-M Ct. Crim. App. Aug. 28, 2025).

The voluntariness inquiry "involves an assessment of the totality of all the surrounding circumstances—both the characteristics of the accused and the details of the interrogation." United States v. Bubonics, 45 M.J. 93, 95 (C.A.A.F. 1996) (quoting Schneckeckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 226 (1961). There is no "talismanic definition of voluntariness" which is "mechanically applicable" to all statements. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. at 224 (citing Culombe v. Connecticut, 367 U.S. 568, 604-5 (1961)) (internal quotation marks omitted). Generally, our courts test for voluntariness by asking "whether the confession is the product of an essentially free and unconstrained choice by its maker." Bubonics, 45 M.J. at 95. "If, instead, the maker's will was overborne and his capacity for self-determination was critically impaired, use of his confession would offend due process." Id. (citing Culombe, 367 U.S. at 602).

An analysis of voluntariness includes several factors including age and education of the accused, nature of the questioning, the lack of advice regarding constitutional rights;[1] the mental condition, including psychological abnormality, and intelligence of the accused;[2] the length of the interrogation preceding the statement;[3] threats or inducements;[4] whether the accused had any prior experience with law enforcement questioning;[5] and use of lies, threats, or promises.[6] Again, a finding of voluntariness does not turn "on the presence or absence of a single controlling criterion," but "on a careful scrutiny on the surrounding circumstances."[7]

Coercion does not require physical violence, and words alone may suffice to overcome an accused's free will. "[T]he blood of the accused is not the only hallmark of an unconstitutional inquisition." Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 287 (1991). Coercion "need not depend upon actual violence by a government agent." Id. For example, in Garrity v. New Jersey, the Supreme Court rejected the voluntariness of a confession where the defendants, city police officers, were questioned concerning their alleged "fixing" of traffic tickets and advised by the state police that if they refused to answer questions, their employment could be terminated." 385 U.S. 493 (1967). The Court in Garrity reflected that the "option to lose their means of livelihood or pay the penalty of self-incrimination is the antithesis of free choice to

I. NCIS was required to read CSSN Copeland his Article 31(b) rights during both his 3 June 2025 and 6 June 2025 interviews.

The persons that were asking CSSN Copeland questions were NCIS agents; this includes both his 3 June 2025 and 6 June 2025 interviews. Furthermore, each interview was conducted within the NCIS office spaces. The law is well-settled that known law enforcement personnel are required to provide rights advisements to any servicemember they suspect of committing a crime. In this case, CSSN Copeland was a servicemember and before both interviews they suspected him of having something to do with CS3 A.R.'s disappearance, along with other criminal offenses. Thus, they were required to read him his rights for all offenses known and suspected.

II. All statements CSSN Copeland made to NCIS during his 3 June 2025 and 6 June 2025 interviews should be suppressed.

a. 3 June 2025 Interview

The 3 June 2025 interview statements should be suppressed. Despite the fact the NCIS agents read CSSN Copeland his Article 31(b) rights after going over his biographical information, they did not notify him of all charges they suspected him of committing. The agents only notified CSSN Copeland of committing UA and false official statements. CSSN Copeland was never read his rights for any act that involved harm to CS3 A.R., including murder. However, the NCIS agents thought this to be a probability. At one point, the agents even admitted that they do not investigate UA allegations and solely wanted to know about CS3 A.R.'s disappearance. The moment the agents brought CSSN Copeland into the interrogation room, they suspected him of having some involvement into her disappearance. At this point, CS3 A.R. was missing for approximately six days. With no one hearing from CS3 A.R., including her friends and family throughout that entire duration of time, any reasonable person would believe that she was more than likely dead or, at a minimum, severely harmed. Moreover, at this time the agents knew that CSSN Copeland was the last person to see her alive, had already started to execute a search of his barracks room pursuant to a CASS, and CSSN Copeland already made statements the agents believed were inconsistent with facts they knew to be true. The agents did not read him his rights for potentially harming CS3 A.R. because they did not want CSSN Copeland to know they suspected him of the crime and wanted him to provide them with information. Despite NCIS' goals in obtaining facts, that does not absolve them of ensuring CSSN Copeland's rights are upheld.

CSSN Copeland's statements were not voluntarily made. The Court must look at the totality of the circumstances surrounding the interrogation and how the statements were elicited. CSSN Copeland was interrogated in the dead of night for a duration of time that went past midnight. At the same time CSSN Copeland was extremely tired and wanted to leave and go home. Not only was this evident by the mere fact he immediately went to sleep before the interrogation and during every break in between, but CSSN Copeland also expressed this several times to the agents during the interrogation. Additionally, this interrogation was right on the hills of NCIS conducting a search of his barracks room for evidence pursuant to a search authorization. All of this the agents knew and acknowledged. Based on the circumstances surrounding this interrogation, nothing about it signaled that CSSN Copeland's statements were made voluntarily.

b. 6 June 2025 Interview

The 6 June 2025 interrogation statements should also be suppressed. Once again, CSSN Copeland was not provided Article 31(b) rights for any offense that involved harming CS3 A.R., including murder. Unlike prior to the interview on 3 June 2025, by this interview, NCIS had already searched CSSN Copeland's barracks room and found blood in his closet and on his bathroom sink. The blood in his barracks room, coupled with a person that has disappeared for now nine days, would make any reasonable person suspect CSSN Copeland of committing some offense that involved harming CS3 A.R. The NCIS agents suspected this but chose not to notify CSSN Copeland of such. The agents even at one point in the interrogation directly asked CSSN Copeland whether he caused CS3 A.R.'s death. The agent suggested that people will generally point the finger at CSSN Copeland because he was the last one to see CS3 A.R. alive. It is clear from the conversation prior to the NCIS agents reading CSSN Copeland his Article 31(b) rights that they valued getting information from him more than ensuring his rights were not violated because they chose not to notify him for what they truly suspected—CSSN Copeland killing CS3 A.R. Moreover, NCIS noted in its report that they had already notified trial counsel within the Office of the Special Trial Counsel (OSTC). This begs the question: Why would NCIS feel the need to notify OSTC prior to this interview, if they did not suspect a violation of a covered offense?

There is evidence that shows CSSN Copeland's statements during the 6 June 2025 interrogation were not made voluntarily. Similar to his 3 June 2025 interrogation, before CSSN Copeland answered any questions from the NCIS agents, he made it clear to them that he was extremely tired, that his mental health had been rapidly deteriorating, and that he did not want to be in the room with them at the time answering questions. Despite all these factors, the agents pressed forward with asking CSSN Copeland questions and even made the suggestion that by not answering questions he would in some way not care about them finding CS3 A.R. Coercion does not require physical violence. This was the NCIS agents' way of coercing CSSN Copeland into answering their questions, even if he did not want to. Furthermore, prior to CSSN Copeland being read his Article 31(b) rights, the NCIS agents had already asked him several incriminating questions, already suspecting him of the crimes they were asking questions about. CSSN Copeland interrupted the agents and inquired about the Article 31(b) rights form the agents referenced to several minutes prior that they never got around to giving him. CSSN Copeland's statements should be suppressed because the agents suspected CSSN Copeland of crimes but asked him questions that elicited incriminating statements without first providing him his rights. Like in Eneliko, those comments and questions were highly impactful, even coercive, in CSSN Copeland's decision to proceed with answering the agents' questions.

RELIEF REQUESTED

The Defense respectfully requests this Court to suppress CSSN Copeland's statements made during his 3 June 2025 and 6 June 2025 NCIS interviews.

S/COPELAND, JERMIAH TAYLOR/SN USN
M/B/NEE3/[redacted PII]

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Bernadette DUFFY conducted an interview of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) in regard to the Unauthorized Absence of CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted], USN, DDG-95 and himself.

2. This interview was audio and video recorded utilizing Case Cracker. A copy of the recording was subsequently saved to an optical disc and maintained with the case file. This report should not be treated as a verbatim or comprehensive representation of the interview; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. Prior to being interviewed, S/COPELAND was advised of his Article 31(b) Rights by use of Military Suspect's Acknowledgement and Waiver of Rights form for an alleged violation of Article 86 (Absence without Leave) and Article 107 (False Official Statements). S/COPELAND, with full understanding of his rights, elected to waive his right to remain silent; Enclosure (B) pertains.

4. S/COPELAND was asked to recall the events on the night of 28JUN25 and what transpired the following days. S/COPELAND stated he and V/[redacted] were talking about food and making tacos. S/COPELAND continued saying, V/[redacted] was going to come over to his barracks, located at Building X-2, Willis Manor, Room 335, to make salsa and eat dinner. S/COPELAND explained he went to the Food Lion and bought the ingredients to make tacos and then he went back to X-2. S/COPELAND stated he then went and picked V/[redacted] up from her barracks, Miller Hall, and brought her back to his room. COPELAND explained later he utilized his roommates vehicle, later identified as a belonging to AR John CALISSE, USN, VAW-124 and being a white Jeep Compass, to pick up V/[redacted] S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] was wearing a black shirt, black pants, slip on Uggs, a bracelet, and a hair clip. S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] was also carrying her purple backpack. S/COPELAND stated he could not recall what time he picked V/[redacted] up but after returning to the room they began to make tacos.

5. S/COPELAND stated after eating, him and V/[redacted] started listening to music and started talking. S/COPELAND explained V/[redacted] began talking about HT3 Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG-95, and how she saw him with another girl on his motorcycle and how it had really upset V/[redacted] S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] then text HT3 GILLESPIE "Fuck you" and then called an ex-boyfriend (NFI) from Texas. S/COPELAND explained he was sitting on the couch, and she was sitting on floor talking to the ex-boyfriend. S/COPELAND continued explaining how when V[redacted] ended the phone call with the ex-boyfriend, she started to call other people (NFI) and talk about how "GILLESPIE's not shit."

6. S/COPELAND explained he did not know much about the relationship between HT3 GILLESPIE and V[redacted], but S/COPELAND did recall V/[redacted] was mad about the amount of money she would spend on HT3 GILLESPIE. S/COPELAND provided the example of HT3 GILLESPIE needed a lawyer and V[redacted] gave him $500.00 to hire one even though HT3 GILLESPIE could have received a public defender. S/COPELAND did not believe HT3 GILLESPIE and V[redacted] were in any physical altercations or abusive relationship. S/COPELAND stated V[redacted] went on a "rampage" and was becoming "agitated." S/COPELAND stated after completing the phone calls V[redacted] was becoming "emotional" and "crying."

7. S/COPELAND stated one of the roommates, "the Mexican" later identified as PSSN Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, USN, Airborne Command and Control Squadron 124 (VAW-124), walked into the common area of the room and asked if V[redacted] was okay. S/COPELAND stated he told PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ, V/[redacted] was fine and PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ proceeded to his room. S/COPELAND stated the night ended and they both went to sleep together in S/COPELAND's bed. S/COPELAND stated they did not have sexual intercourse. After going to sleep, S/COPELAND was awoken by FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG-95, knocking on the door of his bedroom. S/COPELAND said he could not remember what time it was but knew the sun was up. S/COPELAND stated FCC PARKER asked if the person in his bed was V/[redacted], which S/COPELAND replied it was V[redacted]. S/COPELAND explained FCC PARKER told him to get to work and asked if he had a ride, which S/COPELAND stated he told FCC PARKER one of his roommates could give him a ride to work. S/COPELAND admitted though he did not go to work due to "one of his roommates" not coming home. S/COPELAND further explained, him being UA was a big misunderstanding because he had the weekend off and he did not realize if you are marked UA for one day, you are marked UA for the days you remain away from work.

8. S/COPELAND stated he was marked UA Thursday, 29JUN25 until Sunday, 01MAY25 when base security located him within his barracks room. When asked his whereabouts for Friday and Saturday, S/COPELAND responded, he stayed in the barracks both days but would move from lounge to lounge. S/COPELAND stated he mostly hung out in the 5th floor lounge and Ms. Mary (NFI) could vouch for his whereabouts during the time frame.

9. RA asked S/COPELAND about the morning of 29JUN25 and what had transpired after FCC PARKER left the room. S/COPELAND recalled him and V[redacted] woke up and cleaned the kitchen and V/[redacted] left in an Uber, later clarified to be a Z-Trip.

10. RA asked S/COPELAND if he would sign a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for his cellphone, S/COPELAND agreed to signing a PASS and provided his passcode, [redacted] PII [redacted]. Prior to signing the PASS, S/COPELAND requested to call his mother, and would not sign the PASS; Enclosure (C) pertains. PA asked S/COPELAND if he would be fine with answering further questions and call his mother later, S/COPELAND agreed.

11. RA had previously informed S/COPELAND NCIS was conducting a Command Authorized Search and Seizure (CASS) in his barracks room and the common area and began to ask questions about S/COPELAND's barracks room and his electronics. S/COPELAND stated he had an iPhone15 in his room and a PlayStation 5 in the common room.

12. RA inquired about V/[redacted]'s electronics to include her iPhone. S/COPELAND stated the only electronic V/[redacted] had with her was her iPhone15. S/COPELAND confirmed the Apple iWatch was also his, which was located in his barracks room.

13. RA asked S/COPELAND if the statement he gave was true and accurate to the best of his knowledge, which S/COPELAND stated this statement was the correct statement. RA then confronted S/COPELAND on the discretions between his previous statement, given on 01JUN25 and the statement he gave during this interview.

14. RA asked S/COPELAND about him and V/[redacted] being naked on the floor by the couch, S/COPELAND denied being on the floor naked with V/[redacted]. S/COPELAND stated he and V/[redacted] fell asleep in his bed, clothed.

15. RA asked S/COPELAND about him changing his story about dropping V/[redacted] off at her barracks, to V/[redacted] leaving on her own after cleaning, to which S/COPELAND stated he did not remember saying he had previously dropped V/[redacted] off at her barracks. RA asked S/COPELAND about how he knew V/[redacted] was taking a Z-Trip from his barracks versus walking from his barracks, and S/COPELAND stated he just assumed V/[redacted] had taken a Z-Trip back to her barracks.

16. RA inquired about S/COPELAND telling FCC PARKER he would wait for his roommate to get home to take S/COPELAND to work. RA asked about S/COPELAND's roommate's work schedule and why he would tell FCC PARKER the roommate would take him to work knowing his roommate does not get home until approximately 1600-1700. S/COPELAND stated he would not ask anyone else to take him to work. S/COPELAND stated he did not know when his roommate would be home due to a squadron's working hours being different from the ships work schedule.

17. PA conducted another PASS for a backpack, barracks room, and

S/COPELAND, JERMIAH TAYLOR/SN USN
M/B/NEE3/S/[redacted] PII

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF S/COPELAND

1. On 06Jun25, Reporting Investigator (RA) Tyler Mann and Participating Agent (PA) David JARRELL, conducted a second interview of S/COPELAND. As background, S/COPELAND was identified as a person of interest in the disappearance and possible death of V/[redacted] as he was the last person known to have seen her prior to her disappearance.

2. On 06Jun25 at 0850, subsequent to the execution of a Military Rights Waiver, appended as Enclosure (A), CCSN Jermiah Taylor COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, was interviewed regarding his knowledge of the possible death of CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted]), USN, DDG 95, and previously providing false statements regarding the captioned investigation. Upon waiving his Military Rights, the interview commenced. Additionally, during the interview S/COPELAND provided a handwritten timeline of events from 28May25 through 02Jun25, detailing his whereabouts for that time frame, along with his interactions with V/[redacted], Enclosure (B) pertains.

3. On 28May25, S/COPELAND invited V/[redacted] to his barracks room to cook dinner. Most of the evening she was communicating on her phone back and forth with a person referred to as Gil (possibly referring to Gillespie), a former boyfriend, whom had given her a bike helmet that he was now asking to be returned. This started an argument between V[redacted] and Gil which made her appear upset according to S/COPELAND. S/COPELAND asked her what the matter was, she provided the story about how Gil was trying to get the helmet back for another girl possibly, and she did not want to give it back. This led to V[redacted] calling another ex-boyfriend, who resides in Texas, to vent to him. V/[redacted] made additional phone calls to other friends and family to talk. S/COPELAND was unaware of who all she spoke to that evening. After listening to her story, hanging out and listening to music; S/COPELAND stated he was tired and told V[redacted] he was going to sleep; no exact time was provided for this series of events. He proceeded to go to bed and then awoke the next morning to his Chief, FCC Brad PARKER (FCC PARKER), USN, DDG 95, knocking on his door and V/[redacted] in his bed with him. S/COPELAND had on shorts and noted V[redacted] was wearing her pants, but had removed her top to sleep, he further stated they did not engage in any form of sexual activity. Upon opening the door, S/COPELAND was informed he was UA (Unauthorized Absence) and needed to report to work as soon as possible. FCC PARKER then departed and S/COPELAND started cleaning up his room and getting ready to go to work while waiting on his roommate to return to give him a ride. At some point, S/COPELAND noticed V/[redacted] woke up and he informed her FCC PARKER had stopped by and he needed to go to work. She began helping him clean up the room and upon finishing, exited the barracks on her own sometime that morning, while S/COPELAND sat on the couch watching TV and eventually fell asleep.

4. As background, during S/COPELAND's initial interview he previously stated he borrowed his roommate's vehicle to drive V/[redacted] to her barracks. When questioned regarding his previous statement of borrowing his roommate's vehicle to drive V/[redacted], he said he was mistaken before and he could not have done so as his other roommate who owned the Jeep was not home, nor was his vehicle. At this time, S/COPELAND uttered a statement in which he said, "I needed to get my story straight." S/COPELAND related he woke up at around dinner time on 29May25 and realized his roommate was not home and could not take him to work. S/COPELAND stated dinner time on the ship was between approximately 15:00 and 17:30, which he was using as his time of reference. He then called FCC PARKER and told him he would not be at work because he did not have a ride or vehicle available. In addition to FCC PARKER coming to the barracks room the next morning, S/COPELAND stated his roommate, YN3 Sean MONAGHAN (YN3 MONAGHAN), USN, Helicopter Marine Squadron 12 (HM-12), was present during the night when he and V[redacted] were sleeping.

5. S/COPELAND then stated he spent the remainder of the weekend in the barracks going between his room and one of the various lounges in the building. He did not like to remain in his room due to his roommate being unclean and emanating an unpleasant odor. S/COPELAND related the Barracks Manager, Ms. Mary (NFI) saw him in the lounge at various times over the course of the weekend, along with another white male (NFI), who was instructed along with S/COPELAND to stay in the lounge by a crew in the building cleaning or polishing the floors. The white male, who S/COPELAND could not further identify, attempted to leave and return to his room multiple times, but was met by the crew and told to return until they advised he could walk down the hallway. This led to a conversation between S/COPELAND and the unidentified male that ended with S/COPELAND being offered and declining a bag of chips from the man before he left. Ms. Mary interacted with S/COPELAND both in the lounge and while he was using one of the public restrooms, she knocked on the door and he stated he was currently in the facilities using the toilet. These interactions may have happened between Friday and Saturday according to S/COPELAND.

6. In addition to interacting with the above captioned individuals, S/COPELAND stated he did in fact turn off his location services on his cellphone to his friends as one of them had apparently been spying on him via the Apple location services and he did not want to be bothered or hang out with anyone. S/COPELAND did confirm he used the phone application Life 360 and has his location constantly shared, for approximately the past year, with a female (NFI) from back home, who would often check the app to see where S/COPELAND was currently located. S/COPELAND denied leaving the barracks until Sunday. 01Jun25 in the morning when he reported to the shop Command Duty Officer after being informed by the base Military Police that he was UA. Upon a Master at Arms (MA) knocking on S/COPELAND's door that morning, he reported to the barge where he was order to undergo a urinalysis and was informed that he had officially been marked UA since the past Thursday morning, 28May25. After concluding all required tasks at the barge, S/COPELAND returned to his barracks until the next morning, 02JUN25, when he was ordered to report to work.

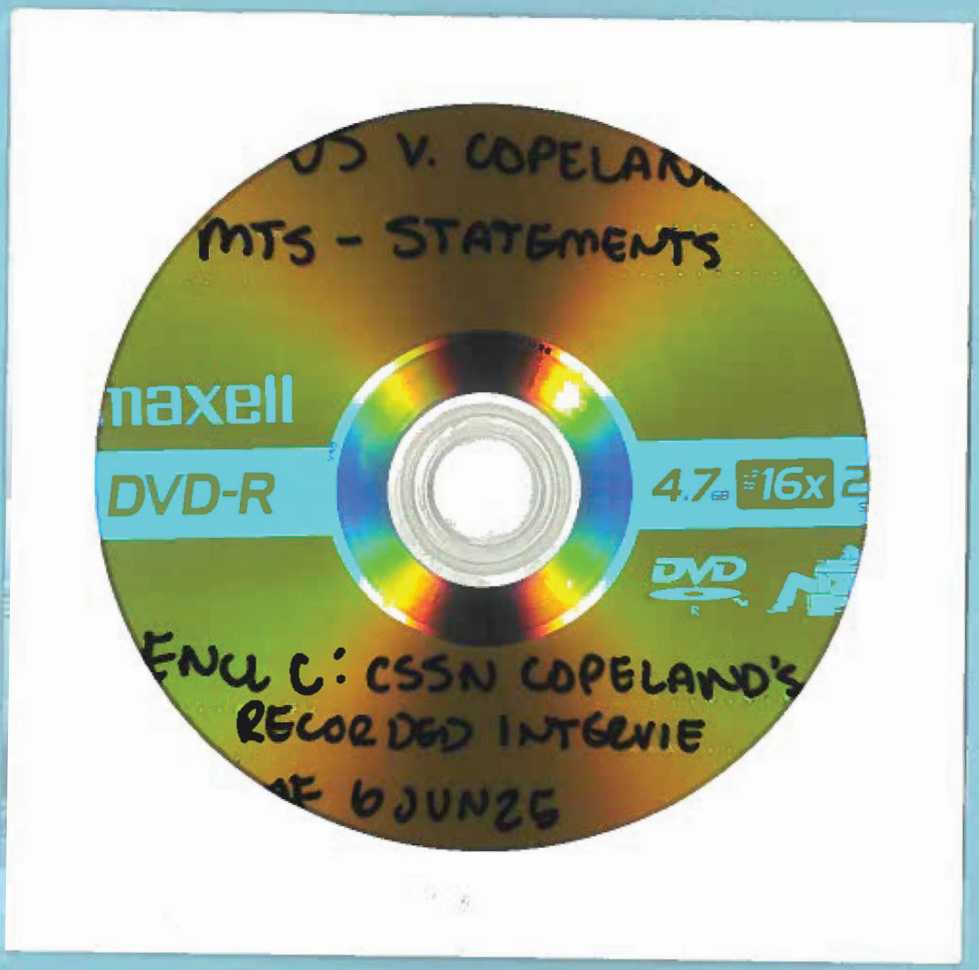
7. During the interview, S/COPELAND was questioned as to whether or not he knew V/[redacted]s current location and if he had any part in causing her disappearance or possible death to which he replied in the negative. When further questioned about what S/COPELAND would like the outcome of the investigation to be he made a statement hoping she was found. S/COPELAND expressed concerns with his own mental health at the time of the interview. Prior to the conclusion of the interview, S/COPELAND signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for his deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA). Upon signing the PASS, the document was given to SA Lisa CARROLL, NCIS, and DNA samples were obtained from S/COPELAND by SA CARROLL which will be documented in a separate investigative action. Prior to ending the interview S/COPELAND was asked about access to vehicles regarding which, if any vehicles, he had access to use over the past week. S/COPELAND related he did not have access to a vehicle, other than on occasion his roommates Jeep when they were both home from work at the same time. S/COPELAND did not specify the roommate who owns the Jeep other than previously stating they reside in the same room.



8. At 1148 on 06Jun25, S/COPELAND was released to FCC PARKER. An audio recording of this interview was captured and the original SD card containing the interview along with a copy of the audio on a CD/DVD were provided to the case agent for safekeeping with the file.

NCIS INTERVIEW ICO CSSN JEREMIAH COPELAND

SA GEREL: Today's date is 6 June 2025, at the NCIS Norfolk U-40 office. Approximate time is 0842. Polygraph and interview to be administered by Tyler Mann and David Gerel under session approval number 2025-2121 in regards to the missing person and or possible death of Angelina [redacted] This interview is of Jeremiah Copeland, United States Navy, E-3.

[SA Mann, SA Gerel, and CSSN Copeland entered the room at timestamp 0:04:19.]

SA GEREL: All right, good morning. So, my name's David. I'm a part of the investigative team. I'm a special agent here at NCIS.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: This is my partner, Tyler Mann.

SA MANN: How are you?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm doing all right.

SA GEREL: We--we're part of the team, but also polygraph examiners.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: So, I'm going to check with you about the things that involving Angie [redacted] and her whereabouts and things like that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: So, we have been told that you had--had previously talked to and had been interested in taking a polygraph to confirm some of the stuff they asked you about.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, that's part of what we're here to do today. The--the main focus for the team, which includes us and--and I believe you as well, is to make sure that we can figure out where she's at and she's okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: All right. Do you have any questions about any of that so far?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: Okay. Very good. So, what they're doing, they've been working real hard, and--and they're trying to kind of take pieces of thoughts as to who might know as much as possible, and then, once they're done with it, put aside so they can focus on other stuff. So, you know, they talked to you--you still seem to be the last person that they can confirm actually had laid eyes on her.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: So, as you might imagine, you're pretty interesting to them as far as what, you know,

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: So, we want to go ahead and--and take some of those big questions off the table with the polygraph so that they can move from you and then handle some other stuff.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: How's that sound to you?

CSSN COPELAND: Do I have to take the polygraph?

SA GEREL: No, no, no, no. So, a couple things on that. And--and it's good for you to know this, and and--and involving yourself with--with NCIS for law enforcement, you never have to do anything. You're--you're--you're a grown man. You make decisions about your involvement. You definitely don't have to do this.

In fact, we need you to want to do this if you--if you want to be successful. It does not help us to offer you a test that you don't want to do or you feel uncomfortable with. So----

CSSN COPELAND: I want to--because I have stuff that I--I have to do today.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah. I gotcha. I would ask a favor for you, though.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Like, I--I'd like you to hear a bit about it before you make your full decision.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: And--and then, after you hear about it, kind of what we're interested in, what we're doing, then you can make a good decision about it. And--and, I can assure you that we can do pretty big things in terms of helping you with your day. So, if there's something in your day that you're concerned about, I'm pretty sure we can help you adjust that.

But I--I don't really know for sure. So, I'd want--want to hear what your--what your concern would be. So, does that make sense? So, I--I--you--you have the request that will you listen to us explain, kind of more about what the polygraph is and what we can do for you with it, before you make that decision.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: Is that cool? Okay. Cool. So, okay, good. So, call me David. This is Tyler. Feel free to be first name with us. All right. What do you like me to call you?

CSSN COPELAND: You can just call me Cope or Jay.

SA GEREL: Cope or Jay,. Okay. Got it. All right. Which do you prefer?

CSSN COPELAND: Jay.

SA GEREL: Jay. Okay. All right, Jay. All right. So, the decision to take the polygraph is--is, you know, it's a big one. So, it's not something people, like, just say, "Yeah, I can't wait to take a polygraph." It's something that sometimes people will, you know, think about and--and even go into a little apprehensiveness.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: It's very normal. It's also very normal for--for a case like this to--to--for it to be used multiple times.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And--and that's because, like, we're--we're getting information, we're confirming information, and then, keep moving on because our goal is to--to find her safely.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, if they're spending time thinking about you and they don't need to be, let's let them help them not by thinking about something else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: This is the concept. So, how a polygraph goes is we would go through a few forms. After we do the forms, we would, all the--the way through answering questions you have, we tell you what--what we know about the case, we share with you what you know about the case, make sure we're all on the same page with that.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: And maybe we'll often find more details that we can push back to the main investigative team, and can help, and say that was very helpful. And then, after that, we talk about the questions that we were considering asking you on polygraph.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: You would know what those questions are. You have a chance to talk about them, explain them, be comfortable with them. Once you're good and solidly comfortable with those questions, we explain how the test goes. We--we'd run the test and then, we would--we'd tell you how you did. And we'd tell the--the agents and the command how you did.

So, it gives people really quick information. And--and then, you know, if we--we'll talk all the--the way through. So, that's kind of the process.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: There's some significant talking upfront. I'd say probably at least an hour, sometimes a little bit more than that. That test itself is pretty quick. I mean, I say 15 minutes. After that, we talk through the results and see if there is any questions you have all the way through. We can--we treat you like you're a guest in our house, so if you need stuff like food, water, bathroom breaks, anything that would make you more comfortable, we'll do our best to accommodate that.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: We want you to be as comfortable as you can through the process. You're in full control of the whole thing, all the way through.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Does that make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: I gotcha.

SA GEREL: Is that something, hearing that, that you could be more interested in?

CSSN COPELAND: Not really. Like, I mean, I haven't even had, like, a normal time to even sleep.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, every day they came and raided my room. You know, I got the chain of command talking about I got to come in. I got fucking Captain's Mast today.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, there's a whole bunch of stuff. And it's, like, my mental health, honestly, like, my mental health----

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: ----going downhill.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Because it's just so much, like, you know, I'm trying to pretty much, like, you know, comprehend what's happening.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: It's just every day it's something new. Something new. Something new.

SA GEREL: Okay. Well, your--your mental health is very important to us. So--so tell me--tell me more about that.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, it's just something new every day.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

SA GEREL: You know, it's not, even with this situation going on, I got family stuff going on. I got stuff in my life going on.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And it's--everything's just piling up. I'm getting--like, it's, like I'm getting stuck in a hole right now.

SA GEREL: I gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: So----

SA GEREL: All right. So, I hear you and--and what I'd like to do is the--the two forms that we typically do up front, where we will do the usual rights advisement, that you would get when anytime you talk to NCIS.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: I'm tempted--I'd like to--to offer you that, just to kind of make sure you kind of see the whole platform.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And--and then, that way we can talk, even a little bit more in-depth about how you're feeling and what we might be able to do to help you feel a little bit better about that. But I don't want to do too much with that until we--we cover that first form because, your--your understanding of what--who we are and what we do is very important to me.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: And it should be important to you.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: So, with your permission, I'd like to go through that form with you, the first one. Just the rights advisement.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: And so, it's the--and you--you've been through it before. It's basically where we read you your rights. Like you have the right to remain silent and stuff.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: I'd like to go through it with you. There's one that's a little--one piece of it's a little different on this form than what was talked about last time, and I want to have a chance to explain that to you. But, again, I--I--if you're telling me you don't want to do this, like, I'm not going to make you even do this part.

CSSN COPELAND: Because it's just like I haven't even had, like, a normal day where I can just try and rest.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: This whole week, the past week, it's just been hell for me.
SA GEREL: Yeah. Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: Like, let's say I do it, then it's going to be more.
SA GEREL: Maybe.
CSSN COPELAND: Sign more papers. I got to come in and keep doing more stuff.
SA GEREL: Yeah. Maybe.
CSSN COPELAND: Like, it's just too much stuff going on from there.
SA GEREL: So--so maybe, maybe not. And that's what I wanted to spend a little more time talking to you about, because some of the stress and pressure that you're feeling might get dramatically decreased once this is over. Okay? But again, I--I feel--I don't feel perfectly comfortable getting into those details without at least making sure you understand your rights.
CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]
SA GEREL: But I would love to share with you how I think that might help you, if you're cool with that.
CSSN COPELAND: That's fine.
SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. So, before I do, Tyler, you--you got anything you--you want to say?
SA MANN: I mean, so can I--Jay, if you don't mind. Just with this, I know you're, like, my world is just spiraled. Right? And I get it. This is a whirlwind. But the only advocate portion I'm going to sort of pitch you is this. What this will theoretically do if it--if--if you're forthcoming with us and we get to talk about all these topics here momentarily and put that all behind you, that on paper is going to make a lot of this stop.

So, you're still going to have some command things to maybe deal with. Family stuff is family stuff. I feel you. We all got to deal with that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: But at least it'll get this--this piece. Like, the NCIS piece will more than likely go--minimize. I'm not going to make a promise that that's going to happen, but----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----if this goes well and they say, "Hey, like we don't have to worry about him anymore. He's not on our, you know, interesting list of people anymore, not the most interesting man in the world." Like, we can sort of put you on the back burner. That invasiveness will likely decrease a significant amount.

So, I know you're, like, I just want all this shit behind me, and I get it, dude. I would want the same, like, if I'm sitting in here seat, I'm, like, Jesus, just give me, like, a day to be myself. Like, I'm [redacted] years old. What in the world am I getting into? Right?

ENCLOSURE D

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: So, that's why we're trying to do it is just to give you--you a little, hey, this--this can be an exit ramp for some of that baggage to go a separate way. And then, you can focus more on your family. You can focus more on you. Other things that are important.

And, you know, we can--whatever those are. If you're happy to share them, I'm happy to hear them. But, you know, I think that those are the things you should focus on, you know, family, obviously, first over everything. So, hopefully, we can take this off your plate by getting the polygraph out of the way. That's just my kind of piece from hearing what you're saying. And then, does that resonate? Am I on the right track with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Are we on the same page?

CSSN COPELAND: Gotcha. I appreciate you.

SA MANN: But yeah, I'll--I'll go back to that. That's kind of just the step we've got----

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah.

SA MANN: ----to go through.

SA GEREL: Cool. Are you--you comfortable just doing the first step and then talking a little bit more? We're not going to make you make a decision one way or the other.

ENCLOSURE D
12 of 152
002613_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I mean, what do you--what's the form?

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah.

So, it's the Military Rights Waiver form and you've--you've seen this one before, so the form itself isn't that different. The thing I wanted to make sure that I shared with you to get the chance I can explain it is--is this part right here.

Okay. So, this is the rights waiver form. We do this before every polygraph, also before we talk to people. That's me and my partner. This is where we're at. So--so we want to talk to you today about, again, I'll explain all this, but making a false official statement and knowledge of the possible death of CCSN [redacted].

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: Okay. So, this--a couple things here. So, we don't really care about the things you've said so far. I--I know that we're telling you you're suspected of making some things--some statements that might not be accurate. I want to make sure you know, all the--the way from the beginning of the end, that is not our focus.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: You're suspected of it because, and that means we've got to let you know----

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: ----that we're going to talk about it. But nobody's been that worried about that. We--we--we are focusing on Angelina.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: All right. So, Angie. So--so we don't know if she's dead or not.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Right. But do--do you agree that that's everybody's fear?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, yeah.

SA GEREL: Yeah. So, everybody's worried that she's been gone too long. She's usually pretty responsive. So, that's--that's what we're worried about. So, what we'd like to do is, although you're not specifically suspected of causing harm to her----

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: ----we'd like to make sure you didn't. So they're making it seem. Like, okay, Copeland, maybe he--he is not perfect, but he didn't do that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: That make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, that's the stuff we're going to talk about, and hopefully that polygraph help us figure out.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: All right. Does that make sense now?
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: I just didn't want to drop this in your lap, and you're, like, what's that mean? I wanted to make sure I explained that. The rest of the form is exactly the same as the ones you've seen before. So, with knowing the topic that we're going to be focusing in on, here's some things to keep in mind.

You have the right to remain silent and make no statement at all. Any statement that you make can be used against you in--in--in trial or by court-martial or any other judicial administrative proceeding.

You have the right to consult with a lawyer prior to any questioning. This lawyer may be a civilian lawyer retained by you at no cost to the United States, a military lawyer appointed to act as your counsel at no cost to you, or both. So, you can have a lawyer, and in multiple capacities.

You have the right to have any retained lawyer and or appointed lawyer present during the interview. And you may terminate the interview at any time for any reason.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.
SA GEREL: These are all important. I like that. Really emphasize that last one because you are in full control of the conversation. You know, you can talk to us. You don't have to talk to us.

002616_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA GEREL: As long as you're professional and--and polite to us, we'll be the same to you.
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: All the way through. Any questions about any of this so far?
CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.
SA GEREL: Are you cool to talk with us a little bit more?
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: Okay. So, I'm going to read this part out loud.
CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]
SA GEREL: And--and just so you--you've heard it and--and make sure you agree with it. But what we'd like to make sure that you're cool with and understand is that you understand, or I'm going to read it out loud to you.

I understand my rights as related to me and as set forth above. With that understanding, I have described--I'm sorry, I have decided that I do not desire to remain silent, consult with a retained or appointed lawyer, or have a lawyer present at this time. I make this decision freely and voluntarily. No threats or promises have been made to me.

Does that make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

ENCLOSURE D
16 of 152
002617_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Do you agree with that?
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: Okay. So, if you--if you agree with it and want to talk to us, again, you're not deciding on the poly quite yet.
CSSN COPELAND: No.
SA GEREL: You--you just want to get to us, you--you could initial for me beside each of these numbers. Sign that paragraph and then, sign for me there, please.
CSSN COPELAND: So, for each question, is it before and after or just---- SA GEREL: Just beside the number is fine. Yeah. Sorry, these things [inaudible 0:17:55]. There you go.
And then, just beside that paragraph as well.
CSSN COPELAND: This one?
SA GEREL: Yes, please. And then a full signature, there. But you--do you understand this and want to talk to us? Is that right?
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: Okay. Thank you. All right, so the next thing we'll cover in a little bit more detail is the polygraph itself. The--the next form that we--that we may use is--is where we talk to you about what the polygraph is, and you say, "Okay. I'll start the process." So, that's where you can list, know definitively one or the other, but I'm not even going to get to that form quite yet.

002618_COPELAND

So, let's--do--do--what questions do you have for us that will help you understand kind of why we're here and--and what we want to do today?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I don't have really no questions.

SA GEREL: Okay. All right, so--so let me just make sure you kind of see it from their perspective and--and our--and our perspective. You--you--you--I think you've already acknowledged this, but, so the big fear is that Angie may be--may be dead.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: Okay. Did you do that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: Okay. I know they already asked you that, and you said no.

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: Do you--do you know where she's at?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: Did you help anybody to abduct her or kill her or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: That's the focus today.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: All right. What we'd like to do is take that off the table so they are not thinking Copeland could have had anything to do with that. Make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: And--and--and, if we're able to talk to you about that and you get confident--you're already confident. Whether you can even stay confident to the point where you take that test and show a--a positive result, then we're going to be able to take that back to the agents and to the Commander. Like, "Okay, good. Now let's find other ways to find, Angie." Make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: Does that make you feel any different about doing this?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir. I mean, at the end of the day, like, this is just a lot of stuff for me to handle right now. At the end of the day, there's always something. On top of that, they still want me to come to work. They still want me to do this. They still want me to do that.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, it is just a lot. They keep coming to my room every day.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: So, it's just, like, I--I don't have a break.

SA GEREL: What are they--what's the mast for today? The Captain's Mast?
CSSN COPELAND: Going UA.
SA GEREL: Okay. Well, who do you think about that?
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, at the end of the day, like--like he said, I'm a grown man and so, I'm going to take full accountability. At the end of day, it was me being irresponsible, not getting work when I'm supposed to. So, at the end of the day, I'm going to just take the consequence.
SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. Does it bother--does it scare you?
CSSN COPELAND: No, I mean, it's mast. I mean, at the end of the day.
SA GEREL: Okay. Does--have you been through that before?
CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.
SA GEREL: Okay. And do you know, people have been?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA GEREL: What usually happens on something like that?
CSSN COPELAND: They put you on a restriction. I mean, in my offense, I can already see they're probably going to take a reduction--reduction rate, half a month's pay, and probably put me on restriction. For how long? I don't know.
SA GEREL: Okay. And--and how--how does that make you feel to know that might be coming?

CSSN COPELAND: Not really much. I mean, I just got to go with the flow at the end of the day. Like I said, I take full accountability for my actions.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Not making it to work when I'm supposed to be, so---

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah. The military's different that way, right? Because I mean, in civilian, like, I don't show up, nobody, like, is going to punish me for it typically.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, they might, you know, talk to you about it or something. But in the military, like you said, it is different, so.

SA GEREL: Yeah. A little different. I--I--I--I like how you're kind of keeping that frame in your mind. I don't want to speak for you, but it feels like you kind of get the gravity of what that is. I mean, you should have been to work. You weren't. They're going to do something about it. Sounds like something you can take that lump and move right on.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: We kind of think that too. But I wanted to see how bad that was affecting your--your mental health because, we--we could ask for that to get pushed back. We--then I think it probably would. I can't speak for your command, but they might do that.

002622_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure. I mean, the CO, he's trying to push it to where I get it done today

SA GEREL: And then, maybe you want that. I don't know. You want it done sooner or later?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, sooner. I mean, because obviously I don't want to stay on the barge. Like, I fucking hate the barge.

SA GEREL: It sounds like it would be a not a fun place.

SA MANN: I don't think you're alone in that. I've talked to many people at the barge.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I don't know who lied and said the barge was, like, smooth, but being in the shipyard in general.

SA GEREL: Yeah. One of the things that we would do would be to press on is just get to know you a little bit. I know some things about you, but I don't know as much as I want to to give you a polygraph. So, we--we get to know more about you, to include things like that. Like what--what ships you've been on and what you've--what you've been experiencing. I mean, you're young, so I--I would imagine probably not that much in the Navy quite yet.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, a little bit. I mean, I was on a carrier before I was on a DDG, so.

SA GEREL: What--what carrier were you on?

CSSN COPELAND: The Truman.

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah. All right.

002623_COPELAND

SA MANN: You guys had a hell of a deployment, huh?
SA GEREL: Did you just get back from the deployment?
CSSN COPELAND: No, I did half the deployment. I flew off during February. Like, the middle of February.
SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.] Okay. Tyler, you got any--any things you want to cover?
SA MANN: I mean, what can we do to help you today? Like what moves, what--what gives us some power to help you out? Because I don't know that we have it, but I'll sure as hell try.
CSSN COPELAND: Nothing really. I mean, at the end of the day, you guys are doing your job, so----
SA MANN: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: That's--then that's just nothing. It's nothing really to it. At the end of the day, I can't ask you guys to do something. Like, you guys are just trying to do your job, get down to the bottom of whatever you guys need to. At the end of the day. I'm just trying to live.
SA MANN: No. Yeah. Absolutely. But that's what I mean, like, if there's somewhere we can meet in the middle and you've got an existential issue right now that you're, like, "Hey, like, here's the biggest thing going on in my world. I need this handled." Maybe we can help out with that, and it'll help you feel a little more comfortable with what we'd like to do with you today.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, it's just everything that I got because I already know, like, with mast coming up, I also got a court date coming up.
SA MANN: So, what's that for?
CSSN COPELAND: Speeding.
SA MANN: Okay. Do you know when?
CSSN COPELAND: That's the 21st of July, so----
SA MANN: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: ----by the time I get off restriction, I'm going to have to prepare for that. On top of that, I've been trying to get--reach out to my lawyer. Don't got a phone. They took it, so---- SA MANN: [Affirmative response.] About that court? The speeding thing?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I got to talk to--the judge granted me a public defender. Can't even reach out to my public defender because I--I don't have a phone, so.
SA MANN: Gotcha.
CSSN COPELAND: At this point, it's just, like, I'm--I'm fried.
SA GEREL: Yeah. That's a lot going on. We definitely get that. How much sleep would you--you think you got last night?
CSSN COPELAND: None. I had to prep doing my uniform for mast today, so.
SA GEREL: Okay. Like, your--your dress uniform?

002625_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And then, how has that been over the last few days? How much sleep you getting?

CSSN COPELAND: None. Like, maybe an hour. I mean, the last time they came and got me, they didn't release me till, like, two, almost three o'clock. As soon as they released me, my Chief took me to my barracks. I had to get my uniform and go straight to work.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I had no sleep.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So

SA GEREL: So, how about food? How you--how are you eating?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't have, like, an appetite to really eat at all, so.

SA GEREL: Okay. Do you have some food this morning?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GEREL: You want some?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm good.

SA GEREL: How about some water? You want some water.

CSSN COPELAND: Water, yeah. I'll take some water.

SA GEREL: Okay. We'll go get that. We'll be back.

CSSN COPELAND: All right.

[SA Gerel departed the room at timestamp 0:25:30.]

002626_COPELAND

SA MANN: So--so, I mean, I know you got a--a storm growing. Right? What's going on in the family world?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I just got shit with my mom. I mean, on top of that, she doesn't even know anything that's happened. I mean, I--I understand she realized I went UA. She called my command and called the--the base.

SA MANN: She was worried about?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. So, I mean, other than that, I--I haven't really talked to her ever--ever since that. My dad's been in the hospital, so.

SA MANN: How's he doing?

CSSN COPELAND: Not that well.

SA MANN: Oh. Do you mind if I ask what's happening?

CSSN COPELAND: So, he got an infection, and that was--I found out about that when I was on deployment, and I--I think it was, like, around December.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I tried to put in leave. Like, emergency leave.

SA MANN: Sure.

CSSN COPELAND: My chain of command denied it.

SA MANN: Yeah. I--I know the Truman was going through----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----some stuff out there, so I'm sure that was tough.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. And he's been in the hospital ever since. My mom said he's basically lost, like, his--like, he can't walk. He can barely talk.

SA MANN: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: His vision's going bad, too. So, I know on their part. I know it's, like, hard, on that, so.

SA MANN: Yeah. No, that's tough.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: When's the last time you got to see him?

CSSN COPELAND: Hmm?

SA MANN: When was the last time you got to see him?

CSSN COPELAND: It's been almost a year since I last took leave.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, that's also another thing. It's, like, I haven't been home. I've been telling my chain of command for months now. Like I--I--I need to take leave.

SA MANN: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Because with everything going on, it's fucking with my mental health.

SA MANN: I gotcha. That'd be tough. I know I'd be----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----feeling probably similar if I had a bunch of family that I wasn't getting to see that were sitting in the hospital with prior circumstances. So, no, I get it, man.

And again, I'm not--one way or another today. Like, what you decide to do, I want you--you to just be comfortable with your decision.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: You know, I know you said it. Like, I--I think, you know, spent some--some time I think with B on the ship. Obviously, she's the only agent that was there, but, that I know she has a pretty--I don't know how--what your interactions with her have--have been. But I know she's generally a pretty straight shooter. I don't think she sort of beats around the bush. She just says, "Hey, here's what we got to do. Let's do it." Right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. She--she keeps it a hundred, but I don't like the way that she does it.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, everybody that I've talked to, dealt with, even with police officers, like--like, yeah, they got one job to be doing, but they kept it professional. When, like, I don't know what her problem is, but I feel like with me and her interactions, she--I feel like she antagonizes me.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And I don't--I don't really appreciate that, like, when I was talking to the first--first detective, little short one, you know, it was her and another agent that came to my room.

SA MANN: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And, I talked to them. Cool. And then, when they had came and raided my room, she was there just in the background. I could see her staring at me. At first, I was, like, there's no way that's her until the agent had called her over there. And I was, like, fuck. All right, cool. But it's, like, the whole time we were in the interrogation room, it's just, like, she was, like, irritating me.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: It's, like, I--it's, like, some people I can stand, but it's just something about her I don't like.

SA MANN: No, that's fair. I--I, like, I don't like everybody I meet, too. Sometimes it's just people don't connect. It is what it is. What I would ask today, though, is if I make you feel that way, if David makes you feel that way---- CSSN COPELAND: No, you guys--you guys are totally, like, you know, respectful, and you guys are keeping it official.

SA MANN: Yep.

CSSN COPELAND: It's just the way that she carries herself, the way that the mentality she has.

SA MANN: Understood. But if--if you feel like that happens, I want you to stop and let us know. You can tell me I'm wrong. That's okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA MANN: I'm not, same with him. We're not above making a mistake. So, if you feel like a line is crossed, let us know. We don't want to do that. We'll course-correct for you.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay. Thank you.

SA MANN: Yeah, just again, if--if I'm going to be blunt with you--you can be blunt with me. Full--fully expect that. So--excuse me. Why I said that, and, you know, and I think David's sort of been kind of slowly talking through this with you is, again, everyone wants to know where Angie is. The longer she's gone, you know, I mean, you've probably seen an Netflix documentary. Right? Like, as time passes and these type of things, all you see on the news. Like, hey, the more time that somebody's missing, the higher the likelihood that the end result's not a good one. Right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: That's just--it's statistics, and we're hoping that by trying to expedite and move through these things, this takes a ton of resources. I mean, we've had people the second that we found out she was gone, people started coming from every office all around the country to try to serve and to give us bodies and manpower so we can dedicate more resources to trying to find her.

ENCLOSURE D

002631_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: You know, and I, again, unfortunately, you happen to be the last person that was with her----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: ----before either she went missing, she made the decision to do it, something bad happened to her, whatever that was. Whether it's fair or not, like, the fingers all kind of initially point at you just because you were that last one to be with her.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And I hate to say it, but again, it's just like watching TV. If the last person that was with her was the last person that was with her, that's the easiest place to start. It's logical. Right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: Hey, you should at least have some semblance of an idea of what happened when she departed, where she went. You know, if she said anything to you about, "Hey, here's where I'm going to go, what I'm going to do."

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: If you have any idea what that is, that's information we definitely want. The reason we kind of bring polygraph in the room is so we can get that clear result from you. Because as much as I sit here and I want to believe everybody I work with----

ENCLOSURE D
31 of 152
002632_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----I'd be foolish to do that, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Because some people aren't going to be straight shooters.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: So, that's why we use polygraph as a tool to say, hey, if you knew something about, you know, let's hope not, but if she were to be dead at this point, if you had any knowledge of that, we'd want to know that. Because then we need to redirect resources elsewhere.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Also, if you have nothing to do with that, we want to prove that for you, too.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: Because then that allows us to take that spotlight that you feel is on you right now and shake it somewhere else.

CSSN COPELAND: It's not even about the spotlight. At the end of the day, it's life. Like, cool. But it is just more so, like, the shit I have going on now and then, this top on top of it. So, it's just, like, this right here is just a knocker.

SA MANN: Yeah. No, your--your glass is full.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: I feel you. So, what--what do you think we can accomplish today? What do you have the bandwidth for?
CSSN COPELAND: I just, like, if you guys got questions, cool. At the end of the day, I'm--I'm trying to--the biggest thing I'm trying to knock off is just seeing what the captain has to say. I just want to get one piece done. I'm just slowly trying to get things, you know. I'm just slowly trying to get things off of my plate. Because at the end of the day. Like, everything I have going on is going nowhere at this point.
SA GEREL: I gotcha. So, not to, I--I guess diminish what you're saying, like, that's important. And I think, you know, if I was sitting in your same shoes and I want that answer. Like, "Hey, just like--like you said, I'm going to own it. Tell me what I got to do to own it."

I think we're--we would miss an opportunity here to help get more off your plate if we didn't at least offer you this again. No one can sit here and say, "Hey, gun to your head, you got to sit down and do it." But I do think that this helps move some stuff off your plate. So, today, in theory, you could take this off your plate, and you can take the mast off your plate, and hopefully that's two things that help push you in a more positive direction.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But at the end of the day, you guys are still going to come for questions.

SA GEREL: I don't know. I--I mean, I--I----

CSSN COPELAND: It's still going nowhere.

SA MANN: They may. But, you know, as Dave they've kind of mentioned earlier, the question that we want to know is really, and--and I think, you know, we'll give this more poly. Like, if I were to give you some sort of polygraph, if I was going to say, "Hey, like--like here's what we need answered it," it'd be what he asked you the other day. Did you cause her death? Or did, you know, is she dead? Like, do--do you have actual intimate knowledge of that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Because then if you--if you're not a part of that, and you know, if--if maybe she is still alive out there somewhere, or if she is unfortunately deceased to this point, we know that you had nothing to do with it. So, then those questions about you, who you are, where you were, what you did, all of that. You know, it's an investigation like you said, people are going to look at everything thoroughly.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: But then there's other people that need to look at other things that they need to look at, you know. Was this, at some point, somebody else who did something malicious or foul? Did she just run away? Maybe she just had enough of it. Would it be an unfortunate case? Maybe it was a suicide. We don't know. But that's why we're trying to work through, and you're not--I know you feel. Like, "Hey, the spotlight's on you." You're not the only person that people are trying to highlight and get answers for.

So, I won't sit here and say that no one's going to come knocking on your door and asking you a question. But I would highly anticipate that this puts a lot of those questions at bay, because everyone's going to go, "Hey, Copeland's not the bad guy that did something bad to Angie. You know, Jay's not that guy."

CSSN COPELAND: At the end of the day--at the end of the day, it's, like, you still got people looking at you. It doesn't matter, regardless.

SA MANN: What makes you think that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, for instance, I walk into work, you got people looking at me crazy. The CO, for example.

SA MANN: I gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, it's just, like, it's not going to go anywhere. All right, cool. The situation gets done, and handled where people are still going to have their opinion not knowing the full facts and everything.

SA MANN: Yeah. The court of public opinion is damning, right? Like, unfortunately, we can't change that. What we will do. Like,

002636_COPELAND

David said, is we'll give results to everybody that matters. And I--I mean, I think, you know what the--the E-3 underground is alive and well. So, once somebody finds out that, "Hey. Like, Jay didn't do bad things. This was all just false accusations." If that is the case, that's going to resonate. People are going to hear that.

So, you know, are you going to ever going to be able to stop people looking at you for something? No, that's reality. Somebody's always going to have their opinion of you. Someone may love you, someone may hate you. It is what it is.

But, and--and I know that this is kind of a foreign concept in the sense of polygraph. Most people are. Like, yeah, I mean, I think I know what it is. I think I'd be willing to do it. And--and it's not that we want to sit here and slam you with a bunch of questions. What we want to do is give you an opportunity to, in theory, and or minimize those questions that are going to come about you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: At least from us. Right? Like, I can't control what somebody's opinion of you is going to be. All I can do is tell that person, "Hey, Jay didn't do the thing that you're saying he thinks he did. He's proven that." And you know, if they just want to keep that opinion because they don't like you, or if they, you know, do like you enough and they go, "Oh, well that's great to know. Like, I'm glad I can trust this guy. Like, he's not somebody."

ENCLOSURE D
36 of 152
002637_COPELAND

So, you know, I--I think there are two sides to that coin. I just want to make sure that you've seen both.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: I know in your world right now, the easy side to go to is, like, this is all bad, and I--I get it, especially considering your family situation. Not being able to see your dad, but hopefully putting this piece behind it means that all you got to worry about is get through that mast. You know, take whatever punishment they decide to give you. Then, if this is all gone away and you're part--you're--you're not a part of it anymore, hopefully then they can see the need for you to go take some leave, see your family, you know, check in on dad, and go from there.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: So.

SA GEREL: Yeah, investigations. Like, you know, there's--there's only a few things we can do to prove what we call proving a negative. Like, you can say all day long, I didn't do it. And people either have to believe that or not believe that. So, we're looking for evidence, but one thing that we can offer is, "I didn't do it, and I passed my polygraph."

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: You know what I--I mean? So, then like they've got something else to. Like, "Well, dang, maybe you didn't do it." So, it definitely adds a lot to--it's something you can proactively do to give credence to what you're telling folks. So, I--Tyler may have already said that, but. You follow about that later or not yet? Did--does it give you any other thought on trying it today?

CSSN COPELAND: I--I don't feel like I can take that shit today. Like, it's just, I'm telling you. Like, I got too much shit going on.

SA GEREL: I gotcha. I gotcha. And--and--and frankly, I am concerned about your sleep and your food and--and your mental health. Like, those are things that would, even as you said, I'll take it and then, I--I heard that stuff. I might not want to give it to you today, any because--because those things would be important for me to know that you have--that you're coming in with a good day.

So, two of the things that could consider with you. Thing number one, you may not feel like today's a good day for it, but are you seeing that maybe sometime in the future it could be?

CSSN COPELAND: Most definitely.

SA GEREL: Okay. Cool. Love that. Okay. Next thing, there are some details that we maybe could capture that might help. The--some things you know. Because you you--you--as I told you, you're probably the last person that we know of that saw her. So, when we reviewed that first interview or the one that they brought you here to talk about, we watched it, and--and--and I appreciate you doing that, but there's a couple things that we were kind of curious about that might help us help them.

ENCLOSURE D
38 of 152

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: Are you cool--can you cover some of the details with this? Good with that? Okay. Good.

So, what's your--what--what's your hard timeframe? When--when do you--you want to be done with this today?

CSSN COPELAND: As fast as possible. Like, do you you--do you--you guys know what time it is?

SA GEREL: Yeah. It's 9:20.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: Yeah. I--I will tell you that, like, we're what--do you have a scheduled time for your mast?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I don't know if it's before or after lunch. Lunch starts at eleven o'clock, so.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I guess it's probably going to be done after.

SA GEREL: Yeah. I--I think that's more likely. They--they'll likely have no trouble waiting on you. Like, if we get a little delayed, but I--I don't think we're going to have to delay you that long.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Anything that you needed to absolutely do before your mast?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't really think so.

SA GEREL: Okay. I just want to take care of your time. I appreciate you--you working with us. You've got a lot of stressors, and I--I understand. Do you feel like any of those stressors are more important than finding Angie?

CSSN COPELAND: Can you say that again?

SA GEREL: Yeah. I know you've got a lot of things that are stressing you. You've got the traffic court. You've got the--the--the other---we haven't talked about this yet, but we know about the other investigations. We--we know you got some things that are kind of stressing you, but are--are any of those things more important to you than helping to find Angie?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GEREL: Okay. I didn't think so. I mean, if it feels like you didn't know her. Like, super well, but I think you knew her enough where you'd probably be concerned about her.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And that's the vibe I'm getting. So, it's good to hear that because--because that--that makes me feel very comfortable with--with, you know.

CSSN COPELAND: And then at the end of the day, I'm answering questions, like you said, everybody else asks. If I wanted to leave, I could left at any given moment.

SA GEREL: Yeah. [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: At the end of the day, I'm taking the time to talk to you guys, so.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. I--I figured, but I--I wanted to kind of check--check your thoughts on that. Okay. Good. All right. So, as--as--as best you can tell us about, like you--you, well, actually, let me even go before that. How did you meet Angie?

CSSN COPELAND: CSA school. We're the same rate?

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: We went to A-school together. When I checked into the command, it was her and another CS that I knew. Angie is, like, I didn't really go up and talk to her, but she is, like, you know, when you look at someone, they're, like, that person looks familiar, so.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: That's how I saw her. And then, my homeboy, JJ, walked up to me. I was, like, "Oh, shit." And from there, me and him were talking, and then, later down, it was, like, a couple days afterwards, that's when she came up to me and asked me if I--what class I was in in A-school.

002642_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, from there I was, like, "I knew you looked familiar," and then from there we were talking. I mean, there's been previous times before that where we've hungen out. We've gone out to eat. We've went to Dave and Busters. We've--yeah.

SA GEREL: So, how long ago was that A-school? When was that? Like, two year or so?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, almost two years ago.

SA GEREL: Two--two years ago. Okay. You've known her for a long time.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Were you all--where did--where did, after A-school, where did you--you serve with her at? Or were you on the same ship or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: No, no, no. After A-school, I went--that's when I was on the Truman, so.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, A-school, the Truman for, and then, you--did you work in your rate. Like, as--as a CS?

ENCLOSURE D
42 of 152
002643_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: Okay. And then how--how much did you keep in contact with, [redacted]

CSSN COPELAND: I never had her contact until I got onto the--the DDG I'm on now.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, the barge.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: What did you feel about the barge? What's that like?

CSSN COPELAND: It's ass.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I'm not going to say, like, the ship is ass, but it--it's ass.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Because, it's, like, being. Like, I guess it's just transitioning from--from the carrier life to a DDG.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't like it.

SA GEREL: Yeah. I've heard that before. I've done investigations on the barge, and I'm. Like, this doesn't feel like a very comfortable place.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. No.

SA GEREL: Do--do they make y'all sleep on the barge sometimes?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. People, I mean, if somebody has duty, they have a berthing for that. Or there's some people that don't have barracks.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: That way you getting a ride so they stay--they stay on the barge.

SA GEREL: Okay. I gotcha. All right, so--so got on the barge, kind of met back up with--with--with Angie. Tell me about that, like, when you first kind of came back in contact with her. What--what, what--what was your relationship like?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, just work. That's about it. I know we would come in. Like, "Morning, how you doing?" type of thing.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: You know, same thing with the whole watch. Just, you know, saying good morning to everybody, just talking.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And one thing about me is, like, if I work with you, I'm going to have to be obligated to talk to you. So, it's either. Like, you can either hate me or not. Cool. If not, I'm going to just still say good morning.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: If you choose not to talk to me, you choose not to. But towards me and Angie, it was acquaintances. Like, we were--we were good. Cordial.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Everything was cool.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. That's very good. Fast forward just a--a smidge because I'm momentarily curious about this. So, where do you think she's at?

CSSN COPELAND: If I--I couldn't tell you. I know when she left, she left. I know she was saying she was mad at Gil. I mean, the night of you know, she was mad as fuck. That's all. Sorry for cussing, but----

SA GEREL: No, no, that, that's----

CSSN COPELAND: You know, she was on a--calling a lot of people. I know she had called her ex, that lived in Texas.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And she was saying, like, how he fucked up, how he can't do this, can't do that. She's always spending money on him. Always sending him money. And I'm just sitting there. Like, cool. And, I had talked to the dude. He was pretty chill, pretty cool. And then, from there, that's when she just started calling other people.

SA GEREL: Why was she so mad at Gil?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like I said, they got into an argument, so they got into an argument about a bike helmet that Gil had gave [redacted].

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And [redacted] said that she saw some dude, or not some dude, but some female getting on his bike when she went on a walk.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And the--the day that he picked the female up, I'm guessing he was asking for the bike helmet back, and [redacted] was asking, "Why specifically the bike helmet if you gave it to me?" And he was just, like, "Oh, it reminds me of all the times and all the places we could've gone together."

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: "And things we could've done." So--so it's, like, he was basically saying it's more of like a--like a memory.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And she was, like, she doesn't want to give--give him back the bike helmet. They was just going back and forth arguing, and that's when he said--he was just, like, "Fuck it, just keep the helmet." He's. Like, "You can just keep it. I don't want it anymore."

SA GEREL: Okay. So--so, what--what--what, I--I don't fully understand like why that made her so upset.
CSSN COPELAND: Because, obviously, she was--in her eyes, she thought that he was going to give it to another female to ride on his bike. Obviously, they've dated.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: And, you know.
SA GEREL: Sounds like jealousy. Is that the right word for how she was feeling?
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, if that's how you want to put it. Yeah.
SA GEREL: Well, I don't know. I--I'm just trying to figure it out. But--but she--she was concerned with this other female and Gil.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA GEREL: And. Like, whatever he was doing with her. But I don't want to put words in the--what--that's why I kind of want to know what your thoughts are as to why she was so mad.
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, that's what I would think, obviously. Or she's mad because, obviously, I don't know if they're trying to fix the relationship or if they're still talking.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I knew they dated, you know, and she talked to another dude.
SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: At the end of the day, that's not my business. That's totally their business. I mean, cool. Like, y'all can do what y'all want to do. But I'm not going to get myself involved in their situation.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. So, you don't know where--where she's at. Did you see or ever hear anything from her that makes you think that she would just not go to work and disappear? Anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I mean, I don't really text her. Like, usually when I leave people, I just be. Like, "If you need something, just call or text me," and I just leave it like that.

SA GEREL: Okay. Now I know that all of us can be tempted at times to cover for friends and family. Like, if they do something and they're, like, "Oh man, I'm gonna--I got your back." I--I don't know if that's happening here, but I--I would hope that, if there's something that you know of, something she may have wanted to do, you would let us know. Is anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. I mean, the only person that I know that talks to her on daily is Gillespie and Rich.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Those are the two main people that she talks to at work.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, if you want more, you probably have to ask them or talk to them.

SA GEREL: Sure.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: But those are the two people that she talks to. Like, pretty much on daily, so.

SA GEREL: Okay. And--and they have and they--they will. Like, keep talking to them. But there are times--this is my thinking. You--you--you, of course, make your own thoughts, but, even though we may feel tempted to help other people, sometimes it's more important to actually not. You know, so in this case, you've got tons of people looking for her, including her family.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: And worried sick about her. In this instance, I--I would suggest that it's more important to, if there's something that you could feel tempted to hide on her behalf, that you wouldn't do that with us right now, even if you have already.

CSSN COPELAND: Fuck no. I mean, you see the situation I'm in. I'm not--like, at the end of the day, if somebody fuck up, that's on them.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Okay. Okay. I appreciate you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: I--I got that vibe from you, but I wanted to make sure that we were seeing that in the same way. Because I mean, I definitely have been around some people, or maybe even myself sometimes been. Like, I'm not going to ever hurt that person, and-- and I'm not going to tell. The--the police or anybody about something that person did. Because I care that much, like a loyalty thing.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, you see how big it's getting. At the end of the day, I mean, I've told both of you what I have going on in my life.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm--I'm at this point, I'm not helping nobody put something like that.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: If they leave, I'm snitching, like yeah. This person left. I'm sorry, but I'm telling.

SA GEREL: Well, and I thank you. And I wouldn't even call it that. It's just, like, you care enough----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: ----about the person. Let's go ahead and get this squared away so someone, you know, doesn't get any extra smoke. That's good.

002651_COPELAND

All right, so let's unfortunately think about some possibilities for---well, let's--let's presume for a second that maybe something bad happened to her. Do you have, like, a list--we all have this list of angels and demons. People that are. Like, there's no way these people would've done anything bad to her. I'm not so sure about these people. The--the demons and I--we might want to be looking more at them.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: Who--who--who is your angels and demons in terms of who could have--who--who--well, let's start with angels.

Who would you say, like, there's no way this person did anything bad to her?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I can't really determine that. I mean, I know there's people she talks to, but at the end of the day, I don't jurisdict everybody she hangs out with.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I don't--I couldn't honestly tell you that from a get go. I mean, I know the people that we work with, you know, she talks to, and the only two that I see her talk to when we're at work is Gillespie and Rich.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So.

002652_COPELAND

SA GEREL: And--and they give you a little, grace on this. Oh, I'm not going to hold your feet to the fire and say, like, "Oh, he said that they couldn't have done it, so, there's no way they did it." I--I mean, you're not God. You don't know all the things.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, but I--but I would--but sometimes those instincts are pretty important. Right? So--so you may feel. Like, I know Gil, I mean, he's not perfect, but, like, I would be shocked if he did anything bad like that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Or you might say, like, Gil's suspicious. I mean, you might want to be looking at Gil.

W Yeah.

SA GEREL: You know what I mean? So, like, I'm not going to--we wouldn't let people know, like that Copeland said, "Look at Gil."

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Or whomever. But--but your--your--everyone's instincts can be pretty darn important. So, like, if you have any instincts, good or bad, towards the people that have been mentioned around her, we'd appreciate to hear about it.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, at the end of the day, I don't really know those two like that. I mean, I know JJ is somebody we work with.

There's Garcia and Miguel, Buco. Like, when we're at work, we work. Cool. You know, time to time we joke around and bullshit.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: That's, you know, that's just our way. Like, theoretically for CS's to, you know, get through our day.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: At the end of the day, we--we're the first people to walk on the ship, last people to leave, so.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: You know, that's just one way we get through work. As far as Gillespie and Mitch, I don't--Rich, I don't really know them like that, so.

SA GEREL: So, those dudes are CS's?

CSSN COPELAND: No, no, no, no, no. I don't know what their rate is.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, going into a DDG and they got, you know. Like, STGs and stuff like that. I don't know what those rates are.

SA GEREL: Okay. Gotcha. So, they don't work with y'all.

CSSN COPELAND: No, no, no, no. I know. Like, they, you know, they come in the galley and they talked back--they be in the back talking to [redacted]

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: You got. Like, CS1 or CS2 walk--walk in the galley, and they walk through and see them back there.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And then, obviously, they asked--asked them to get out the galley.

SA GEREL: What was [redacted]s first ship? I mean, is it the one that you all are on, or is it a different ship?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe it's the ship we're on now.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. All right. So, you mentioned JJ. Who--what--who's that? Say that full name again, please.

CSSN COPELAND: JJ?

SA GEREL: Yeah. Who's that?

CSSN COPELAND: He's somebody, a CS.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, all those names besides Rich and----

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: ----Gillespie, those are all CS's.

SA GEREL: Okay. I got you. You said a bunch names. I just want to make sure I'm understanding the--the same people or different people. So, do you know JJ's full name?

CSSN COPELAND: It's, like, Edison Jean Jaques or something like that.

SA GEREL: Jaques. Okay. All right. And who else did you mention?

ENCLOSURE D

CSSN COPELAND: Buco.

SA GEREL: Buco. Okay. And is Buco a CS?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GEREL: And----

CSSN COPELAND: Garcia and Miguel.

SA GEREL: Garcia and Miguel. So--so these folks are people around you all?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GEREL: Do you categorize them as suspicious or not suspicious?

CSSN COPELAND: They're not suspicious.

SA GEREL: Okay. All right. Just kind of people you work with?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: All right. Any suspicious people?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like I said, it's limited in. Like, from my point of view.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't really know anybody around [redacted], you know, that's, like, aggressive or somebody that could hate [redacted].

SA GEREL: Okay. The--the--the girl with--with the bike helmet, do you know her name?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GEREL: You know, even. Like, a nickname, or, like, do you know anything about her at all?

CSSN COPELAND: I--I believe she is a civilian.

SA GEREL: A civilian.

CSSN COPELAND: I--I don't know who she is, so.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, I remember Gillespie telling me, like, his little portion on it, and then, when [redacted] came over and she was talking about it. That's--that's the only thing that I know about it.

SA GEREL: Okay. How does [redacted], how--how does [redacted] feel about that girl?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, she didn't really know the female, so she was just, like, categorizing her as a bitch?

SA GEREL: Yeah. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, she was, like, "Yeah, I can't believe he's trying to get my helmet for something. Like, for a bitch."

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: I was just, like, I mean, at the end of the day, that's how men are sometimes.

SA GEREL: Did--did--did you ever hear [redacted] talk about getting. Like, pestered by anybody? Like, blown up or, like, tons of messages or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. Nah. She's never mentioned anything like that. I mean, as far as her phone, she was on the phone with her ex from Texas.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's the only person I talked to, and then, from there, she was, like, just calling.

SA GEREL: So, it brings another curiosity about the Texas ex. Like, what--what the world prompted her to call him that night?

CSSN COPELAND: She was basically saying, like, you know, like everybody has their person they go to.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And I guess that was her person that she goes to when things happen to her. You know, somebody she needs to talk to.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's what she said. She was, like, basically. Like, she's going to call--she was, like, "Copeland," she was, like, "This is my ex from Texas." And she was, like, basically. Like, that's her right-hand man.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, sounds like she wasn't mad at him.

CSSN COPELAND: No. No.

SA GEREL: Oh, okay. Cool. Okay. So, she was kind of calming down and talking through her frustrations.

CSSN COPELAND: Venting, venting to him, so.

SA GEREL: Okay. I got it. All right. Well, I appreciate it. I-- I got sidetracked on a bunch of specific questions, so sorry about that.

CSSN COPELAND: You're fine.

SA GEREL: All right, so I think I'm going to have him start kind of talking more about those--the--the the weekend. But before I do that, did you have any questions about the stuff we've covered so far?

SA MANN: Just with, I guess, [redacted], like what was your guys, the extent of your--how would you. Like, describe your relationship? Like, what'd you guys?

CSSN COPELAND: We were just work people, like people that work together.

SA MANN: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. That's literally what I would describe it.

SA MANN: Oh. Do you guys ever get into. Like, the maybe want to date, hookup, connect scene?

CSSN COPELAND: Not even--not even thought about that.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: All right. I was curious, kind of what--how you guys were inter-weaved. Like, friends, dating, relationship. Kind of just, we hook up because can. Whatever it is.

002659_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Like, she knows that, and I wouldn't do nothing with her. At the end of the day. Like, we work together.
SA MANN: Why's that?
CSSN COPELAND: Huh?
SA MANN: Why's that?
CSSN COPELAND: Like, me personally, I had a bad experience with a CS, and after that, like I--I told myself I can't get with a CS. Like, they're cool to hang out with, but physically dating with CS, I can't do that shit no more.
SA MANN: Can you tell me a little about that?
CSSN COPELAND: So, there was a female that was on the DDG that I'm on now.
SA MANN: [Affirmative response.]
CSSN COPELAND: And we were talking for a little bit, and we started taking it a little more serious. And there it came to a time where she had a seizure on the barge. So, as soon as I got off work, I went and picked her up. And I was on my way home, and my--my tire blew up on the highway, and my rim cracked.

So, I called my homeboy to come pick me up, and I took--I called the towing company to tow the car to the nearest shop where I can get--get my tire fixed.

SA MANN: Yeah.

ENCLOSURE D

CSSN COPELAND: So, basically, I was asking, do they have a spare tire? And they were saying they don't have spare tires. And--and able, for me to get a tire for my rim, I would have to have, like, a good rim because my rim split.

SA MANN: Right.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I was, like, fuck. So, my homebody took me to the junk yard. We went to the junk yard. I picked up a spare tire from there, and I called the dealership, I got my car from, and--and he gave me a number for a welder, and he welded the rim together, and then, from there, I ended up buying a tire from there, and I got it all fixed, same day and everything. Cool. And she was with--she was with us the--the whole time.

So, I get home, and she came home with me, and I laid down on the couch, like I fell asleep. And, you know, she's. Like, she wants--obviously wants attention. She's. Like, "Can you talk to me for a little bit?" This, that, and the third? And I was, like--I was, like, "Can you give me, like, just, like, 15 minutes? Like I'm--I'm tired as fuck. Like, you've seen everything I just did today."

So, she was like--like, "All right, cool." And, so, she sat down. I wake up and she's talking shit on the phone with her sister about me. So, I was, like, "All right, cool. Like, you are--are just going to sit here and be disrespectful in my face. You can leave." She was, like, "All right, fuck you, then."

She left, realized she had nowhere to go, so she's sitting outside my door, banging on my door for, like, eight hours. I just told her, I was, like, "Goodnight. Like, you chose to leave. I'm not opening the door. And you left and did what you did. You blew up, projected, and did what you did. I'm not coming to open the door."

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: So, she's talking about she's going to go get the RA to come open my door. This, that, and the third. I'm just, like, I just kept saying, "Goodnight, goodnight, goodnight." And it came about. Like, five, six o'clock. My roommate was going to go get breakfast, and she pushed my roommate out the way and bombarded my room with a knife in her hand.

SA MANN: Jeez.

CSSN COPELAND: She broke everything. Like, all my electronics in my room. She fucking destroyed my room. She tried to stab me. There was a whole shit show. And then, from there. I think it was, like, almost a week straight, she slashed my tires every day, and every day I had to fucking fix that shit.

SA MANN: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: On top of that, coming to work. So, on that part, it was a whole shit show. And after that, I'm. Like, I--I can't fuck with a CS no more.

SA GEREL: What's that girl's name?

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted]

SA GEREL: [redacted] Okay. She's on the barge?

CSSN COPELAND: No, not no more. They took her off the barge because she--she had a seizure, so.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: She's in some command on base.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. Yeah. It sounds. Like, yeah, it didn't sound good. Did she catch any charges from that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GEREL: Did you tell anybody?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I mean, they had the MAs involved. I talked to NCIS on the, not this building, but it's a building, it was the precinct. That's what it was. They took me to the precinct.

SA GEREL: Oh, gotcha.

SA MANN: On base.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. Yeah. And I talked to a detective from there.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. Did she pay you back or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: Not that I--not yet. I--I don't know how that----

SA MANN: How long ago was it?
CSSN COPELAND: This was a couple months ago.
SA MANN: Okay. Yeah.
SA GEREL: All right.
SA MANN: Yeah, I guess obviously that's a rough lesson to learn, but expensive one.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: But--but it is just kind of a, not, I guess for lack of better. Like, picking up things at work just didn't make sense anymore. Like, just try to keep work and life like that.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: Personal life a little separate from a relationship perspective.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. I mean, on top of that, you know, when I was on the carrier, I talked to people, and I also talked to. Like, you know. Like, the higher-ups, first classes, and they always said never date a CS. At the end of the day----
SA MANN: Okay. So, what--how would you describe then the relationship you have with [redacted] Like, what would you guys say you are?
CSSN COPELAND: Just friends. I mean, we work together. Cool. You know, if we, you know, do something outside of work or, you know, like sometimes we go eat or just find something fun to do. Go bowling or something.

ENCLOSURE D

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, that's what we did last time. Before this time, we hung out. It was me and two other CS's, but they weren't on our ship and----

SA MANN: This past weekend, or the---- CSSN COPELAND: No, no, no. Not this past weekend. It was months ago.

SA MANN: Oh, okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, when I first--when I got back from deployment.

SA MANN: Gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: And, she--we went out and, my homeboy picked--no, my homegirl picked me up and my homeboy that I previously met that--that day, we all went out and we went to Dirty Buffalo and then, we went to Dave and Buster's. And there's been another time I think we went out and we were watching a football game, too.

So, it's been a couple times we hung out previous to her coming over, so we just work together. I do the same with everybody I work with. Like, if y'all want to pop out, do something for the weekend or something, just go find something chill to do, we can always do that.

SA MANN: Okay. Did you guys ever hook up at any point?

CSSN COPELAND: Never. Not one point.
SA MANN: Oh, would you?
CSSN COPELAND: No. I mean, I already told you, fucking with a CS--
--
SA MANN: No, I mean, like, CS aside. Like, did you, like--she a pretty girl. You're, like, "Hey, this is----"
CSSN COPELAND: I don't really look at her like that.
SA MANN: No. Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: No.
SA GEREL: So, I think I said this at the beginning, but just to kind of reiterate it, when you're talked to by people like us, police or authorities. Like, there's always going to be a little temptation to make sure you're, like, "Oh shit, this is kind of rough. I--I feel like I need to make sure I do--do what I can to protect myself." That's very normal, very natural.

So, with that being said, though. Like, particularly Tyler and I as polygraph examiners, when we talk to you today, we--we may use a lot of what we talk about if--when you come back, right? I love that you want to come back because I think that's a good way you can help yourself to relieve some of this stress.

So, but it's really crucially important that we get. Like, the best truth. The truth is the truth. Right? It is what it is.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

ENCLOSURE D
65 of 152
002666_COPELAND

SA GEREL: But sometimes when you get talked to by multiple people. Like, it's very normal for you to remember different things, to have things you want to add some clarifications. That's just normal stuff.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: If you--I'd like to encourage you to do that with us today. So, if there's something that you know, you said before, and you're, like, "I know I said that, but I kind of wish I could have said it a little differently," you can. All right? You can say it differently.

We want--we want to help you the best way we can, and that's only we can do is working with the full truth.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, like, if there's something that might come in and feel like they may get mad about that, or it may come across as making me, like, dishonest, whatever, I don't want you to worry about that. It's--it's me asking you to be very strong and courageous to trust us like that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: But I'm only saying that because I'm an old dude and I talk to a lot of folks, and then--and that I'm also a human. So, like, I get that instinct to be cautious and careful with what you say. Because you--you don't want to get any further trouble. I get it. You just have to trust us to know that we aren't worried about you, we're worried about her.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, there might be some things that you could add more details to, and I just really encourage you to do that.

CSSN COPELAND: As far as what?

SA GEREL: Well, particularly about what we're going to get into, which is, like, I'd like you to walk us through. Like, the--the weekend. So, from--from the night that you all made arrangements to make the tacos and salsa----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: ----kind of start there and then, give us. Like, the best absolute account of--of what happened between then and when she went missing.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: So, because again, like we're seeing some things that we--we think could be important, but some of them may not even know it's important yet.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: But because you spent a lot of time with her around then you prob--you almost a hundred percent know things that will help us find her.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So, that's why we're--we're going through it multiple times. You did a good job last time, but I'd like you just to have that--that comfort. Like, if you need to add or change a few of those details, please do.

CSSN COPELAND: Because everything I said from the last time they talked to me is pretty much the same.

SA GEREL: Okay. And--and--and what--what I'd like--we--we have this thing that we do and--and we call it a timeline. And--and it comes in a little different, but it's very helpful because of the way the human brain works. It--it's part of a--a method that we call scientific interviewing. Sometimes it's helpful, sometimes it's not. But it--it, I think in this case you really might be able to find some more details that could help the case.

So, all it is--is we'll put a piece of paper right here. We'll get. Like, a beginning of the--the timeframe register and then the end of it. And we'd like you--did you bring sticky notes?

SA MANN: I think they're still in the car. We can find some here.

SA GEREL: Okay.

SA MANN: I'll see if I can. S

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah. Thank you. I'll keep explaining it.

[SA Mann departed the room at timestamp 1:05:00.]

SA GEREL: And--and so, how we do it is you just get these little yellow sticky notes and--and on the paper. Like, we'd like you to write. Like, the memory you have and put it on the timeline. Like, where you think it goes in order.

And then, it doesn't have to be. Like, from, it doesn't have to be. Like, any particular way. Just as you think of stuff. Like, as you think of it, write it, put it down, and then go to the next thing. "Okay, I remember this." Write it down. Put it down where you think it goes in order, and--and just do that which will allow us to get the--a good picture of kind of how you remember the--the timeframe, with her that worked out.

CSSN COPELAND: So, like, I'm writing or, like, writing words.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: Or I'm drawing,

SA GEREL: No, not drawing. Just words.

CSSN COPELAND: Oh.

SA GEREL: So, like, you know, I don't want to give too many examples because it's actually good for you to--to--to use your own words and thoughts. But as an example. Like, if you want to have--like, if you have a memory about the grocery store. Like, Food Lion or whatever it is, and--and then, put a Food Lion. And then, you see what I mean? And--and then, you can get--be as descriptive as you want, or you can be as general like that as you want. You can put "grocery store."

ENCLOSURE D

And then, just kind of put it in the order of things are, and then, that'll help us to kind of probably develop some other questions that you can help us with.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: Is that cool?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: He'll back with that in a second. I'll go and your space ready.

[SA Mann entered the room at timestamp 1:06:22.]

SA MANN: All right. We got a few. We can probably find some more if we need to, for now.

SA GEREL: Nice. Good work.

SA MANN: I mean, it's not a ton, but we can hunt out some more. I'm sure that was just a quick ask.

You getting--you get a ride over here?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: You have a car? I know you said. Like, you had one, but you do you still got it.

CSSN COPELAND: Nah. It's fucked up.

SA MANN: Oh. What's wrong now?

CSSN COPELAND: The head gasket.

SA GEREL: Oh, so it's not just a fixed tire anymore, huh? Okay. So, how you been getting around normally now?

CSSN COPELAND: Either my roommate drops me off, and my home boy will text me home.

SA MANN: Okay. Have you been driving at all?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA MANN: No? Okay. Do you have access to a car you can even drive?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I mean, like, my roommate, you know, sometimes my roommate, he'll let me drive his car if I need to go grab something to eat, or sometimes he'll take me there.

SA MANN: What's he got?

CSSN COPELAND: He drives a Jeep.

SA MANN: Okay. I--I might have a marker. No, I don't. All right.

SA GEREL: All right. So, kind of already explained to him the general idea. Let's kind of consider this the beginning of our timeframe. And when--when did you have that evening? Do you know when you were preparing the salsa?

CSSN COPELAND: Can you say that again?

SA GEREL: Yeah. When--when did you--what day did you----

SA MANN: When you were making tacos.

ENCLOSURE D

002672_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Yeah, when were you making tacos?
CSSN COPELAND: Thursday. I believe it was Wednesday transitioning to Thursday.
SA GEREL: Okay. So, Wednesday. I don't know if you think of it this way, but do you think of it in terms of. Like, calendar dates? Do you remember what date that was? If you don't, that's okay.
CSSN COPELAND: No.
SA GEREL: Okay. So--so, let's just go ahead and call that Wednesday. All right. And then, as many details as you can provide from Wednesday through---- SA MANN: Let's say the entirety of that week?
SA GEREL: Yeah. The entire weekend. So, we'll--we'll cut the weekend off, like---- SA MANN: Monday morning.
SA GEREL: ----Monday morning. All right. So, Wednesday through Monday.
SA MANN: You went to work Monday after?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I went to work Sunday as well, so.
SA MANN: Okay. Gotcha.
CSSN COPELAND: Well, I just--I didn't work Monday or Sunday, but I had to check in.
SA MANN: Right.
CSSN COPELAND: I was still being marked UA.

SA GEREL: Okay. And, if you need more space, we'll make it, and we'll get more of these if you need it, but you can go ahead and get started, and, to--have the thought, put down something that helps us know what that thought is and just place it wherever you feel like you can go send into the week. Okay?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like, for instance. Like, the whole weekend. Like, I ain't do shit.

SA GEREL: I know.

CSSN COPELAND: I just stayed home, so.

SA GEREL: So, I know this might feel like Why do they even care about all that? Every little detail is--is important. I mean, some stuff that we may don't know, stuff that you don't know.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: So--so again, as much as you can put in there.

SA MANN: Sometimes memory, too, like you--you and Angie could have had a thousand conversations that weekend and then, there'll be something that just by writing this down, you go, "Oh man, I remember she mentioned whatever." And that'll help us find some directionality. So, we're just--I know it seems kind of goofy. We're. Like, "Hey, do all this." But it--it is truly--the brain is a powerhouse. Right?

It's a machine doing all kinds of things. This will help maybe pull up some of those things that we just don't feel are pertinent.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: So, that's why we're asking. It's not--I know that you're probably. Like, what in the world are these guys doing? But we're trying to help that brain find those little things that could help us pivot to figure out where she's at.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Like, for instance, me, like, I'm not, like, the type of person to--I don't know. Because. Like, when I talk----
SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]
CSSN COPELAND: ----that's what brings back memories. Like, me writing things down because I'm not, like, really the type of person--I don't like reading. I don't like books.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: I'm. Like, more about outgoing person. Like, outdoors, like doing all this, like, it is cool, but it's, like, I don't think that'll refresh my memory.
SA MANN: How about this? If you talk it and we write it, and then, we'll just figure out where it goes timewise? Does that work for you?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, that's fine. I mean, I don't have--have a problem writing either, but I'm just letting you know that.
SA GEREL: Yeah. Let's let him give it a go. I--I mean, I appreciate you sharing that----

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I'm willing to do it.
SA GEREL: ----and--and we--we've got no--we've got nothing to lose about trying this.
CSSN COPELAND: Okay.
SA GEREL: So--so it may--it may help with your memory, it may not, but--but it--it is a good attempt and we thank you for giving it a go.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah.
SA MANN: And if you want, if it's easier, we can stick this on the wall, and you can write it out. I don't know. Whatever you---- CSSN COPELAND: It's fine.
SA MANN: Okay. Whatever will help you.
SA GEREL: Yeah. I'll get out of your way. So, let me go run and try to find some more of this.
SA MANN: Yeah.
SA GEREL: Where is it at in the car, by the way, just in case it as a last ditch effort.
SA MANN: They probably just floating around the truck somewhere, but----
SA GEREL: Okay.
SA MANN: Then, we'll make that--I just tossed them in there, so I-- I don't even know if they--actually, let me see if I have a-- sometimes I throw a sticky pad in here. Or not that one. This one.

That'll work.

SA GEREL: Oh, that's good. Yeah. That's good. Perfect.

SA MANN: I forgot I had that in there. See, using it on me. Little memory keys. Right? We can even do it for this.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: A little big. But it's all right.

While you're doing this, too, is there something we can get you to eat? Snacks or something? Just kind of power. I know you brought some in your hat like that jerky.

CSSN COPELAND: No, I--I'm fine.

SA MANN: All right.

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't even know that was in my pocket.

SA MANN: Oh, well, there you go. Surprise.

SA GEREL: And, in this room, I can also offer you an apple and crackers, Captain's wafers.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm fine.

So, like, when you say, like, Wednesday through Monday. Like, this is what happened each day?

SA GEREL: Yeah. However, really want to kind of tackle it. But you--you can--yes, please. Just as you think through those several days, of--of your--of your memories, just put them down as you--as you recall. And it does not have to be in order. So, you can, if you think of something that happened Saturday, "Man, this happened right there."

SA MANN: So, it's easier. You can use these. They just--I don't know if that'll help, but I--I don't know if the stickers all messed up on those.

CSSN COPELAND: I--I just--yeah. Yeah. It is just, like, it's staggered weirdly.

SA MANN: Oh, okay. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Gotcha.

SA GEREL: I am sure that's not a rat.

SA MANN: Old buildings. If it makes you feel any better, this place probably isn't much better than a barge, and we're stuck here, so. SA GEREL: Hey, Copeland, you're doing a great job. We're going to give you the room for a minute, just to give you a little privacy. Here's your other pad if you if you run out the stickies. You can use these, too, okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Okay. Thank you.

SA GEREL: We'll come check on you in a few minutes. All right?

CSSN COPELAND: All right. Thank you. You mind if I--you mind just handing me the beef jerky stick?

SA GEREL: Of course, yeah. You--you want an apple or the Captain's wafers.

002678_COPELAND

SA MANN: No, no. We can get you. Like, chips, crackers, whatever.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm good. Thank you.

[SA Mann and SA Gerel departed the room at timestamp 1:19:40.]

[SA Mann and SA Gerel entered the room at timestamp 1:45:20.]

SA GEREL: Hey Copeland. All right. Looks like you did some good work here. Work here. How you doing?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm doing all right.

SA GEREL: Okay. Good. I'm going to let you put your head down. How you feeling?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm tired.

SA GEREL: So, you said you didn't get any--you didn't get any sleep at all last night? Like, did--did you try?

CSSN COPELAND: I sleep--I mean, on top of that, I have a roommate, so he's the game screaming so.

SA GEREL: Oh, man.

CSSN COPELAND: He doesn't--he doesn't like--so his schedule is a lot easier.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: He literally stays up gaming the whole night.

SA MANN: And you have to listen to it.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. So, he usually gets off the game around. Like, when he has to go to work.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, he goes to work and then sleeps the entire day.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, he stays up all night screaming, and I don't think I closed my eyes--it was maybe around. Like, three, four o'clock.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: When I actually got into the bed, because I was setting up the whole entire time for my uniform.

SA GEREL: Yeah, uniform. Did you touch sleep at least and catch a few--few moments?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Okay. All right.

SA MANN: Yeah. So, good work. It looks like. Talk--talk us through. What do--do you--what do you got here?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, from the start to finish, is everything got correlated each day of?

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I believe the first through the third one is Wednesday.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, from the third to the fourth one is Thursday to Friday. And then, from there, each--I believe I have each day on.

SA GEREL: Okay. What's that one say? Cleanup and something Angie helped?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. She helped me clean up, and then she left.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, this is, do you--you remember about this, like what time or approximately?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't.

SA GEREL: Like, morning, midday, afternoon.

CSSN COPELAND: I think it was sometime in the morning.

SA GEREL: Okay. What day was that?

CSSN COPELAND: Thursday.

SA MANN: About--so it was the night after you guys had hung out?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Okay. Can you--do you need more paper or space or anything? I don't want to limit it.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, that's pretty much. Like, everything that I could. Like, just write down like that. I mean, I--I obviously. Like, I was just keeping it. Like, limited. But as long as you have questions, I'll answer them.

SA GEREL: Oh, okay. Yeah. Yeah. Yeah. So--so if you thank you for that, it's really good detail. I really appreciate you doing that. So, any other details you can add to the phone calls that she started having? Like, that--that Wednesday night, CSSN COPELAND: I think the first phone call started off with her calling her--her ex from Texas.

SA GEREL: When--when--when that happened, how was she--was she I--I--what was her--what was her emotional state. Like, when she started calling her?

CSSN COPELAND: She was fine. Like, before she even started talking. Like, she was, she was, like, checking in on him, seeing how he was doing, and then, from there, that's when she told me to come over and meet him, and she was basically saying, like, we kind of looked the same.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, we have, like, the same body build, complexion--like, skin complexion. And she was saying, like, if I--if I was to get to know him. Like, would be. Like, good friends or whatever.

SA GEREL: So, she said, come over and meet him. Like, was it FaceTime or something like that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. They were----

SA GEREL: Okay. So, you saw him on the phone?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: All right.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, from there. Like, I was, like, "What's good bro?" And he was, like, "What's good?" And then, I just introduced myself, and she introduced me to him. And he kept--we kept it pretty cordial and then, from there, that's when they started talking.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, help me understand a little before that, you said that she uses her ex as kind of. Like, her--her main go to. I might have misunderstood, but I--I was kind of under the impression she--she was upset before that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. That's when we started talking about Gil.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like in his incident. Like, that's when we first started talking about it, and she was, like, "No fucking way." You know, and just talking. She was, like, "I got a call, so and so," whatever her ex's name is.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And then, that's when she was, like, "Oh, this is my ex from Texas." And then, she hopped on FaceTime, and then, from there, she was, like, "Come over so you can meet him." And that's when I met him.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, the--the Gil stuff, how--how long would that conversation with Gil happen before that FaceTime with the ex?

CSSN COPELAND: Probably. Like, seven minutes.

SA GEREL: Okay. Before that seven minutes, how was she acting?
CSSN COPELAND: Like, she was cool. Like, we were listening to music, and then, from there, she was teaching me how to make the tacos. Like, it was, like, corn--corn tacos.
SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]
CSSN COPELAND: Once she put oil in a pan.
SA GEREL: Nice.
CSSN COPELAND: And she would let the, like, the tortilla like--like when it started softening and then, I would fold it in half.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: And then, from there, I would put it on a plate, and then, I would put cheese in there, the taco meat, and then, whatever condiments I wanted, and then, the salsa.
SA GEREL: Okay. Were they good?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was good. The salsa, that shit was spicy as fuck though. When you eat it. Like, it is good.
SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]
SA MANN: It hurts later. Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. And then, like--like a couple of minutes later, you start feeling in your stomach, and that shit--that shit will hurt.
SA GEREL: Did she make it. Like, from scratch?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Oh, nice. All right. So, before that, she was acting cool. Sometimes, when someone goes from cool to not cool, something triggered it. Do you--do you know what triggered the cool to not cool?

CSSN COPELAND: The bike helmet. Like, when she was talking about the bike helmet, that's what triggered it.

SA GEREL: So, she heard--did--well, tell me about that bike helmet. How did she--how did the bike helmet come up?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. She was, I guess, texting Gil or some shit, and she had mentioned something, and she was, like, "You want to hear something crazy?" I was, like, "What's up?" And then, that's when she started talking about the Gil thing. And I was, like--I was, like--well, I was, like, "I'm not really going to get y'all situation, but that's crazy. Because he had told me today about such and such."

And that's when I told her about the--the conversation that I had with him on the mess decks about the female that had his bike or that drove on his bike. And she was, like, that's--that, like, she was, like, "That's fucking crazy."

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And she was, like, "Come look at this. And she was, like, showing me the text of when he was asking for the bike helmet back and shit. And then, from there, I'm guessing she just put two and two together.

SA GEREL: Oh. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's what caused her blow up about the bike helmet.

SA GEREL: Okay. Gotcha. All right. And so, after that phone call with the ex, what--how did the night go from there?

CSSN COPELAND: I was just cooling and I was just sitting on the couch, just listening to music while she's over there just calling everybody. Just left and right, just calling people. And then, I remember my roommate had walked in, and he walked in because he--I believe he came from the airport, from leave or some shit.

SA GEREL: Is it your actual roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Oh, no, no, no. It's the people from across the room. So, inside the room, there's four people per room.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: But not four people per room, but it's four people in the room. SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: But two people per--per room.

SA GEREL: Gotcha. So, you can----

CSSN COPELAND: It was the dude that lives across.

SA GEREL: You know their names?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know his name. I think it's like--his name is, fuck, fuck, fuck. I think it's, like, something Cruz. I think his last name is Cruz.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And he's--he's Mexican. And. Like, he walked in, he is like--he's. Like, "Yo, everything good?" He's like--he looked at her, he is, like, "She good?" I was, like, "Bro, just--just let her have a moment." I'm just sitting on the couch, just cooling. And he was, like, "All right, bro." He's. Like, "if something pop off or you need me, just come knock on the door. I was, like, "All right, cool."

From there, she just kept making other phone calls and shit, and I told her, "I--I--I'm going to just go ahead to sleep. So, if you--if you want to go to sleep, then go ahead," and from there, that's when I went to sleep. By the time I woke up, she was in the bed, and that's when Chief was on the door.

So, I thought it was my roommate. Because sometimes when I close the door or if the door closes, my roommate either knocks or he fiddles with the handle.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: So, I thought it was him. So, I was, like, "Hold on." And I opened the door, and it's my Chief and he's. Like, "What's going on?" And I was, like, "Morning, Chief." And then,

ENCLOSURE D

002687_COPELAND

obviously, I see it's daylight, so I'm. Like, "Fuck." And he was, like, "Yeah." He was, like, "Having a late start, huh? I was, like, "Yes, Chief," and then, from there, he just told me to clean up and then, find a way to work. He's. Like, "Do I got a way to work?" I was, like, "Yeah. Obviously, when my roommate gets here, he can take me."

But by the time my roommate got home, they were off work. So, that's when the bullshit on my behalf started. And I thought we had a blind turnover because last week we had a--a 96, so I was working that weekend. And how it worked, I would--the processes is if I was working, then I would--I would have to come in at 4:30. And if I wasn't. Like, a regular turnover.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: Like, for instance, today I came in at 7:30 for turnover.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: So, I thought I didn't have to come in Friday. Cool. They didn't really say nothing. And then, Saturday hits, and they tell me I'm UA. I'm not, you know, me being a junior Sailor, not knowing the full details about being marked UA, so I'm not thinking it's a big deal. I was just, like, all right, cool. Like, they'll just see me Monday.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And I'll explain what the fuck happened over the weekend. And then, Sunday hits, that's when more bullshit happens. You know, they had the MAs come get me out of my--my room, and they're basically asking me, like, I'm being marked UA. My command is looking for me and so on. So, I was, like, "All right, cool."

Then, after they left, I called my Chief, and I was, like, "Yo, Chief." I was, like, "Obviously, this is getting out of hand. You know, you guys marking UA and whatnot, whatnot." And my Chief was basically--he, you know, I'm not going to say because you know it, it's him and it's me, but he was telling me, "Go in Monday, because it--it is not really going to make a difference or whatever." But he was, like, "If you want to go in today, you--you know, it's your choice."

So, I was, like, "Yeah, I already got my uniform and shit on, so--so I'll just go in and, you know, see whatever they--they can do. Like, you know. And he was, like, "All right." But he was basically telling me, like, I didn't have to go in. Like he said, I still could waited until Monday, but----

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: ----it would've made shit worse from--from what they said. But, you know, I went in, checked in with the CDO. The CDO was, like, yeah, my parents had called, and she called the command and she called the base. She was worried because I didn't answer her call. So, so. I was, like, "Yeah, I talked to her." She wasn't-- you know, she put belt to ass on me, so.

002689_COPELAND

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: From there, they made me do a urinalysis, and then, from urinalysis, I went back home. Well, after I had left, I--I went to Chipotle. It was me and my two roommates that's across the room.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And they took me to Chick-fil-A. We went to Chick-fil-A. We all got something to eat, went back home, ate, and then, the morning comes, I wake up, you know, a little early, and I'm trying to book a Uber, trying to book a Z-trip. Nothing's popping up. Because obviously the--the Truman just got back. So----

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: ----I'm guessing it's hella busy. So, I called--I called Chief Parker, and I was, like, "Morning, Chief." He's. Like, what's going on?" And I was, like, "Do you--you think it's possible--" I was, like, "Do you think, you know, you can give me a ride? Because I tried booking so, and so, and it's not working." But that's when I was, like, "I think it's just because the Truman's back."

So, he was, like, "Yeah." He was, like, "I'm almost at work." But he was, like, "You're fine, I'll come grab you." So, he came and grabbed me, and then, from there, I went to work. Chain of Command was just asking. Like, why was I UA, why I--I didn't answer calls and shit. And then, after that, finished work and then, I--I went home.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And then as the days went by, that's when everything started getting serious. Like NCIS, and everybody started talking to me.

SA GEREL: Yeah. When did you start thinking that--that--that Angie might be part of that? Like, when did you, when did--did you start ever thinking about her as far as the UA thing?

CSSN COPELAND: When I got to work and they basically told me that the both of us has been marked UA.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, is that the first time that that came to mind?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: All right. All right, so let's back up a little bit. On the--the night. So, you guys--Wednesday tonight, you guys are chilling. You watch her go through some stuff. You stayed calm. You--you room roommate comes in and--and says, "Everything cool?" And you're, like, "Yeah." He's. Like, "Let me know if you need help." Was that uncommon? Did he ever have that kind of comment to you before? Like, where he is asking you if, like, you know, the girl's okay or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I mean, at the end of the day. Like, he walked in and saw somebody crying.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like, if you were--I'm not saying like----

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: ----you know, theoretically if you were, you know, my roommate and you walk in to see somebody, you know, just sitting there crying, you would ask is everything----

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: ----okay?

SA GEREL: Is everything okay? No, I--I gotcha. All right. Was there--tell me about when she stopped crying. Was there a timeframe when she calmed down?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, yeah. Afterwards, when I told her. Like, "I'm about to. Like, go to sleep. I was, like, "It's getting late as fuck." I was, like, "I work." And--and she was, like, "Yeah, you're right." And from there, she had just sat down, and I was just, like, "If you need something, then I would just be in bed. Like, you come grab me."

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, around that time, like, she was still crying, but she was also, like, you know, I just told her. Like, "You--you got to chill. Because you know, I got people in the room."

SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: "And if you start making--like, you start getting louder and--and shit, obviously like they're going to wake up."
SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: I was, like, "Just, like, if you need to go outside, go ahead." Cool. And I was, like, from there, "I'm go to sleep." And she was, like, "All right." And that's when I went to sleep.
SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. And what--what happened after you went to sleep with her? Or what else happened? Did she stay in the same place, or did she move, or what--what happened there?
CSSN COPELAND: She stayed--she went to bed and then, when I woke up, that's when Chief was knocking on the door.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: And then, from there, he was just asking. Like, I need to get to work and shit.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: That's when I told him. Like, "I'll get to work," but obviously, my roommate coming late as fuck, I couldn't, so.
SA GEREL: Gotcha. Gotcha. So--so we've heard, and read some accounts of like when--when you were first talked to by NCIS and kind of how you shared that stuff. And we watched the--the video of that--where the video, you talking to them this last time, which is more detailed.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]
SA GEREL: And then, this is very helpful too. So, a couple things, and this is normal, so don't worry, but there's a couple things that are just a little different in that. And so, we're trying to understand why. So--so one of the things that is a little different, and some of this is also compared to some of the people are saying that they saw. Some of your roommates and things like that.

But what--we have reason to think that somebody claims they saw you and her in the common room, at least in some portion of being unclothed. Help us understand that.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, that's what the female had said to me. She said my Chief walked in and saw both of us. Like, with no clothes on. And I was, like, that's not true because obviously my Chief knocked on the door.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And he was--he was, like, knocking on the door and shit and playing with the handle. I thought it was my roommate. I opened the door and I had a full conversation with him.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And--and like I was telling you, that's when the other detective. Like, that's when she, like--I felt like she was, like, antagonizing me. Like that's when she started playing her role, and she's sitting there. Like, basically trying to make it seem like I'm lying or some shit. "Oh, so you're just going to sit here and actually call your Chief a liar?"

002694_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Okay.

SA MANN: Well, I think maybe that could have been a misconception, too. Like that could have come from a roommate, not Chief, like somebody that was seeing you guys. Because my understanding, the first time you talked to everybody, you said you--you guys had been drinking that night?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. She--she had, you know, a couple shots and then, I had about two shots of the buzz ball.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: From there, I was chilling.

SA MANN: Okay. What'd you guys do that night, though? Like, did you party hang out? Like, you're getting late into the hours?

CSSN COPELAND: We were just listening music and she was making her phone calls and shit and whoever she was on the phone with. As far as me, I told her. Like, "I'm--I'm chilling, I'm cooling. Because I--I got work," and she understood. I have work. Like, I mean, at the end of the day, we both work together. We're both CS's. Like, they know the fucking hours we work.

SA MANN: Well, why--I mean, I guess it's kind of. Like, that brings up what--a question of them. Like, why would somebody say that you two are partially or completely unclothed, laying on the floor in the living room area?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know who would've said that, but as far as when I woke up, when my Chief walked into the room, we were both----

SA MANN: I think you guys were in bed, obviously. Yeah. But, like, prior to that, any time throughout the night, were you guys out in the common area?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. We were in the common area the whole--pretty much the whole night until I basically told her I--I was going to sleep.

SA MANN: Did you guys ever take your clothes off?

CSSN COPELAND: I never did. I mean, I know----

SA MANN: Did she?

CSSN COPELAND: ---when I was in my room, I changed my clothes. I know she didn't either.

SA MANN: Okay. What was she--was she clothed when she was in bed with you, and no clothes?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. When she was in bed, she took her clothes off.

SA MANN: Okay. And. Like, what does that mean? Like everything? Did she have undergarments on. Like, bras and underwear?

CSSN COPELAND: No, she just took her top off, and she had her pants and everything on and her underwear. When I woke up, I just had my shirt--I just had my pants on, shirt off, because that's usually how I sleep. You can ask my roommate. It's either I sleep with--in my underwear, and just nothing. Well, just my underwear, or sometimes I'll sleep like with a tank top, shorts.

ENCLOSURE D

002696_COPELAND

But for the respect of me having a female on my bed, I had shorts on, so.

SA GEREL: This might be a dumb question. It is a dumb question, but I'm going to ask it anyway. Was your roommate there? Like---

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: He was in the room that whole night?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: Okay. His name's Sean. Is that right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, when she got in bed with you, did you know she got in bed with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah, I was dead asleep, and I didn't know until, obviously, I woke up and Chief was knocking on the door, and that's when I opened the door and, you know, we had our conversation.

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah. That's, I--I appreciate you sharing that. And then, that's you--you know--you you--you--you know probably why some of this might be suspicious to people.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: You--you have a bit of a reputation as far as being a ladies' man. Like you--you girls like you. I don't know if that's true or not, but----

CSSN COPELAND: I just be chilling, man.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: If something happens, you know, sometimes it happens, man.

SA GEREL: Well, you--you know, you live your life----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----and then, the--the best you can and--and no criticism or judgment, and then, even maybe a jealousy on that. But--but, this is kind of the reputation you have. So--so with that perspective and to have, like, a--an attractive female who hops in bed with you, I think some people would presume that if you had a chance to have sex with her, you might would do that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Most people probably would. If, you know, fully consensual and stuff like that.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: So, I don't know if that's something that you'd be comfortable talking about, or maybe you've been uncomfortable talking about that. I actually do feel like you or--or have a--a--a gentleman side of you too. So, you don't want to kiss and tell kind of stuff. And--and I respect that.

But again, it's a detail that if there's something like that that happened a bit more, it might make more sense. And--and if we have a--a person and not your Chief, but a person says that they saw you both unclothed in the common room and then, the Chief finds you unclothed in the bed, it kind of just becomes a little more understandable.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: It definitely doesn't mean anything more than you guys had consensual sex. You--you know, as far as that goes. But--but it would help us to understand that a little more. Is there--is there more you want to share about that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, that's as far as it went. I told her I was going to sleep and shit, and that's pretty much how it went. Obviously, when I woke up, Chief came in, told me, just make sure when I get to work, I--I get to work and shit. From there, I was, like, "All right, cool.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

SA MANN: Did Chief say anything to her?

CSSN COPELAND: He, obviously, he was, like, "Is [redacted] in there?" And I moved out the way I was, like, "Yeah, she's right there." He saw her laying down and then, he was, like, "All right, cool. Just make sure, you know, she gets home and then you get to work." He was just mainly worried about. Like, for me, getting to work. Because, obviously, I was supposed to be there at a certain time.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And I'm not there. And then, obviously, I didn't go in the rest of the day, so now I'm being marked UA.

SA MANN: Gotcha. So, again, I know the--the sex piece is always a fun conversation. Right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Like, I surely want to go talk to NCIS about all my sexcapades.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: But, you know, it's not like we want to ask you, we have to. Right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: Like--like we're trying to let you have a private life, too. But it is important just to make sure, if something happened between you two sexually, that we're aware of that because that does explain things.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: So, and like I said, I know, you know, people have said you've got a little--little bit of game in the tank, so it sounds like you do all right, but----

002700_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: ----all that said, you know, if she happened to be one of them. Like, you know, it--it one way or another don't matter whether you did--didn't, but we just want to make sure we have the--
--
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: ----factual status of it. Aside from that, so I kind of want to start working, I think we both do, towards like what now. Right? So, Chief's there. You're, like, well, I guess, I'm just, like, at this point, like you said, not knowing what you don't know, you're, like, "Does it matter if I go to work today or the next day? I--trouble's trouble."

So, Chief leaves. Walk us through the rest of that morning.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Chief left, and then, after that, she woke up. I was, like, "You just want to help me clean, so obviously. Like, I can get to work." She was, like, "Yeah, cool." So, she started helping me clean, and then, from there, I cleaned up my room and shit.

Picked up. Like, my shoes and shit. Put them up--put them up, and then, from there, she left. I was, like, "If you need something, just call or text me." Cool. Got you. She left, and then I called my roommate and I'm asking him. Like, "What time are you getting off?" And he was telling me he doesn't know yet because my--with his squadron, their shit is, it's a little different. Like, they have a day schedule, night schedule. Like, day schedule comes in at a certain time, leaves at a certain time. Night schedule--I don't know what time, but night schedule, and I don't know what schedule he was on.

So, by the time he got home, I just called Chief around dinner time when he told me to come in, I was, like, "I'm--I'm still waiting on my roommate." And he was, like, "All right, cool." So, I just sat down and I went to sleep until he got there. By the--the time he got there, I looked at the time I was, like, "Fuck." I was just, like, well, I'll just go in Monday and obviously tell them what happened.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't know, like if you don't show up to work one day, you have to, you know, go the next day and be. Like, I'm here.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I just--I was just, like, fuck it. I went to sleep and then, the weekend proceeds, and then, obviously, Sunday or Saturday, they tell me I'm UA. And then, Sunday the MAs come through and shit, and then, from there I go to the--the barge and then--go to the CDO and shit. Tell him, "I'm--I'm here."

And then, Monday hits the next thing that we both were UA, and I was, like, bro, what the fuck? And then, now that's all this.

ENCLOSURE D

002702_COPELAND

SA MANN: Yeah. How--how was she when you left, or I'm sorry, when she left, how--how was she acting?
CSSN COPELAND: She was good. Like, she was just like acting normal and shit. Like, how she usually does when she's at work or, like, you know, energetic and shit. And then, she--she was just, like, "Cool. If you need something, just call or text me, or some shit." And she was, like, "All right, bye." And then from there, I finished touching up. Like, putting the dishes in the dishwasher, and that's when I called my roommate asked him. Like, what time's he getting off and shit.
SA GEREL: Okay. How did she feel about the Chief seeing her in your bed?
CSSN COPELAND: At the time she was asleep, so--so I don't really think she cared that much. I mean, she--when she woke up and shit, I was, like, "Chief was in here," and she was, like, "All right." And I was, like, "Yeah. So, I got to start getting ready for work."
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, obviously, I don't think she cared that much.
SA GEREL: All right. I don't know the rules for your barracks. Is that something that's allowed?
CSSN COPELAND: What females?
SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. You can have females in your room.
SA GEREL: All right. So, the fact that she's in your bed is not just an instant problem, it's a, you know--it's allowed is what you're saying?
Did you think the Chief was upset by that or should have--have been upset? Not should have been. But was he upset?
CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. He was just telling me, like, make sure I get to work and shit.
SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. And how did she feel, or did she make any comment at all about the fact that she--she was in bed with you?
CSSN COPELAND: No. She didn't say anything. She just woke up and shit. But by the time she woke up. Like, I was already up like--like cleaning my room and shit because Chief just walked in.
SA GEREL: Okay. So, did--did you ever feel like interested in asking her what that was about? Like, why she just climbed in bed with you?
CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, that's not--not the first time I slept with a female or had a female. Like, in my bed.
SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: There's been times where I had hella people in my room and, you know.
SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, they want to sleep on the bed, all right, cool. And this was a female, she just want to sleep on it. Cool. Like, you go to sleep on the floor, you know. I--I usually sleep on the bed, I'll sleep on the floor, vice versa. Like, this is not the first female that I've had in my room.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I've had many people. Like, groups of people in my room, so.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Okay. Yeah. No, thank you for tolerating those questions. You--you--you, as I said, you know, kind of why they might be suspicious to some people.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And I know they're not easy question to answer, but it--it helped us to kind of get a better sense for that. All right. Now we're--we're also taking a little bit of a look at what--at least they thought they heard you say the first time they talked to you, which was not the time you came here, as far as when she left.

So--so, it feels. Like, I think you said, you drove her back to her barracks.

CSSN COPELAND: No, no, no. I don't--I don't--I believe I could have said that too, but I was thinking I didn't obtain my roommate's car because my roommate always was at work, so,

002705_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Okay. Help--help me understand that. So, like, we definitely seem to have, like a strong perspective of what it was now. So, help me understand the difference here. Like, why you said that, that first time versus what you're saying now.

CSSN COPELAND: After I actually. Like, taking the time to actually process what happened as things got more serious, obviously, I had to get my story and timeline straight. So, obviously, my roommate didn't have his car.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Or I didn't have my roommate's car because he was at work.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, when I knocked on the door, he was not in his room. He was gone, so.

SA GEREL: All right. All right. Okay. Is there any part of you that feels like that could have happened?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, you--okay. Gotcha. So, you just had more time, and I don't want to put words in your mouth, but I'm just trying to make sure I'm understanding you right. So--so you're saying that you had time to think about it? Think about your story and timeline, and that's when you realized you didn't drive her?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Because my roommate wasn't home and I was, like, "Okay, why did I say I took her home? Obviously, if my roommate's not home."

SA GEREL: Okay. All right.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, obviously, when I come in, I switched it up and you guys are going to think it's switched, but at the same time----

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't have my roommate's car, so.

SA GEREL: Yeah. No, again. You're reasonable. And you can kind of see why that might seem suspicious, but you're answering it and you're talking about it, so I appreciate that. I mean, sometimes that happens right when we remember something a little differently.

So, it is--it is a very important detail, in terms of, because that is the last moments, right, that you remember from her.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: So--so that's always going to be an important topic when someone goes missing. What's the last thing we can figure out as far as someone sees her or talked to her? Like, that's why I keep asking how is she--how was she acting? All right.

SA MANN: I think kind of fast forwarding from that, so that--when's the last time you actually like eyes on her?

CSSN COPELAND: When she was leaving. Obviously, I was, like, "I'm getting ready for work and shit."

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And she walked out the door. I was just telling her before she left. Like, "If you need something, just call, text, and shit."

SA GEREL: Did she say anything about what she was doing when she left? Was there a conversation at all?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It was just, "Have a good day and shit." Like, you guys, all the people I hang out with, too. Like, if I'm leaving and shit, like I--I said the same thing. In the case you my boy, if you need something, just call, text me. Safety and if you need something. Like, I got you.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, can you kind of, then--just so she leaves. Can we start just kind of walking through your day a little bit, then? Like, step by step? And if you mess something up, miss something, go back, rewind, and add it in there because this is a great start. Right?

But now we want to kind of start filling in just to see maybe there's something that you're going to recall, remember that'll help point us in the right direction. So, like, she departs, what comes next for you that day?

002708_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: I--I finished cleaning, like I said. I was putting. Like, the rest of the dishes that was out into the dishwasher. Just wiping the counters and shit. Vacuuming, sweeping, and then, from there, I was waiting for my roommate.

SA GEREL: What'd you do while you waited?

CSSN COPELAND: I was just watching TV and then, from there, I laid down and then, by the time I woke up, I was, like, "Fuck." Because it was too fucking late. But I called my Chief around dinner time and I--I told him. Like, "I'm still waiting for my roommate." So, he was, like, all right, whenever he gets there, just let me know, whatever."

SA GEREL: What do--do you mean you say you. Like, woke up? Like, took a nap or?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, yeah.

SA GEREL: Not the--this isn't referring back to the morning. I just want to make sure I--I--I'm not confusing.

CSSN COPELAND: Oh, yeah. But yeah, I was just telling him. Like, I was waiting for my roommate----

SA GEREL: Just past time.

CSSN COPELAND: ----yeah. For the time waiting, I just went to sleep.

SA GEREL: Okay. And that was on the couch, you said?

ENCLOSURE D

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. By the time--no, no, no. It was in my room. Like on my bed.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: By the time he got back, it was too late.

SA MANN: What time was that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know.

SA MANN: Just----

CSSN COPELAND: Like, by the time I woke up, it was--dinner was done.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And by the time, like, dinner starts. Like, our chain of command leaves, so I already knew before----

SA MANN: Are you talking about. Like, on the ship, like when you guys would be preparing dinner?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. Like, but the barge, so.

SA MANN: Or the barge, okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I called him to verify. I was telling him. Like, "I don't think I'm going to make it." I--I told him I was just waiting for my roommate, and he said, "Whenever he gets there, just show face."

SA MANN: What time does dinner room for you guys on the barge?

CSSN COPELAND: 15 and. Like, 1530. And it ends around 17. So, we usually get off around, depending on how fast we clean, like 1730, 1745.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. So, by the time I woke up, it was--it was--dinner was done.

SA GEREL: It was after that. Sometime after 5:30 that night. Conceivably?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Okay. Was your roommate back at that point?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure. I just woke up late.

SA GEREL: Gotcha.

W2: And then, from there, I was just, like, it's no need to argue or nothing, shit. And I was just, like, "Fuck it." And I was, like, when Monday comes, I'll just explain to. Like, what happened. But, obviously, I couldn't because I was freaking UA.

SA MANN: Gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: They waited to tell me Saturday

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So----

SA MANN: So, what then. Like, you wake up, it's too late to go to work. What do you do with your Friday night?

002711_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: I--I just stayed home, like in the building. I was, like, going to the--the lounge and shit. Just chilling on my phone, on TikTok and shit. Because I'm--I'm telling you. Like, my roommate is one--one hard person to deal with.

Like, it's--it's--it is like sad, like how certain people live, and he's just one of those people that is just like--like you worried for. It's, like, when I first checked into the room, I think. Like, that first week I slept on the couch.

SA GEREL: Why's that?

CSSN COPELAND: Because he just--the way he lives is filthy.

SA GEREL: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: He uses the bathroom, doesn't flush the toilet. He's never taken a shower ever since I've been there. The only time he's taken a shower was the first day that I entered the room, and I--I don't even think he took a shower. He just had the water running. He gets off work as soon as he gets off work, he takes off his clothes in the bathroom, and puts on the same pair of clothes he's been wearing for I don't even know how long.

He doesn't wash his clothes. He doesn't clean anything. He just keeps using. Like, for instance, I'll go to the store or some shit. I'll buy some food, or I'll buy like cups of shit. He doesn't ask to use it. All right. It's, like, you know, it's a couple things. A couple, you know, I'm not going to argue. You know? Cool. I'm going to just let him do him.

So, it's just, like, every day I walk in and it's, like, I go in the room and the room just fucking stinks. Like, every--someone I'm going to fucking Walmart getting hella Febreze, hella. Like, shit filter out the room and his fucking stink is overpowering that shit.

SA MANN: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I was just, like, bro, I don't know what to do. So--so I just fucking sleep on the couch. Or sometimes I'll just go on the--the lounge or I'll have, like, my homeboys come pick me up and go out. Like, pretty much every weekend we're--we're outside or some shit.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Or they would just come over and we'll chill.

SA GEREL: So, do you go out that weekend as well then?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah, I stayed home. Like some days, like----

SA MANN: On Friday, Saturday, obviously Sunday, you went to work?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But this weekend I stayed in. I wasn't trying to go outside. I--I remember last weekend I touched out for a little bit, but I mainly stayed inside at my homeboy's crib.

SA MANN: Where is that?

ENCLOSURE D

CSSN COPELAND: The PPV off base. So, we just stayed there pretty much the whole weekend, just chilling.
SA MANN: Is--when you say PPV, I know that's, like, the private, but is it, is he in like--like a legitimate house-house or is he in kind of an apartment set up? Like, what's his---- CSSN COPELAND: It's just like my barracks.
SA GEREL: Oh, same thing, just off base.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA GEREL: Okay. And that's where you were, what, Saturday?
CSSN COPELAND: No, I'm saying, like, the--not this last week.
SA MANN: Oh, the weekend before. Okay. Well, what about that weekend? Like, that Saturday?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. That whole weekend, I stayed in the building. While I was just chilling. Like, in the lounge room or some shit, like on TikTok and Instagram, and then, when Sunday hit and I was taking a shit, that's when the MAs came and they basically told me, like, I'm UA and I need to report to my command. But the whole weekend I literally stayed home.
SA MANN: So, who can kind of help us account for that time? Seeing you in the building, talking to you, interacting with you?
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, one, I mean, whatever MAs were there, I'm not sure what MAs were there.
SA MANN: I know Sunday, but I mean, like, Friday, Saturday.

002714_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: You got Miss Mary, the front desk.
SA GEREL: Okay. She's there on the weekends as well.
CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure about the weekends. I--I mean, obviously, the Truman got back, so I'm guessing she had to come in because people needed barracks, but usually she's there Monday through Friday, and sometimes over the weekend. I don't know really how their schedule works.
SA MANN: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: Like, I remember Chief was saying, I know they have like--like eight hour shifts and shit. That's. Like, their duty days or whatever, so.
SA GEREL: Did she see you? Did you talk to her?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. We physically--we physically talked.
SA GEREL: When was that?
CSSN COPELAND: I believe it was, like, almost every day of the week. I remember she walked in, and I was sitting there, and she was, like--she was, like, "Are you in this building?" I was, like, I was, like, "Yes, ma'am." I started smiling and she was, like--she was, like, "What room are you in?" I was, like, "335." And she started laughing. She was, like, "Oh." She was, like, "What are you doing?" I was, like, "I--I'm just chilling." And she already knows my story about my roommate. So, she already knows. Like, I don't really associate. Like, how my roommate lives. So, like, if it gets to a certain point or too bad, I just leave the room or I just stay on the couch.

SA GEREL: You guys, when did you have that conversation with her? I believe that was Friday or Saturday. It was one of the two. And then, I remember when I was taking the shit, I remember she tried to open the door. I was out by the lounge, and she opened the--she tried to open the door, and I was, like, I'm--I'm here using the--the restroom. And she was like--like, "Who's that?" And I--I said, "Copeland." And she was, like, "Oh, okay." And she--she kept walking. I believe that was--that was Sunday. So, I'm pretty sure she can account for me--seeing me during the weekends.

SA MANN: Okay. And where did you. Like, did you not go out and get food? Anything?

CSSN COPELAND: I--I got hella food in the house.

SA MANN: Gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I rarely go out to eat. I got hella food at the house.

SA MANN: Did anyone have a conversation with you about Angie at any point that weekend?

CSSN COPELAND: I--I don't think so. Rather than when Chief and them text me saying that I need to report to the ship. Rather than that, you know, I had other people text me, like asking if I was good. I answered my phone. Like most people know. Like, especially my chain of command, when I'm off, I'm off. I--I don't associate work and all that shit.

So, when I--especially, you know, you can talk to CS2 about that too. Like, because even with the incident with the female trying to stab me and shit, and when--when they were calling me and shit, I don't answer my phone for them. Like, I don't really, I don't really like my chain of command. Like, my second classes, they're cool, but when it comes to my first class, I don't fuck with my first class.

So, like, even when my first class texts, I don't text him. So, yeah.

SA MANN: Okay. So, Friday was just filled with TikTok and Instagram.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Same with Saturday and then Sunday as well. That's literally how my whole weekend was. I was just stayed at home in the barracks. And then, obviously, Sunday, that's when the MA's came. So, a little halfway through my day, I was----

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: ----getting ready to leave.

SA GEREL: So, what's something you think that you can tell us that's going to help us figure out where Angie's at?

CSSN COPELAND: I--I got no clue. I mean, obviously, you guys are, I've done everything you could so far. You've questioned me. You fucking destroyed my whole fucking room. Damn near three days consecutive. And you guys got all my shit and so it's, like, at this point I--I--I got nothing else to offer. I--I don't know.

002717_COPELAND

SA MANN: I think the biggest, obviously, you know. Like, gap points are the ones that we got to fill in. Right? So, like--like I said, just logically speaking through this to you to try and give you the best idea of what we've got to accomplish, it's a lot of time, but you just being on your own. Right?

And I'm not saying that you're making that up. Maybe you we're just hanging out in the lounge the whole time, but it leaves a lot of open doors. Right? Because, you know, so maybe somebody could see you for a minute or an hour. You know, there's some other things I think that are maybe important to that conversation that we want to have.

But ultimately, as we sit here right now, so you know, you look at Thursday morning when you guys wake up and it's Chief's there. Like, "Hey man, get to work." There's the entirety of Thursday, entirety of Friday, entirety Saturday, and partial of it a Sunday where it's tough to account for where you are. Right?

Because there's nothing, maybe other than a person at some point, maybe seeing you. So, we really want you to kind of think and go back and say, "Hey, where was I? Who was there? What--what helps lock in your version of what's happened?" which we want to be the truthful one. And--and we want to be able to verify that that helps. Right?

127 of 152
002718_COPELAND

When you tell us something and we can go bounce it off something else, we go, great. That's what happened.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Like I'm saying, I mean, miss Mary obviously, try this lady, she saw me. I remember--I can't recall if this was Saturday or Sunday, but I remember when I was sitting in the lounge, there was a--there was a white male that walked in. He offered me a bag of chips. I was, like, "Oh, I'm good." But they made him come into the lounge because they were waxing the floor.

SA MANN: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: So, he tried to leave a couple times and they kept telling to come back and tell they're done waxing the floor. So, I had another encounterment with another male inside the lounge.

SA MANN: What day was that?

CSSN COPELAND: I--I said it was either Saturday or Sunday.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: bI couldn't recall which--which day it was. They also had hella--hella workers up there as well. So, they were waxing the floor. They obviously saw me. They--they told the both of us that we can leave now and then, I was, like, cool. I just walked down to my room.

002719_COPELAND

SA MANN: Okay. Walking this back a little bit, too, because you know, it's--it's not completely off the table. Right? But generally if somebody, and--and, you know, I'm not saying this happened, but if somebody were to harm themselves or just say, "Hey, I'm going to go off the radar, like I'm going to disappear," there's signs, right? It's hard to, especially for, you know, 20-year-old kid, 21-year-old girl, whatever she is at the--at this point, to really do all that without somebody kind of having some stamp. She's so, you know, just like you, it's that social media, you're always ingrained, you're on there.

So, it's--it's rare that somebody would just gone, right? Like without a trace. So, that's why we're asking a lot of these, probably to you, ambiguous, some kind of odd questions. It's because it's a, you know, there always a time for something to break from the norm, but more common is somebody ends up given some indicators, given some signs.

Something to provide a reason for, this is why I'm going to go do this, or this is why I'm going to disappear. This is why I feel like I need to go harm myself, or whatever it may be, if that's what happened. And I--I think at this point, you know, I know you have a special spot in your heart for family, and obviously that's what's eaten away at you a lot today.

But having now seen, you know, Angie's mom and just the--the--the immense amount of pain that she seems to be in, having no idea, if nothing else, I think we all owe her just the best time talking through this, so we can to try and make sure that we're not missing any small stone to turnover.

Because for that hope that she has. Right? Like--like we're going to sit here and--and say, we--we need to do everything we can to try and find this girl.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: And, you know, that may unfortunately come down to alive or not.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: But, it gives a sense of closure, and I think that family piece is really going to be the motivator. Because, especially, you know, I can imagine if that happened to you, your mom was worried, but it was just a--a simple baby UA, but they still know where you are. And you guys, you alluded to that conversation happened.

And so, think about her mom now and how long has it been, you know, we're talking over a week and not having a single word of your daughter. You used to talk to her every day. Like, that's--that's tough. So, I know that family thing hits, and that's why we're just probably, it feels like bludgeon in you with a lot of questions that seem repetitive or redundant, but we're just trying to spark something.

Maybe it comes out a different way. Maybe you've got some detail that was buried before that it circles back. You're, like, "Oh, you know what?" And that's what we really want to do with you. That's what these kind of tools are for. That's why we do it. Because it's bigger than you. Bigger than me, bigger than him. Right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA MANN: You know, like let's say this was nefarious. Crime piece aside, if you could say something or do something that matters at this point. Like, that matters, but finding her matters more, right? So, I think that's--that's everybody's goal here. And I know you sort of said earlier. You have your own aspirations for----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----what's with her. But, you know, if you were able to send her a message now and maybe move the--move the needle or get her back or figure out where she was, what--what do you think you could say in that area that would help?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, not much. I mean, shit. Like I said, when she left, I told her if she needs something, just call or text me. I mean, I text her after Chief had said--after Chief had notified me that we both were UA. And I text, I was, like, "Bro. Like, you good? Like they marked fricking, both of us UA."

ENCLOSURE D

And--and at first I was, like, mad because I was, like, what the fuck?

SA GEREL: What do you mean?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, I was mad because I was, like, "Why the fuck did like Chief Mark, both of us UA?" At that point, I was pissed. Honestly, I was more pissed at Chief. But at the end of the day. Like, I can't argue. At the end of the day, like----

SA GEREL: So, you sent her that text?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I was just, like, I--I text her. I was saying--I was, like, "Bro, is you good? Like, they're freaking marking us both UA."

SA MANN: What'd she say to that?

CSSN COPELAND: She didn't say anything.

SA MANN: Could you tell if she--she read it?

CSSN COPELAND: Hm?

SA MANN: You know, like you get the little things where it says hey, like if somebody read this or didn't read it?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Her shit was on Do Not Disturb.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I was just, like, all right, cool. And then, from there, that's when the days proceeded. And then, they ended up taking my phone and shit.

SA MANN: You say her hers was on Do Not Disturb. What do you mean? Like, the phone, the--like, entire. Like, you can see that on the message?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It says phone--her number was silenced.

SA MANN: Oh. So, you send somebody that text, it'll tell you. Like, they're not getting it.

CSSN COPELAND: No, it'll tell you. Like, for instance. Like, my phone stays on Do Not Disturb. And through the settings, you can either have it to allow you to have your phone. Like, show up. Like, on Do Not Disturb.

SA MANN: Right.

CSSN COPELAND: Or sometimes you could just receive the messages and it isn't. Like, you know, notify them back and your phone will not-

---

SA MANN: Oh, so you're saying her setting was set, so when you sent it----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----you immediately knew?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. When I sent on the message at the bottom, it was saying her--her shit was silences.

002724_COPELAND

SA MANN: Okay. Did you ever go back and look and see if she read it?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I just texted. I mean, at the end of the day, if somebody sends me a text and if you reply, you reply. If you don't----

SA MANN: No, I got it. You can't follow up on everything.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: All right.

SA GEREL: In terms of those phone settings, how do you keep your phone settings? I think you just said a little bit. You--you have yours on Do Not Disturb?

CSSN COPELAND: My phone stays on Do Not Disturb 24-7.

SA GEREL: Do you share your location with your--with your people?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah, I mean, like the group of people I used to hang out with, I would turn my settings. Like, I would share my location just for like going out and shit. So, we know where each other are. Like--like, for instance. Like, we'll go somewhere and then, we'll regroup or like go to a party.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: We go here just seeing what--what options are happening or, like, what's going on tonight, and then, we regroup and shit.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, it sounds like that's a setting you turn on, turn off depending on the circumstances.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Like, there's a female I talked to and my--my location stay on for her, but most of the--the time before that my location home was off.
SA MANN: Who's, who's that?
CSSN COPELAND: A female back at home.
SA MANN: Okay.
SA GEREL: Yeah. So, one of the things that we may have reason to understand is that your location settings turned off over the weekend, and it helps--help me understand that, like, why over the weekend you would've turned off your location sharing?
CSSN COPELAND: Because I mean, obviously, one thing about me is I don't like people getting in my business. I remember that somebody in the group chat said something of my location. Like, they stalked me and shit. I was, like, bro, so I turned that shit off.
SA MANN: When did they say that?
CSSN COPELAND: It was in a group chat, like, bro on the group chat.
SA MANN: Yeah. Yeah. But I mean, when did somebody say something about your location in the chat that made you turn it off?
CSSN COPELAND: During the weekend. Like, if I'm at home, why do they look at my location? Like, cool. I mean, it could have came to the crib or some shit or texted me, like, I'm on the way to the crib. All right, cool.

SA MANN: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: But if you're just watching. Like, target watching where I'm at, that's--I find that a little suspect.

SA GEREL: Yeah. That's not--that's not comfortable.

SA MANN: Oh, yeah. So, do you remember doing that, though? This weekend?

Okay. All right.

CSSN COPELAND: Location was on for like one--one or two people.

SA MANN: The whole weekend.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was, like, because we were out, so they had my location. It was, like, two people. Because we were hanging out with some people at my homeboy's crib, and I kept my location on. But that was not--not this previous weekend, but the weekend before that, like, when we were out and then, obviously, sometimes--usually I would turn it off. Or sometimes. Like, certain people, I share my location just for 24 hours, or sometimes I'll keep it indefinitely, or however you say that shit.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, eventually, I'll turn that shit off.

SA MANN: But the girl from back home always on.

ENCLOSURE D

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Like, ours is different. So, she has me on Life 360.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And then, on Snapchat. Like those--they just have my number. SA MANN: Do you still have Life 360 on there?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: And so, obviously that--you'd have to go and. Like, turn that off in the app separate to----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: ----kill it. So, would she--like, would that be on throughout that weekend? So, when they look at that phone data specifically, they're going to see. Like, here I am.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Yeah. That's why we're asking. It's very helpful. So, if we have people that can say, yeah, we saw Copeland here, here, here throughout the weekend. Of course, the helps a lot.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: And we're working on that. The phone is great too because you know, if it--it'll show where it's at, so they'll able to see where the phone's at, which is also very helpful. That's why we're asking.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I gotcha.

SA GEREL: But we're--we're trying to help you the best we can on-- on those details. It sounds like sometimes you're not super good with names, so if you--if you could think of any other names like that. You said you--you ran into one white dude over the weekend who gave you a bag of chips. He--he offered.

CSSN COPELAND: He didn't give----

SA GEREL: Offered. Okay. Anything else you can tell us about that instance? That would be very helpful.

CSSN COPELAND: Shit, I've never seen the dude a day in my life, so.

SA GEREL: Okay. Did he seem like a young guy? Like a----

CSSN COPELAND: He looked like--yeah, he looked like he was young. Like, anywhere from out of high school to, I'd say, like, 20 to 21.

SA GEREL: Like, a Sailor is what you----okay. So, you've never seen him before?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GEREL: So, what prompted him to offer you chips? Did you say anything in conversation or?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, the--they told him to go in there and then he walked in there and he was, like, "What's up?" I said, "What's good?" And then he sat down. He was just on his phone. And then he tried to leave, and he came back, and you could tell he was, like, catching an attitude. And I was, like, "You good?" He was, like, "Nah, they keep fucking turning me around," because he's trying to get to his room.

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: But they keep turning him around. He was, like, "I almost slipped by, but he saw him in the corner."

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I was, like, "Oh shit, bro." I started laughing. He was, like, "You want a bag of chips?" I was, like, "What--what kind of chips do you have?" And he started naming all the shit he had in there. I was, like, "Nah, I'm good." I was, like, "I--I usually like to eat hot. Like, hot chips and shit."

SA GEREL: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: He was, like, "Okay." I was, like, "Yeah." And from there, I think he tried to leave like one more time. They turned him around and then, after that, they allowed us to leave.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. In--in terms of your phone, and again, just to make sure you've, you've tested your memory as much as you can. If--if we were at see Ping in any other parts of Tidewater. Like, in another city over the weekend, any--any way we can--you can help us understand that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like I said, the location and shit has been on for, on Life 360, so I'm sure you can look through the app and see----

002730_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: ----where, what's been the whole weekend.
SA GEREL: Yeah. Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: As far as, like, my settings for Apple and shit, I don't know how that works for--I don't know how that shit works.
SA GEREL: But if it. Like, showed up like in Hampton or Suffolk or something, or downtown Norfolk. Like, did--did any--any chances you could remember. Like, being in a different place?
CSSN COPELAND: I've been home the whole weekend.
SA GEREL: Okay. I know you're trying hard to remember. I just wanted to give you a chance to give your thoughts on it.
CSSN COPELAND: I'm not really thinking, I just know.
SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: I was home the whole weekend.
SA GEREL: Okay.
SA MANN: Okay.
SA GEREL: Did you loan your phone to anybody?
CSSN COPELAND: Hmm.
SA GEREL: Did--did you loan your phone to anybody? Anybody have your phone but you?
CSSN COPELAND: No, I just had it.
SA GEREL: Okay.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

Arrange and bind the record of trial with allied papers in the sequence indicated below. The court reporter is responsible for certifying the record of trial prior to transmittal for appellate review, in accordance with R.C.M. 1112 and JAG/CNLSCINST 5813.1G.

2. Court reporter certification of Record of Trial (enclosure 8).

3. Military Judge verification of Record of Trial (enclosure 8).

4. DD Form 490 (pages 3-6 and any continuation pages if needed) (enclosure 7).

5. Completed Post-Trial Checklist from JAG/CNLSCINST 5814.1G (enclosure 2).

6. Completed Convening Authority's Action Checklist (enclosure 4).

7. Post-Trial Documents.

a. Certificates/Proof of Service of the Certified Record of Trial to the accused and victim, if applicable (enclosure 7).

b. Convening Authority's Action and Entry of Judgment (enclosure 6).

c. Any requests for copies of the court-martial record pursuant to R.C.M. 1106 or 1106A (attach written requests, and any certificates/proof of service, but do not attach the victim's post-trial rights advisement or DD Form 2704).

d. Matters submitted by the accused and/or victim under R.C.M. 1106 or 1106A, or any written waiver of the right to submit such matters. Include all responses to requests here as well.

e. Any deferment request and the action on it (including any request to waive automatic forfeitures under Article 58b).

f. Conditions of suspension and proof of service on probationer under R.C.M. 1107, if any.

g. All clemency recommendations by members or military judge, if any.

h. Statement of Trial Results (enclosure 1).

i. Crime Reporting Information.

j. Accused's request for appellate defense counsel, or waiver/withdrawal of appellate review under R.C.M. 1115, if applicable.

k. All transfer orders, confinement orders, and excess leave orders.

l. Briefs of counsel submitted after trial, if any.

8. Preliminary Hearing.

a. DD Form 457, Preliminary Hearing Officer's Report, pursuant to Article 32, if such hearing was conducted, followed by any other allied papers that accompanied the charges when referred for trial (including any matters submitted under R.C.M. 405(l), unless included elsewhere in the record of trial).*

b. Waiver of Article 32 Hearing (if applicable).

9. Pre-Trial Allied Papers.

a. Convening Order and all amending convening orders.

b. DD Form 458, Charge Sheet (unless included at the point of arraignment in the transcript).

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

c. Congressional inquiries and replies, if any.

d. Advice of staff judge advocate, when prepared pursuant to Article 34 or otherwise.

10. Record of Proceedings.

a. Substantially verbatim recording of court-martial proceedings. Segregate open and closed sessions of the court-martial in accordance with R.C.M. 1113 and the following guidance:*

b. Ensure that each closed session of the court-martial is recorded on a separate DVD marked CLOSED SESSION, placed in its own envelope marked CLOSED SESSION, and sealed.

c. Label all DVD(s) and envelopes with the information on page 1 of this template.

d. Mark all DVDs and envelopes with "1 of X," as necessary (for example, the second DVD of six DVDs and its envelope should be marked, 2 of 6). All DVDs of open sessions may be in one envelope.

e. Mark all DVDs with their beginning and ending timestamps. The timestamps for closed sessions should match those shown on the Index.

f. Verbatim transcript or summarized report prepared in accordance with JAGINST 5814.1G. Include the following:

I. A certificate of correction, if any (including any supplemental certification for additional proceedings).

II. Court reporter and transcriptionist certification of verbatim transcript.

g. Records of former proceedings (Article 30a) and/or trials, (e.g., electronic/digital record of former proceeding, including audio recording and any scanned documentation/transcripts, CD/DVD format).*

11. Prosecution exhibits admitted in evidence.

12. Defense Exhibits admitted in evidence.

13. Appellate Exhibits including but not limited to, proposed instructions, written offers of proof or preliminary evidence (real or documentary), briefs of counsel submitted at trial, request to be tried by military judge alone (if any), the accused election of members under R.C.M. 903 (if any), any statement by convening authority required under R.C.M. 503(a)(2), and the election for sentencing by members in lieu of sentencing by military judge under R.C.M. 1002(b).*

14. Redaction. The following information shall be redacted in accordance with JAGMAN 1059 from the record of trial prior to releasing it to any accused or victim (including any transcript made pursuant to R.C.M. 1114 and attached to the record of trial) unless the information establishes an element of an offense, or is otherwise required:

a. Any recordings of closed sessions, any transcripts of closed sessions, and any sealed exhibits.

b. Names of minor victims, and names of minor witnesses. If an identifier is used, use only the initials.

c. Social Security Numbers.

d. Financial account information.

e. Home addresses.

f. Telephone numbers.

g. Personal e-mail addresses.

h. Dates of birth.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

i. Any other information that could be used to identify a specific person other than the accused.

*If the report of preliminary hearing or record of trial contains exhibits, proceedings, or other materials ordered sealed by the preliminary hearing officer or military judge, counsel for the Government, the court reporter, or trial counsel shall cause such materials to be sealed to prevent unauthorized examination or disclosure, pursuant to R.C.M. 1113. Sealed material shall be properly marked, individually placed in separate envelopes with a copy of the preliminary hearing officer or military judge sealing order affixed to it, and inserted at the appropriate place in the record of trial. Do not duplicate sealed material to include it in any copy of the record of trial. Instead, insert a copy of the sealing order in lieu of any sealed material, in any copies of the record of trial.

DIVIDERS ARE NOT NECESSARY TO SEPARATE EACH SECTION. IF USED, THEY CAN BE PAPER RATHER THAN CARD STOCK. IF A PARTICULAR COMPONENT IS NOT APPLICABLE IN THE RECORD OF TRIAL, SUCH AS AN ARTICLE 32 HEARING, EXHIBITS NOT ADMITTED, POST-TRIAL PROCEEDINGS AND VACATION HEARINGS, DO NOT INSERT A DIVIDER OR PLACEHOLDER.

FRONT AND BACK COVER MUST BE ON BLUE CARDS STOCK AND LABELED WITH GUM LABELS.

Binding. Each volume of a record of trial should be no more than 1.5 inches thick and bound at the top with metal or plastic fasteners. DO NOT interlace or "piggy-back" prong fasteners to create an oversized volume. DO NOT place hole punches where it covers up the evidence or language in the transcript. When it becomes necessary to assemble the record of trial in more than one volume, the volumes will be numbered consecutively, on the front cover, as illustrated below:

Volume 1 of 4 (Pages 1-250)
Volume 2 of 4 (Pages 251-400)
Volume 3 of 4 (Pages 401-652)
Volume 4 of 4 (Pages 653-901 and Exhibits)

Make the first volume of a multi-volume record an inch thick or smaller to allow for inclusion of post-trial documents. Limit subsequent volumes to 1.5 inches, unless dividing them requires assembling an additional volume smaller than a half inch.

Label the upper right-hand corner or the Preparation and Certification of Record of Trial Form (enclosure (8)) to reflect which copy it is, i.e., "ORIGINAL," "ACCUSED," "REVIEW" etc.

APPELLATE EXHIBITS

SA MANN: Was there any time you were. Like, away from your phone for a period of time?
CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, usually my phone stays with me.
SA MANN: Was there any break of that usual, like, that weekend where you maybe left it in your room for a while? Like, had to go charge it because it died, or you went and did something else?
CSSN COPELAND: Like, I mean, sometimes if it dies, then it just die, and then, whenever I get to charge it, then I charge it. I'm not, like, the type of person that's, like, "Oh, I need my phone." You know, if I don't have it, I don't have it.

But, like, I mean, sometimes there's, like, people I need to call or some shit, and I'll text him and shit. And other than that, I'm not like a type of person that's, like, "Oh, I'm going to die if I don't have my phone, so."

SA GEREL: All right. Do you have--do you have more than one phone? Did they understand that right?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I told them I had another phone, but it's broke. That's why I had bought a--sold the phone that I have now. The black one?
SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: That's my phone. I had one before that, and it broke. So, through my AT&T, I basically got another phone through my insurance.

SA GEREL: Okay. And they were basically saying, like, I got 31 days to turn it in or else, basically, I got to charge my next bill.
SA MANN: When--when did it break the other phone?
CSSN COPELAND: A couple months ago.
SA GEREL: Okay. So, a while ago?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. It was a while ago.
SA GEREL: What--what happened to it? How did it break?
CSSN COPELAND: I dropped it. I mean, obviously, I don't have a case on my phone, so I dropped it and that's it. The whole front and the back----
SA MANN: That's a bad day.
CSSN COPELAND: ----completely shattered.
SA GEREL: That is a bad day.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA GEREL: All right. Do you have more before I do a quick little transition?
SA MANN: No, I'm good.
SA GEREL: I want to make sure that we do take good care of your time and respectful like we talked about. So, you've been super cooperative and helpful, and we appreciate that.
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: How are are you feeling?
CSSN COPELAND: I'm fine.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Do you mind if I use the restroom?

SA GEREL: Of course. Let's take care of that. And then, we'll want to make sure it's cleared out? We have little game plan after that. And then, we'll get--we'll get you to the next thing. Any questions for me?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, you're doing okay. Now, as far as, like, I--I know you were a little low asleep and just kind of stressed out. Do you feel like you're able to hear things, make decisions, recall things properly? Do you do you feel like you're--in your--like able to be as you normally are?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Okay. Okay. So, tell--tell me if that changes. Okay. I--I want to talk to Copeland, you know, who's fully attentive and remembering and thinking. I--I don't want any other version where you're just, like, ah, you know, I don't feel good enough to actually talk or think about this stuff. Your mental health important to me.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: Who do you talk to when you feel like you need a little talking to? Like, you need a boost.

002734_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: My homeboy's name's JJ, like the CS I work with you.
SA GEREL: You talked to JJ?
CSSN COPELAND: Like, that's my--my dude to go to.
SA GEREL: How about family, friends, anything like that?
CSSN COPELAND: I mean----
SA GEREL: Well, yeah, JJ's your friend. But any family or, like, parents or?
CSSN COPELAND: Like, family wise I go to my mom.
SA GEREL: All right.
SA MANN: Yeah. You're good. The door's just locked on this.
SA GEREL: That's okay.
SA GEREL: Run around and get her her open.
[SA Mann, SA Gerel, and CSSN Copeland departed the room at timestamp 2:43:40.]
[SA Mann, SA Gerel, and CSSN Copeland entered the room at timestamp 2:45:17.]
SA MANN: Need anything?
CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.
SA MANN: I know, you know, there's a lot that we're talking through and going through. Our best interest at this point is your best interest in that we want to try to give you a chance to rule some things out, too. So, I think we've got some other steps that we want to talk through here shortly about how we can get some things from you that'll help us do that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: So, we're going to walk you through what that entails, probably as well.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Yeah. For sure. And again, thank you for helping us as much as you can.

W Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: So, we're trying to get a couple of things, not that we need them right now, but we might need them pretty quickly in the future. One of those, when we start looking for, like DNA and things like that, we got to be able to exclude people that would naturally have DNA in certain places.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Do you mind giving us some of your DNA?

CSSN COPELAND: What do you--you mean by that?

SA GEREL: Just get a swab of your mouth. They have it on--on samples in case they need to compare anything.

CSSN COPELAND: When.

SA GEREL: Like, right now. Yeah. So, it is a simple process. So, if you said, "Yeah, I'm cool with that," the other agent would come in and take a little swab, get inside of your mouth, and then we have it for the case as it calls.

ENCLOSURE D

002736_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: As far as my DNA for what?

SA MANN: So, it just rules you out. Right? Like, if so, if they find some DNA and they're, like, hey, we don't know whose this is. Like say there's a--a drop of blood, a tear or something, and we want to know, "Hey, was she here?" Well, if it's yours, we don't have your DNA that to run it against, right? So, we'll know it's yours. If it's hers, we--she's not here. Right? We can't get hers. So, we can at least say, "Hey, it isn't his, maybe it's hers," or something like that. So, it gives us just an idea of are we looking at the right places to try and find her?

CSSN COPELAND: All right.

SA GEREL: You cool with that?

SA MANN: That's sound good. I mean, it's just basically it's like--like a big Q-tip, but they just----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: It doesn't hurt anything.

SA MANN: No. It's just a cotton swab.

SA GEREL: It's even less intrusive than like the COVID test if you've had any of those.

SA MANN: Yeah. We're not shoving things into your brain to make sure you don't got COVID.

002737_COPELAND

SA GEREL: So, okay. Well, here's that form. So, this is--it's called Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure. All it is is they're getting it for the main concept of it if they have to look or compare things, in the search for Angie. Okay?

So, the thing that you're actually getting is--is DNA, and it's in that swab. Feel free to review of it if you're good with that, just give me a good signature right here.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm signing where?

SA GEREL: Right here. You got any questions about it?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: Okay. I'll give this to the--the lady and then, she'll be here to go grab that.

SA MANN: So, she's coming in. She's going to wear a mask. She's going to be like up in your junk. So, not that she's sick or anything, but just to make sure you

CSSN COPELAND: You want me to sit or stand?

SA: No, you're fine. You can just sit--sit right there.

SA MANN: It's just a long Q-tip.

SA: Yeah. I'm just going to get your cheek cells in there. So, shouldn't hurt at all, but if I do, just let me know. I'm just going to do basically four swabs total. Just two and two.

Okay. This open mouth. I'm just going to get all the corners here.

002738_COPELAND

SA MANN: Two down. Got a little cotton mouth like now.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA MANN: Got water. Wash that down once you're done. Don't take a sip quite yet.

SA GEREL: Yeah, when she's done. Do you need more?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I got a little bit in there.

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah, just get that cotton out of the mouth.

SA: But still not as bad as the dentist, I feel like.

SA MANN: Oh, no, it's not. We were talking COVID test like I disappears into your brain right there.

SA: Yep.

SA MANN: I--I think I literally----

SA: Perfect. Thank you.

SA MANN: [Affirmative response.]

SA: Do you have the time--what time it is?

SA MANN: It is 1133.

SA: 1133. Thank you.

SA MANN: Yes, ma'am.

SA: Perfect. Thank you.

SA MANN: All right.

CSSN COPELAND: All good, sir?

SA GEREL: Hold tight.

SA MANN: You got water out? No, I--I mean, technically yes, whenever you want. You can always say no. But, if you're willing to hang out for a little bit, I think we're want talk through a couple things, or if your good with that.

CSSN COPELAND: That's fine.

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah. So, 1130 since you can't see time. So, what--what questions you got for us?

CSSN COPELAND: Nothing.

SA GEREL: Okay. We've covered some--some similar stuff you've already talked about, a couple of new things, and sometimes that will prompt a question or, like, if you--you want some clarification on what we know about what's happening? Anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: Not really.

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah. I appreciate that. I just want to, as I mentioned to you, make sure you--you know, that we're trying to be good hosts. So, I don't want to just bombard you with questions about giving you chance to talk a little bit, too. Free--free talk.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: What I think would be good if we have a few of the other agents that are involved in the case. It'd probably be good for Tyler and I to walk out and just kind of get our--our--our heads together as to make sure we've answered all the questions we can with you today.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA GEREL: I--I think we getting real, real close. Do you have anything you want to ask him about before we do that?
SA MANN: No. I mean did were--were you hanging on to something there? Because I feel like there's kind of that pause, like, "Oh, maybe." Like you--you got anything that's sort of resonating?
CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]
SA MANN: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: I--I was just thinking, like, do I got any questions for y'all? I don't--there's not really much. At the end of the day, y'all are doing your jobs, so.
SA MANN: Okay.
SA GEREL: Yeah. We appreciate it much.
SA MANN: Perfect.
SA GEREL: Well, no, just thank you for understanding that. I mean, I hope even though it is part of us doing our jobs, hopefully you--you believe and feel that we treated you good. Certainly tried to, and you certainly treated us good. So, thank you for that.
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir. All right, well, give us a few minutes. You--you want some water while you're waiting on this?
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, please.
SA GEREL: I don't think it'll be too long. I mean, I think it's probably going to be----

SA MANN: Yeah, we'll get you some water.

SA GEREL: Yeah. Fifteen minutes or so, we're moving on to----

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, please.

SA GEREL: You want a minute or more food? Did you eat your beef stick?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: Okay.

[SA Mann and SA Gerel departed the room at timestamp 2:53:20.]

[SA Gerel entered the room at timestamp 2:55:18.]

SA GEREL: Okay. I got you another water. Yeah, we only have a couple more questions. And so, your car is jacked up. Is that right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: Where's it at?

CSSN COPELAND: It's not my car, it's my homeboy's car, but I'm sure he has it now.

SA GEREL: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: It was the--the head gasket was fucked up, but my car is totaled and so----

SA GEREL: Okay. The one that you consider your car, the totaled one?

CSSN COPELAND: No, my car, like, my actual car is totaled, so.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, it's like just gone.

ENCLOSURE D

002742_COPELAND

CSSN COPELAND: Gone, yeah.
SA GEREL: All right. How do you get around without your--your car?
CSSN COPELAND: Either my roommate takes me to work, and the days my roommate doesn't take me to work, then I have somebody within my ship come and pick me up.
SA GEREL: Yeah.
[SA Mann entered the room at timestamp 2:53:20.]
SA MANN: Come on in.
SA GEREL: So, Sean, your roommate takes you around?
CSSN COPELAND: No, no, no.
SA MANN: In case you want that.
CSSN COPELAND: Thank you. Not Sean. The African guy.
SA GEREL: Okay.
CSSN COPELAND: With the car.
SA GEREL: Oh, okay. You ride with him a lot. Any other cars that you frequently use? Like, if you're just trying to go to the store or anything?
CSSN COPELAND: Like, whenever I need to go to the store or some shit, I--I use my roommate, like, I ask him. You know? Do you think you can take me to the store? Or can I use your car to go to the store?
SA GEREL: Okay. What kind of car does he drive?
CSSN COPELAND: A white Jeep.

ENCLOSURE D

002743_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Okay. All right. And then any other cars that you've been driving, like, in the last couple months?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: All right. What, you mentioned the traffic thing? Is that right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GEREL: What--what kind of car were you involved with in the traffic thing?

CSSN COPELAND: A Dodge Challenger, and that was all the way back in February.

SA GEREL: Yeah. That is while back. What--what happened with that? I know I'm--it is nothing to do with what we're talking about, but I'm just curious what happened.

CSSN COPELAND: I was speeding.

SA GEREL: Okay. You got a--you got a public defender?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I mean, I clearly can't talk to her because I don't have my phone.

SA GEREL: So, now people don't normally get public defenders for, like, a speeding, like did, were you drinking or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I got what I got--it was a reckless driving.

SA GEREL: Oh, reckless.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I was going 118 in a 55.

SA GEREL: What?

002744_COPELAND

SA MANN: Cruising.
SA GEREL: All right, well that's none of my business, but I hope that turns out okay for you. Well, can you borrow a friend's phone to call that attorney?
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I don't, I--I, me personally, I don't know. Because I don't have--like, the attorney she called a couple of weeks ago.
SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: And I told her, I was, like, "Yeah, I'm at work right now." And she was, like, "Oh, I'm sorry. And she was asking me, like, "What's a good time?" And I was, like, "You can call the next day because I'm off."
SA GEREL: Yeah.
CSSN COPELAND: And she was, like, "All right." I've never heard from her again.
SA GEREL: Yeah. They can be hard to get a hold of. Well, I encourage you to keep trying. Again, none of my business, but yeah. Keep trying. Ship phone, base phone, barracks phone. Whatever you can find.
But what questions do you have for us?
CSSN COPELAND: Nothing as of right now.
SA GEREL: And thank you for--for talking to us today. I'm going to give you last thoughts. I hope that we can talk again. I hope that we can get--get a chance to interact with you a day that you're feeling better, maybe a little less stressed, and maybe consider the polygraph.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: It is one of the few things out there that can say, like, "I didn't do it, and let me help you prove it." Like, that's one of the few things that actually does that.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GEREL: So, again, like you're going to have people that are, you know, until--until we find her, you're going to have people that are speculating and saying stuff. You know the truth in your heart. You don't let them bother you anymore than it's going to bother you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: But you might be able to tell them one day, like, "I'm telling you, I--I didn't do it, plus I passed my polygraph." You know, that means a lot to some people. So, just kind of keep that in mind. And then, we are here for you. So, you can even, let--do you have contact information for NCIS? Do you have anybody's contact number from here?

CSSN COPELAND: I have the--the male that I talked to. Not the male, I think it was just the female.

SA GEREL: The shorter one.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

002746_COPELAND

SA GEREL: Okay. Yeah. So, you can call her and you can say, whatever you want to say, but if you change your mind and say, like, "I'm ready, let them know that I'll take it." We will get to you soon as we can after you make that call, and we might check back in with you if it's okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GEREL: Just to see how you're feeling about whether you feel like you could be ready to do that. Obviously, if we find her, then--then that might not be--we may have to never do that. But if--while the--while the--the search is on, it could be very, you know, again, probably help you in people looking.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: Any questions about that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.

SA GEREL: All right. Thank you for thinking about it. I--I really appreciate that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: Tyler, you got anything?

SA MANN: I--I don't think so. I mean, if you hear something, let somebody know.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: Like I--I guess, you know, I'd be remiss if I--I didn't ask, like, what would you--what--what do you want to, what do you think the perfect outcome here is?

CSSN COPELAND: Shit, I don't--I don't know. As much as you guys knows, that's as much as I know. So, I--I---- SA MANN: Oh no, but I mean, like, take all that off the table. How--how do you want to see this end?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, hopefully y'all find her and she's okay.

SA MANN: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, that's the only thing that everybody's worried about right now. Because obviously nobody knows where her whereabouts are right now, so.

SA MANN: Sure. So, that's part of the--the reason we ask you to keep doing your part to make that happen. Right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: So, you know, if you hear something small, large, anywhere between, tell somebody, please.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA MANN: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA MANN: All right. Otherwise, I think you've got some things to tend this afternoon, unfortunately, but yeah. Good luck with that.

CSSN COPELAND: Thank you.

002748_COPELAND

SA MANN: If you will give us some time to coordinate, you--somebody dropped you off here?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. My--I believe my lieutenant's out there.
SA MANN: Oh, is he still here?
CSSN COPELAND: I--I hope so, shit.
SA MANN: We have a phone, I think, if he's not. So we'll--let--give us a few minutes to get a hold of him. Are you good? Just hanging tight for a few minutes here?
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.
SA MANN: Okay. I mean, if you want to put your head down, take a nap. Like, we can, I'll get this out of the way.
CSSN COPELAND: Thank you.
SA MANN: Put it up here. All right. So, feel free to jump over there if you want to put your head down or something, but catch up on some of that sleep you've been missing.
SA GEREL: Yeah.
SA MANN: We'll be right back. Thank you.
CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, no problem.
[SA Mann and SA Gerel departed the room at timestamp 3:01:38.]
CSSN COPELAND: All right.
SA GEREL: That all right?
CSSN COPELAND: Thank you.
SA GEREL: No problem.

002749_COPELAND

[SA Mann entered the room at timestamp 3:02:27.]
SA MANN: You're good, man. I'm just going to hang in here.
CSSN COPELAND: Is he out there or here, or is he on his way?
SA MANN: No, we just called him, though, so he should be on his way. I think they--we asked them to give him a ring before we came in, I know that. But we'll, I'm going to pull this so I can just make sure, because I need my phone. Hey man, what's happening? So, just give me a second.
CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.
SA MANN: I'll be back with you here shortly. Okay?
CSSN COPELAND: Okay.
[SA Mann departed the room at timestamp 3:02:49.]
[SA Mann and SA Gerel entered the room at timestamp 3:04:16.]
SA GEREL: All right. Your lieutenant's here. All right, last--last--last call. Any questions? You got anything we can help you with?
CSSN COPELAND: No, sir.
SA GEREL: How you feeling? I know other than what we already talked about. How you feeling?
CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I mean, I'm just going with the flow. Just trying---- SA GEREL: Okay. So, you seem like you're under a little bit of stress, but you seem like you got it together. You seem strong.

002750_COPELAND

But I--I--I've been along before and I--I don't want to make any assumptions. So, you know, I--I care about your mental health.

Do you have any worries that you would--any worries about hurting yourself or anybody else?

CSSN COPELAND: Not nobody else. I mean, after that day, I feel like I'm straight. I mean, I'm holding it together, but----

SA GEREL: Okay. And you said you had no worries about anybody else. How about yourself?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I'm fine.

SA GEREL: Okay. So, you you--you may or may not know, but, like, your command's got access to resources, like, if you need to talk. Like, I was asking you earlier who you talked to when you get--need to get stuff off your mind. Don't keep stuff bottled in. You know, if you need to go talk to a chaplain or a counselor, there's nothing wrong with that.

You--you--you've been through some things that would cause anybody to feel a certain kind of way. So, like, don't--don't be hero. You can talk to people if you need to. Okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: But you good?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, sir.

SA GEREL: You strong?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

002751_COPELAND

SA GEREL: All right. Let's go.

CSSN COPELAND: Huh?

SA MANN: I said, let's get you on out of here. Got that water?

CSSN COPELAND: Thank you.

SA MANN: So, cover with all your stuff should be there. Make sure it's all there before you walk out.

[SA Mann, SA Gerel, and CSSN Copeland departed the room at timestamp 3:05:58.]

SA MANN: Concluded at 1148. Command--member released to command.

UNITED STATES v. JERMIAH COPELAND CSSN/E-3 USN	DEFENSE MOTION FOR APPROPRIATE RELIEF (SEVER CHARGES) 26 NOV 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 906(b)(10), as well as the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution, the defense moves to sever the charges related to CS3 A.R. from the remainder of the charges. Specifically, the Defense seeks to sever Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), Specifications 2 and 3, Charge VI (False Official Statement), Specification 1 and 2; and Charge VII (Premeditated Murder); from the remainder of the charges in order to prevent a manifest injustice and to preserve CSSN Copeland's right to due process and the presumption of innocence.

SUMMARY

CSSN Copeland has been charged with a litany of offenses, including allegations of sexual assault and premeditated murder, among others. These offenses, while not elementally similar, encompass the most serious offenses under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The Defense seeks severance of the murder charge and other charges related to the investigation into CS3 A.R.'s disappearance because there is no mechanism, bifurcation, instructions or otherwise, that would allow the members to separate these offenses and evaluate each independently. The evidence to be presented at trial on the murder allegation is likely to incite a guttural response from the members and they will not be able to separate that feeling from the fact that the Government has almost no evidence to offer in support of the allegations of sexual assault, indecent recording and broadcasting, domestic violence and assault. The result is inescapable and impermissible spillover that cannot be rectified and as such severance is the appropriate course of action to ensure fair trials for each of the charged offenses.

FACTS

1. On 26 July 2024, NCIS was notified of an alleged aggravated sexual contact and abusive sexual contact perpetrated upon ABHAN C.R. by CSSN Jermiah Copeland. The alleged conduct occurred on 23 July 2024 at 0200 aboard the USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN-75).[1] This complaint forms the basis for Charge 1, Specifications 1 and 2; and Charge II, sole specification.

[1] Enclosure A: Summary of ABHAN C.R. Allegation.

2. CSSN Copeland cooperated with and participated in the subsequent investigation into the allegation made by C.R.[2]

3. On 6 November 2024, NCIS was notified of an alleged sexual assault aboard the USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN-75) that had allegedly occurred on 4 November 2024 at a port call in Oslo, Norway. The CSSN S.S. alleged that CSSN Jermiah Copeland was the perpetrator.[3] This complaint forms the basis of Charge I, Specification 4; Charge III, Specifications 1 and 2; and Charge IV, Specification 1.

4. CSSN Copeland spoke with investigators and cooperated in their investigation into CSSN S.S.'s allegation.[4]

5. On 11 April 2025, CS3 S.R. notified Naval Station Norfolk Security forces that she was allegedly assaulted by CSSN Copeland, a person she had been casually dating. She alleged that CSSN Copeland "choked" her.[5] Importantly, during this alleged incident, CS3 S.R. brandished a knife, burst into the room uninvited, and initiated the contact in question.[6] These allegations form the basis for Charge V, Specifications 1 and 2.

6. The initial investigation into this incident listed CS3 S.R. as the aggressor in the situation, and the subject of the investigation. Her allegations are unsupported by percipient witness statements taken from YN3 S.M. who was CSSN Copeland's roommate and in the room at the time of the alleged offenses by CSSN Copeland.[7]

7. CSSN Copeland participated in the investigation into these allegations.[8]

8. On 31 May 2025, NCIS was notified that CS3 A.R. was a missing person and they began their investigation into her whereabouts.[9]

9. YN3 S.M. has been interviewed as a witness to both the CS3 S.R. allegations and the investigation into the disappearance of CS3 A.R.[10]

10. On 9 June 2025, the remains of CS3 A.R. were found in a secluded area of Norfolk.[11]

11. On 10 June 2025 at 0200, CSSN Copeland was placed in pretrial confinement upon suspicion of having violated Article 118 (Murder), UCMJ.[12]

12. On 20 June 2025 CSSN Copeland was publicly identified as the suspect in custody for the disappearance and death of CS3 A.R.[13]

13. On 24 June 2025, NCIS searched CSSN Copeland's phone and located a phone number they believed belonged to a minor "based off inferences" related to the content of the messages.[14]

14. When NCIS called the number, they determined Y.J. was not a minor, though they asked her what she knew about CSSN Copeland. At that time Y.J. stated that CSSN Copeland had sexually assaulted her in his barracks room in April or May 2025.[15] These allegations form the basis for Specification 4 of Charge I.

15. When she was initially contacted by NCIS, Y.J. stated that she had not spoken to CSSN Copeland recently, but she had discussed the missing "sailor girl" and CSSN Copeland with the two sailors she was with on the night of the alleged assault- LSSA Omeri Smoot and AEAN Jdyn Bradford.[16]

16. Y.J. didn't recall the exact conversation but she knew the two sailors had "stopped being friends with [CSSN Copeland] due to "[CS3 A.R.] missing."[17]

17. Y.J. has been reluctant to participate in the investigation, failing to show up for scheduled interviews and citing concerns that her father might find out what she had been doing in the room prior to the alleged assault by CSSN Copeland.[18]

18. Y.J. has a past family history of at least one documented domestic violence incident with her father.[19]

19. Y.J. went to CSSN Copeland's room on the night of the alleged assault with LSSA Omeri Smoot and AEAN Jdyn Bradford to engage in consensual group sex. CSSN Copeland came home shortly after the group finished having sex. [20]

20. NCIS interviewed LSSA Omeri Smoot and AEAN Jdyn Bradford related to the allegations made by Y.J. as well as the disappearance of CS3 A.R.[21]

AEAN Jdyn Brandford states that Y.J. told him on the ride home that CSSN Copeland tried to have her perform oral sex on him, there was no mention of vaginal penetration.[22]

22. The remaining charges and specifications on the charge sheet stem from circumstances surrounding the subsequent investigations into each of the allegations of sexual assault and murder.

BURDEN

23. Pursuant to RCM 905(c) and 906(b)(10), the defense, as the moving party, bears the burden to establish that a manifest injustice will result from the continued joint trial of charges.[23] The burden of proof on any factual issues the resolution of which are necessary to decide the motion is by a preponderance of the evidence.[24]

LAW

24. Appellate courts review a Military Judge's ruling on a motion to sever charges for an abuse of discretion.[25] However, upon a showing that manifest injustice will result by joint trial of charges, the military judge does not only have the discretion to grant a timely motion to sever, he has a duty to do so.[26] In the event the charges are referred capital, the military judge may sever the capital charges from non-capital charges if it appears to prejudice the accused.[27]

25. CSSN Copeland is entitled to the presumption of innocence on each offense charged. A service member accused at court-martial is entitled to the presumption of innocence.[28] He may be convicted only on relevant evidence, properly admitted against him with respect to any specification.[29] It is, in fact, "one of the most basic precepts of American jurisprudence that an accused must be convicted based on evidence of the crime before the court, not on evidence of a general criminal disposition."[30] Where offenses are totally dissimilar, spillover is less likely.[31] "Where the criminal intent is similar (although the offenses themselves are unrelated) […] there is a serious danger that overwhelming proof on one will "spill over" and prejudice a legitimate defense to another.[32]

26. Manifest injustice is not otherwise defined, but Appellate Courts assess a Military Judge's severance determination based on the three-factored Southworth test. While our Appellate Courts have not devised a ready definition of manifest injustice, on appeal, these courts conduct a three-factored analysis of a military judge's decision on a motion to sever.[33] The three factors to be considered are: 1) Whether the evidence of one offense would have been admissible to prove the other; 2) Whether the military judge provided a proper limiting instruction, and; 3) Whether the findings reflect an impermissible cross-over.[34]

27. Manifest injustice occurs when one is tried for an offense on which the evidence was strong and which results in a conviction of an offense on which the evidence is relatively weak.[35]

28. Due to the retrospective nature of the second and third factors, the Defense cannot apply them directly—no instructions have been given and no verdict rendered. As a result, the Court is limited to evaluating instead the potential for impermissible spillover given the facts of this case and available prophylactic measures. Despite "proper instruction to prevent the 'spillover effect,' there may be circumstances where it would be impossible for a rational factfinder to separate the evidence relating to different charges."[36]

29. Evidence of a crime, wrong, or other act is not admissible to prove a person's character in order to show that on a particular occasion the person acted in accordance with the character.[37] This evidence may be admissible for another purpose, such as proving motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake, or lack of accident. On request by the accused, the prosecution must provide reasonable notice of the general nature of any such evidence that the prosecution intends to offer at trial.[38]

ARGUMENT

30. Trial of the alleged murder and sexual assaults together will result in manifest injustice because the inflammatory nature of the alleged murder will undoubtedly cause the members to give undue weight to the exceptionally weak evidence the Government has to support the sexual offenses.

CSSN Copeland cannot be convicted of any offense premised on a general predisposition. This is common knowledge and something the Court must guard against in order to ensure due process and the presumption of innocence remain intact for CSSN Copeland. It is clear in this case that the Government wholly intends to tie the evidence from the sexual assault and strangulation allegations to the unrelated murder charge in the absence of similar evidence related to that murder charge.[39] The Government also intends to argue that the accused's participation in the sexual assault allegations is tied to the allegations related to the investigation into CS3 A.R.'s murder.[40] Despite the offenses being factually dissimilar from one another, the Government seeks to tie them together, argue them together, and use them to support one another. This will result in the evidence of one offense being used to bolster the other charges that are unsupported by any actual evidence.

In United States v. Haye, the accused was alleged to have committed fraternization and adultery with two separate individuals.[41] At trial, the Government "piggy-backed" the evidence of different offenses together.[42] The military judge provided an instruction as to the proper usage of the evidence.[43] However, the C.M.A. held that despite this instruction they were not convinced that evidence of one allegation had not effected his conviction for the other.[44]

As it relates to CSSN Copeland, the Government has no reservations about arguing the connectedness of the offenses, despite them being dissimilar on an elemental level. Similar to Haye, an instruction from the military judge, in light of the way the Government seeks to argue their case, cannot protect CSSN Copeland from the threat of impermissible propensity evidence from being used to convict him of offenses for which there is little to no physical evidence.

In United States v. Palacios, the C.M.A. noted that "there may be circumstances where it would be impossible for a rational factfinder to separate the evidence relating to different charges."[45] Here, the Government contends that evidence of the alleged sexual assaults is, in fact, admissible as proof of the alleged murder of CS3 A.R. The offenses have different elements, but the Government's commingling of proof makes the possibility of impermissible spillover between the offenses a certainty.

Because the Government intends to connect these offenses and evidence to prove up all the charged offenses, they are inextricably intertwined making impermissible spillover unavoidable. The allegations related to CS3 A.R. must be severed from the alleged sexual assaults in order to prevent manifest injustice- CSSN Copeland will lose the presumption of innocence, his due process rights will be violated, and he faces conviction based on a criminal disposition as opposed to legal and competent evidence. Severance is required.

31. The Government's exceedingly weak evidence related to the alleged sexual offenses will be impermissibly bolstered if tried in conjunction with the alleged murder charge.

It would be impossible to prevent inevitable impermissible spillover in this case. The inclusion of the various and different alleged offenses will invite the members to opine on CSSN Copeland's general predisposition to commit violations of the UCMJ and to solicit undue weight to be given to the Government's evidence.

Importantly, the evidence supporting the alleged sexual offenses is based not upon physical evidence, but solely upon the testimony of the complaining witnesses.[46] CSSN S.S. was in a dating, and soon to be marital and familial, relationship with another shipmate at the time she had sexual intercourse with CSSN Copeland, and when that is coupled with conflicting percipient witness testimony, this evidence standing alone would not result in conviction at trial. This allegation would not have been charged but for the Government's desire to tie the circumstances surrounding the investigation into CSSN S.S.'s allegations (hiding a phone, "half-truths," etc.) to the circumstances surrounding the investigation into CS3 A.R.'s murder.

Similarly, CSSN C.R., was in a relationship at the time of the alleged offense, there are no witnesses, and there is no physical evidence to support her allegations. This allegation would not, and had not, been charged until the Government tied her allegation to the alleged murder of CS3 A.R.

CS3 S.R. made her allegations against CSSN Copeland during an investigation into her own misconduct. Her allegations are unsupported by physical evidence and contradicted by other percipient witnesses. These allegations would not have been charged, but for the Government's desire to tie an allegation of CSSN Copeland "choking" her to the alleged murder of CS3 A.R.

The allegations made by Y.J. were only uncovered during the investigation into CS3 A.R. She never reported a sexual assault until NCIS approached her. Additionally, her account is not supported by any physical evidence and the percipient witnesses give conflicting statements about what happened to include what Y.J. herself reported to them. Coupled with Y.J.'s reluctance to participate and her motive to fabricate (past domestic violence incident with her father), the Government would not have charged this incident. However, the Government now wants to tie the circumstances surrounding Y.J.'s allegation to support "knowledge and intent" as it relates to the alleged murder of CS3 A.R.

Surely the accused cannot ask for severance simply because it improves his odds of acquittal, but here, where the Government has expressed a decided interest in tying together what are fundamentally different offenses, the likelihood of impermissible spillover cannot be removed through an instruction nor bifurcation. Importantly there are witnesses to the alleged misconduct who will be giving testimony regarding the different allegations on the charge sheet. The members will be left to conclude that CSSN Copeland has a predisposition to commit criminal acts and this will spillover to the consideration of the evidence and the weight to be afforded.

32. Though not referred as capital, the alleged murder of CS3 A.R. carries the possibility of conviction and a mandatory sentence of life without parole, making this tantamount to a capital case.

While the case is not referred as capital, R.C.M. 906(B)(10)(B) is persuasive. Offenses for which the death penalty is authorized, carry a different level of scrutiny when considering severance of offenses. In capital cases, if it appears to prejudice the accused the military judge may sever the offenses. The Government has made the choice to charge this as a non-capital offense thereby raising the bar for severance of the charges. The Government should not be allowed to charge offenses in such a manner as to remove procedural safeguards, tie together wholly unrelated offenses, and then argue that they are somehow all evidence of one another. This alone is manifest injustice, not simply appearing prejudicial to the accused.

RELIEF REQUESTED

33. The defense moves this Court to sever Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), Specifications 2 and 3, Charge VI (False Official Statement), Specification 1 and 2; and Charge VII (Premeditated Murder); from the remainder of the charges in order to prevent a manifest injustice and to preserve CSSN Copeland's right to due process and the presumption of innocence.

34. If this motion is opposed by the government, and pursuant to R.C.M. 905(h), the defense requests an Article 39(a), UCMJ, hearing to present additional evidence and argument on this motion.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY
1. On 26Jul24, NCISRU USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75) was notified by MA1 Ronald CORTESELLI, USN, USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), of an unrestricted report of sexual assault wherein ABHAN C[redacted] T[redacted] R[redacted] (V/[redacted] USN, CVN 75, stated she was sexually assaulted by CSSN Jermiah Taylor COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, CVN 75, while aboard the ship in port on 23Jul24 at approximately 0200 hours. During her interview on 06Aug24, V/[redacted] stated S/COPELAND grabbed her vulva, breasts, and buttocks over the clothing while applying pressure to her neck so that it was difficult for her to breathe. Multiple witnesses were interviewed in reference to the offense. During his interview on 16Aug24, subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights, S/COPELAND denied the allegations. A Military Protective Order (MPO) was requested. All investigative actions completed, this case is hereby pending administrative and/or judicial action.

NARRATIVE
1. This reactive criminal investigation pertains to a suspected violation of Article 120 (Abusive Sexual Contact) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ).

2. On 26Jul24, MA1 Ronald CORTESELLI, USN, CVN 75, forwarded the voluntary statement of CSSN Fernando CUESTABRAVO, USN, CVN 75, related to the assault; Exhibit (1) pertains.

V/[redacted] stated S/COPELAND grabbed her vulva, breasts, and buttocks over the clothing while applying pressure to her neck so that it was difficult for her to breathe; Exhibit (3) pertains.

5. On 16Aug24, RA interviewed CSSN Jaelen OWENS, USN, CVN 75, in reference to the offense. CSSN OWENS stated he was approached by S/COPELAND approximately two (2) months prior to the interview and CSSN CUESTABRAVO informed S/COPELAND told him V/[redacted] had "put a case on" him (S/COPELAND) for an incident with CSSN CUESTABRAVO's girlfriend; Exhibit (4) pertains.

6. On 16Aug24, RA interviewed CSSN CUESTABRAVO in reference to the offense. CSSN CUESTABRAVO recalled at approximately 0200 hours on 24Jul24, he received text messages from V/[redacted] indicating something bad had happened. Later that morning, CSSN CUESTABRAVO stated V/[redacted] disclosed S/COPELAND had strangled her, grabbed her, and "touched her everywhere"; Exhibit (5) pertains.

7. On 16Aug24, RA interviewed CSC Gregory SIMMONS, USN, USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), in reference to the offense. CSC SIMMONS related CSSN CUESTABRAVO approached him and stated S/COPELAND "assaulted" V/[redacted] Exhibit (6) pertains.

8. On 16Aug24, RA interviewed CSSA Deontae WILLIAMS, USN, CVN 75, in reference to the offense. recalled S/COPELAND told him CSSN Fernando CUESTABRAVO, USN, "put a case on [S/COPELAND]" because S/COPELAND was talking to V/[redacted] on SnapChat; Exhibit (7) pertains.

9. On 16Aug24, RA and MAC Adam NORMAN, USN, USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), interviewed S/COPELAND in reference to the offense. Subsequently to waiving his Article 31b Rights, S/COPELAND denied the allegations; Exhibit (8) pertains.

Examination (SAFE) aboard the ship. During her interview on 07Nov24, V/[redacted] stated she was intoxicated and did not remember sexual contact with S/COPELAND, but other sailors approached her the following day and indicated S/COPELAND showed multiple sailors a video on his cellular telephone of his sexual contact with her. Multiple witness interviews were conducted corroborating the existence of a video and sexual encounter. S/COPELAND was interviewed on 18Nov24 and 20Dec24 and subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights stated the sexual contact with V/[redacted] was consensual and admitted to producing a video recording during the sexual encounter. A Military Protective Order (MPO) was requested. This investigation remains open pending forensic analysis of the Sexual Assault Forensic Examination (SAFE) kit and any other investigative actions deemed necessary.

NARRATIVE

1. This reactive criminal investigation pertains to a suspected violation of Article 120 (Abusive Sexual Contact) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ).

2. Reference (A) documents a prior abusive sexual assault allegation wherein S/COPELAND is the subject.

3. On 06Nov24, a preliminary interview with V/[redacted] was conducted wherein she stated she learned of a video circulated by S/COPELAND that depicted sexual intercourse. V/[redacted] stated she was intoxicated at the time the video was taken and was too intoxicated to consent; Exhibit (1) pertains.

4. On 06Nov24, Reporting Agent (RA) made attempts to locate the cellular telephone belonging to S/COPELAND via verbal consent of S/COPELAND's person and the person of CSSN Kaulise COUSINS, USN, CVN 75. The cellular telephone was not located; Exhibit (2) pertains.

5. On 06Nov24, CS2 Demarko SINGLETARY, USN, CVN 75, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CS2 SINGLETARY stated V/[redacted] disclosed the assault to him and indicated the names of other sailors who had purportedly seen the video of the sexual encounter; Exhibit (3) pertains.

6. On 06Nov24, CSSA Jacqueline BITA, USN, CVN 75, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSA BITA stated S/COPELAND showed her a video of him having sexual intercourse with V/[redacted] on the night of the offense; Exhibit (4) pertains.

7. On 06Nov24, CDR Brett BALLARD, USN, Executive Officer (XO), HSC 11, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CDR BALLARD recalled his involvement in assisting S/COPELAND back to the ship as the Senior Shore

Patrol Representative the day following the offense; Exhibit (5) pertains.

8. On 06Nov24, RA made further attempts to locate the cellular telephone belonging to S/COPELAND via Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS). The berthing, rack, and personal spaces belonging to S/COPELAND aboard the ship were searched with negative results; Exhibit (6) pertains.

9. On 06Nov24, CSSN COUSINS was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSN COUSINS denied ever having possession of S/COPELAND's cellular telephone or disposing of the cellular telephone for S/COPELAND; Exhibit (7) pertains.

10. On 07Nov24, V/[redacted] was interviewed in reference to the investigation. V/[redacted] stated she did not remember having sexual intercourse with S/COPELAND due to alcohol consumption. V/[redacted] stated she subsequently heard rumors of S/COPELAND circulating a video of them having sexual intercourse and confronted S/COPELAND about it via telephone, at which time S/COPELAND made a statement of denial; Exhibit (8) pertains.

11. On 07Nov24, CSSN Shamel EADDY, USN, CVN 75, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSN EADDY provided RA with a video of V/[redacted] confronting S/COPELAND telephonically; Exhibit (9) pertains.

12. On 08Nov24, CSSN Alexis RODGERS, USN, HSC 11, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSN RODGERS recalled accompanying V/[redacted] on liberty on 04Nov24; Exhibit (10) pertains.

13. On 08Nov24, CSSA Jakobie GANT, USN, CVN 75, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSA GANT related on 05Nov24, he was approached by S/COPELAND, who stated he had sexual intercourse with V/[redacted] and seemed excited about it. CSSA GANT related S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] kissed S/COPELAND's neck and had sexual intercourse; Exhibit (11) pertains.

14. On 08Nov24, CSSA Nicholas SPIVEY, USN, CVN 75, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSA SPIVEY had no personal knowledge of the event, but provided V/[redacted] S/COPELAND's telephone number so she could call him and confront S/COPELAND about the rumors; Exhibit (12) pertains.

15. On 10Nov24, RA received the Sexual Assault Forensic Examination (SAFE) Kit pertaining to V/[redacted] from LT Rasheda DIA, USN, CVN 75; Exhibit (13) pertains.

16. On 18Nov24, CSSN Jada KNIGHT, USN, VAW 126, was interviewed in reference to the investigation. CSSN KNIGHT recalled S/COPELAND showing her a video of him having sexual intercourse with V/[redacted] the night of 04Nov24 and provided RA with a separate video of V/[redacted] during the same evening following the assault of V/[redacted] drinking alcohol; Exhibit (14) pertains.

17. On 18Nov24, S/COPELAND was interviewed in reference to the investigation. Subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights, S/COPELAND admitted to taking a video of him having sexual intercourse with V/[redacted] in a bathroom stall of the bar but stated the sexual intercourse was consensual. S/COPELAND stated he lost his cellular telephone prior to returning back to the ship on 05Nov24. S/COPELAND provided a sample of his DNA via PASS; Exhibit (15) pertains.

18. On 20Dec24, a secondary interview of S/COPELAND was conducted per his request. Subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights, S/COPELAND provided RA with photographs and videos of the evening from his newly purchased cellular telephone, but stated he no longer possessed the video of him having sexual intercourse with V/[redacted] Exhibit (16) pertains.

19. On 18Mar25, CSSN Kaylee PARKS, USN, CVN 75, was interviewed and recalled her observations of V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND at Heidi's Bier Bar in Oslo, Norway; Exhibit (17) pertains.

20. On 19Mar25, CS2 Kirsten CLICK, USN, Strike Fighter Squadron 11 (VFA-11), was interviewed and recalled events that took place at Heidi's Bier Bar in Oslo, Norway; Exhibit (18) pertains.

21. On 28Feb25, CDR Michelle MATTHEWS, USN, Commanding Officer (CO), USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95), was notified concerning the status of the investigation.

22. This investigation remains open pending forensic analysis of the Sexual Assault Forensic Examination (SAFE) kit and any other investigative actions deemed necessary.

23. The generation of this reporting was delayed due to connectivity at sea and operational tempo aboard the USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY
1. On 31MAY25, NCIS received a report of a missing person, CSSN A[redacted] R[redacted] (V/[redacted] USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95), who was marked as Unauthorized Absent by DDG-95 along with CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG-95. On 01JUN25, base security was able to locate S/COPELAND, however, V/[redacted] was still missing. NCIS responded to Naval Station Norfolk and began conducting field interviews of friends and family members of V/[redacted] NCIS also spoke with S/COPELAND who stated, he along with one of his roommates dropped V/[redacted] off at her barracks, Miller Hall, on the morning on 29MAY25, and he had not seen or spoken to V/[redacted] since. Throughout the course of the investigation, it was determined S/COPELAND was the last person to see V/[redacted] and he had not been truthful about V/[redacted] whereabouts nor his actions through 29MAY25 until 01JUN25. NCIS was able to seize S/COPELAND's cellphone and conducted a forensic review of the cellphone, which lead NCIS to a neighborhood in Norfolk, VA where V/[redacted] body was located inside a black duffel bag. After the discovery, NCIS detained S/COPELAND and attempted to interview him. S/COPELAND requested a lawyer be present for the interview and the interview was terminated. S/COPELAND was then remanded to Pre-Trial Confinement, pending charges. This investigation continues pending

S/COPELAND, JERMIAH TAYLOR/SN USN
M/B/NEE3/[redacted PII]

RESULTS OF SECONDARY INTERVIEW OF YN3 SEAN MONAGHAN, USN

1. On 09Jun25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Investigator (PI) Tyler MANN conducted an interview of YN3 Sean MONAGHAN, USN, Helicopter Mine Countermeasures Squadron 12 (HM 12), pursuant to the missing person investigation involving CSSN A[redacted] R[redacted] (V/[redacted] USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95).

2. The interview of YN3 MONAGHAN was recorded using an audio/visual recording system, and a digital copy was downloaded onto a Digital Video Disc-Recordable (DVD-R). This document is a summary of the interview and not a verbatim transcription. For full details of the interview, refer to the working copy of the original DVD-R; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. As background, YN3 MONAGHAN is the roommate of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, who was the last known individual to see V/[redacted] before she went missing. It is believed V/[redacted] was last seen in the room shared by S/COPELAND and YN3 MONAGHAN.

4. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed on Wednesday, 28May25, he arrived at his barracks room around 1900 from traveling back home to New Jersey. YN3 MONAGHAN stated when he arrived, he did not see anyone in the room. YN3 MONAGHAN continued S/COPELAND got home that night around 2200; however, YN3 MONAGHAN stated he had watch early the next morning, so he was already half asleep. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed he does remember seeing a lighter-skinned female with short hair; however, he did not recognize her, nor did he know who she was. YN3 MONAGHAN stated on Thursday, 29May25, he woke up around 0500 to get ready for work, and he noticed no one was in his room. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he walked out into their common space at approximately 0640 and observed S/COPELAND asleep on the floor of the living room in his underwear with a girl he did not recognize. Of note, YN3 MONAGHAN was shown a picture of V/[redacted] by PA; however, he relayed he did not get a good enough look at the individual on the floor to positively identify her as V/[redacted] YN3 MONAGHAN stated he returned from work around 1300, and no one was in the room. YN3 MONAGHAN stated, around 2000, he saw S/COPELAND and asked him if him and the female from that morning had been naked, to which S/COPELAND relayed they had been in their underwear. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he saw S/COPELAND again that night in the common space around 2200 when he went to make food. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed S/COPELAND did sleep in their room that night.

5. YN3 MONAGHAN stated on Friday, 30May25, he woke up around 0600 when

S/COPELAND left and then woke up again around 0900 when a representative (NFI) from S/COPELAND's Command came looking for him; however, he was not in the room. YN3 MONAGHAN stated the next time he saw S/COPELAND was when he returned to the room around 2200-2300. YN3 MONAGHAN confirmed S/COPELAND slept in their room that night.

6. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed on Saturday, 31May25, he noticed S/COPELAND left early in the morning again, although he was not sure what time. YN3 MONAGHAN continued he was woken up at approximately 1200, when the Masters-at-Arms (MAs) came looking for S/COPELAND and again, he was not in the room. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed S/COPELAND returned to the room late at night again; however, he was not sure of the exact time.

7. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed on Sunday, 01Jun25, S/COPELAND received a call from his command around 1000, needing him to come in to work. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he was unsure how S/COPELAND got to work that day. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed S/COPELAND returned to the room at approximately 2200-2300.

8. YN3 MONAGHAN stated on Monday, 02Jun25, he was questioned by the "homicide unit" while at work and on Tuesday, 03Jun25, NCIS "raided" their barracks room and took S/COPELAND. YN3 MONAGHAN stated, following the "raid" by NCIS, he asked S/COPELAND what NCIS was looking for, to which S/COPELAND responded, "I don't know, they're tripping." YN3 MONAGHAN relayed on Monday he noticed S/COPELAND was very skittish. YN3 MONAGHAN explained he walked into their room and when he opened the door, S/COPELAND looked startled and stated, "Oh, you scared me."

9. YN3 MONAGHAN stated S/COPELAND does have a car; however, it gets repairs done to it a lot. YN3 MONAGHAN stated S/COPELAND's "crazy ex slashed the tires." YN3 MONAGHAN described the car as being small, rectangular, and black with four doors. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed he drives a 2011 Toyota Camry with a New Jersey license plate number PII . YN3 MONAGHAN stated he has never let S/COPELAND borrow his car nor has he ever given him permission to use his car for any reason. YN3 MONAGHAN revealed he does leave his keys in places S/COPELAND could access them, usually on his desk in their room. YN3 MONAGHAN stated on 03Jun25, he did believe his car had moved parking spots and was so suspicious about the incident he texted his mom.

10. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed he did see S/COPELAND with a rolling suitcase a couple months ago. YN3 MONAGHAN described the suitcase as one that came up to his thigh, black, and had a handle for wheeling around. YN3 MONAGHAN stated S/COPELAND usually kept this suitcase locked in his closet; however, stated he had not seen it in "awhile."

11. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed he has not noticed anything in their room being out of place. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he deep cleaned their room on Monday, 02Jun25, where he noticed the bathmat in front of the toilet had a stain in one corner, he believed to be blood. YN3 MONAGHAN relayed this was not unusual to him because S/COPELAND had female friends over who would often leave tampons in their bathroom, and blood sometimes got on the floor. YN3 MONAGHAN stated, because he thought nothing of this, he placed the bathmat in the washing machine to be cleaned. YN3 MONAGHAN provided a hand drawn sketch of the bathmat to depict where he observed the blood; Enclosure (B) pertains. YN3 MONAGHAN also provided a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) to enter his barracks room and collect the bathmat which will be documented under separate cover.

1. On 24JUN25, NCIS conducted a cold call to a phone number "757-217-7057," which was located during a review of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND's (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) cellphone while investigating Reference (C). During the search of the cellphone, the phone number was thought to be a minor child based off the inference of the text messages between S/COPELAND and the phone number. NCIS ran the phone number which determined it was a VoIP number. NCIS then cold called the phone number and identified the person who answered to be Ye[redacted] J[redacted] (V/J[redacted] CIV, who was determined to be an 18-year-old female. NCIS identified themselves and asked V/[redacted] what information, if any, did she know about S/COPELAND. V/[redacted] then stated S/COPELAND had sexually assaulted her in April or May 2025. NCIS

1. This reactive investigation is being initiated due to the alleged violation of Article 120 (Rape and Sexual Assault Generally) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ). NCIS is the lead investigating agency.

2. On 24JUL25, NCIS telephonically interviewed V/[redacted] who stated she was sexually assaulted by S/COPELAND in his barracks room in April or May 2025; Exhibit (1) pertains.

3. On 04AUG25, NCIS interviewed LSSA Omeri SMOOT, USN, USS DWIGHT D EISENHOWER (CVN-69). LSSA SMOOT was present during the sexual assault; Exhibit (2) pertains.

4. On 05AUG25, NCIS interviewed AEAN Jdyn BRADFORD, USN, CVN-69. AEAN BRADFORD was present during the sexual assault; Exhibit (3) pertains.

5. Between 05AUG-25AUG25, NCIS made multiple attempts to contact and formally interview V/[redacted] with negative results; Exhibit (4) pertains.

6. On 13AUG25, NCIS contacted LCDR Amanda SERFESS, USN, Defense counsel, and asked to interview S/COPELAND. LCDR SERFESS contacted S/COPELAND who chose to remain silent; Exhibit (5) pertains.

6. On 22AUG25, charges were preferred for the sexual assault without consent of V/[redacted]

7. On 28AUG25, LCDR Lauren MAYO, USN, OSTC, was updated on the status of this investigation.

8. This investigation continues pending the collection of fingerprints and DNA of S/COPELAND.

INTERIVEW OF Y[redacted] J[redacted], CIV

1. On 24JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) conducted a cold call in an attempt to identify the owner of the phone number "757-217-7057", who was thought to have been a minor child engaged in sexual activity with CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95).

2. Ye[redacted] (V/[redacted] CIV, was identified as being a 19 year old dependent who was sexually assaulted by S/COPELAND. V/[redacted] explained she was not comfortable having a formal interview conducted at that time, however, she would tell RA what happened over the phone.

3. During the phone call, V/[redacted] stated she knew S/COPELAND and had a one-night stand with him sometime in the beginning of the summer in 2025. V/[redacted] described S/COPELAND as giving off "weird vibes" and he would constantly ask her to come over.

4. V/[redacted] explained on the night of the sexual assault, she had been picked up by two other males, Omar (NFI) and Jaden (NFI). After being picked up by them, V/[redacted] said they drove her back to S/COPELAND's barracks room located on Naval Station Norfolk and they engaged in a consensual 3-way. V/[redacted] explained S/COPELAND was not present however, he did return to his barracks room sometime between 0500-0600. V/[redacted] stated the 3-way was over and she was very tired. However, when S/COPELAND arrived at his barracks room, V/[redacted] said he grabbed her by the arm and pulled her into his room. V/[redacted] stated S/COPELAND wanted her to give him "head" or oral sex, and V/[redacted] said she told S/COPELAND "no" and that she was "tired." V/[redacted] explained S/COPELAND then attempted to penetrate her vagina and she stated it was painful and hurt when S/COPELAND penetrated her. V/[redacted] said she told S/COPELAND to "stop." V/[redacted] explained Omar was at the door and could hear her telling S/COPELAND to stop. V/[redacted] further explained Omar entered the room and was able to get V/[redacted] out of the situation. V/[redacted] said she told Omar "thankyou" and left the barracks room.

5. V/[redacted] stated she had not spoken to S/COPELAND since the sexual

INTERIVEW OF AEAN JDYN BRADFORD, USN

1. On 05AUG25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Lisa CARROLL conducted an interview of AEAN Jdyn BRADFORD, USN, USS DWIGHT D EISENHOWER (CVN-69) in regard to the captioned investigation.

2. This interview was audio and video recorded utilizing Case Cracker. A copy of the recording was subsequently saved to an optical disc and maintained with the case file. This report should not be treated as a verbatim or comprehensive representation of the interview; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. AEAN BRADFORD stated LSSA Omeri SMOOT, USN, CVN-69, and Ye[redacted] JIM[redacted] (V/[redacted] CIV were all hanging out in CSSN Jermiah COPELAND's (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG-95) barracks room on 25MAY25. AEAN BRADFORD explained S/COPELAND was not in the barracks room but returned around 0300-0400. AEAN BRADFORD stated when S/COPELAND entered the barracks room he went right to V/[redacted] and gave her a hug. AEAN BRADFORD stated the next thing he realized, as he was on a phone call, S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] were in S/COPELAND's bedroom and the door was locked. AEAN BRADFORD stated he could hear V/[redacted] say "no" and that she was "tired". AEAN BRADFORD explained he and LSSA SMOOT kept telling S/COPELAND to stop, and eventually S/COPELAND opened the door. AEAN BRADFORD observed V/[redacted] on the floor of S/COPELAND's room in what was described as someone who may have "rag dolled" onto the floor. AEAN BRADFORD explained V/[redacted] did not have a shirt on but did have a bra and pants on. AEAN BRADFORD stated S/COPELAND told everyone to get out of the barracks room due to him having to go to work. AEAN BRADFORD explained he took V/[redacted] home and on the way home V/[redacted] told him S/COPELAND attempted to make her perform oral sex on S/COPELAND.

4. AEAN BRADFORD expressed his concerns for V/[redacted] AEAN BRADFORD further clarified he was not going to let V/[redacted] stay there as he was concerned what S/COPELAND might do to her if left alone with her. PERMISSIVE AUTHORIZATION FOR SEARCH AND SEIZURE

Date : 05AUG25

I, JDYN BRADFORD, after being advised by Special Agent Jessica Gorley & Lisa Carroll that the Naval Criminal Investigative Service is conducting an investigation into SEXUAL ASSAULT, have been requested to permit a search of my IPHONE.

I have been informed of my constitutional right to refuse to permit this search in the absence of a search warrant. In full understanding of this right, I have nevertheless decided to permit this search to be made.

This search may be conducted on 05AUG25 by NCIS, and I hereby give my permission to remove and retain any property or papers found during the search which are desired for investigative purposes.

I make this decision freely and voluntarily, and it is made with no threats having been made or promises extended to me.

NARRATIVE
1. This reactive investigation is being initiated due to the alleged violation of Article 120 (Rape and Sexual Assault Generally) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ). NCIS is the lead investigating agency.

2. As background, NCIS is conducting an investigation into CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) for his alleged involvement in the death of CSSN Ar[redacted] R[redacted], USN, DDG-95. As such, while reviewing the information gathered in that investigation, NCIS obtained the phone number "757-217-7057", identified as belonging to Ye[redacted] [redacted] (V/[redacted] CIV. It appeared V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND engaged in a sexual relationship and NCIS wanted to conduct an interview of V/[redacted] NCIS asked V/[redacted] to come in and be formally interviewed however, V/[redacted] declined, but agreed to speak to NCIS via telephone.

3. On 24JUL25, NCIS conducted a telephonic interview of V/[redacted] V/[redacted] stated she was sexually assaulted by S/COPELAND in April or May of 2025 while in his barracks room, Building X-2 located on Naval Station Norfolk.

V/[redacted] said she was picked up by two (2) sailors, who she could only identify as "Omar" and "Jaden", and she was taken to S/COPELAND's barracks room. V/[redacted] said Omar, Jaden and herself engaged in consensual sexual activities and stated she was sore and tired from the experience. V/[redacted] continued explaining, S/COPELAND had not been present during the consensual sexual activities between the other two males, however, S/COPELAND arrived at his barracks room between 0500-0600 and wanted to have intercourse with V/[redacted] V/[redacted] stated she told S/COPELAND she did not want to due to her being sore and tired. V/[redacted] continued explaining, S/COPELAND grabbed her by the arm and forced her into his bedroom. V/[redacted] stated Omar and Jaden where present when S/COPELAND grabbed her and forced her into his bedroom. V/[redacted] explained she continued to tell S/COPELAND "no", but S/COPELAND attempted to force V/[redacted] to perform oral sex on him. V/[redacted] stated she did not perform oral sex on S/COPELAND however, S/COPELAND did force his penis inside her vagina, when again V/[redacted] said "no" and to "stop" due to the pain. V/[redacted] stated Omar was banging on the door and eventually made his way into the bedroom and stopped S/COPELAND by taking V/[redacted] away from S/COPELAND and taking her out of the barracks. V/[redacted] she was unsure if she wanted to participate in this investigation because she did not want her father (NFI) to find out what she had done prior to the sexual assault and of her fear of S/COPELAND.

4. DATABASE AND BACKGROUND CHECKS: On 25JUL25, NCIS conducted database and background checks for V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND utilizing the National Crime Information Center (NCIC), Consolidated Law Enforcement Operations Center (CLEOC), NCIS Knowledge Network (K-NET), Department of Defense Law Enforcement Defense Data Exchange (D-DEX), Defense Central Index of Investigations (DCII), Defense Personnel Records Information Retrieval System (DPRIS), Official Military Personnel File (OMPF), and Defense Information System for Security (DISS) databases.

5. RESULTS FOR V/[redacted] All checks were negative except DDEX shows V/[redacted] was also the victim of a domestic incident between herself and her father, Yeri [redacted] CIV.

6. RESULTS FOR S/COPELAND: CLEOC, NCIC, KNET, DCII, and DDEX show S/COPELAND is the suspect in multiple NCIS investigations, References A-D pertain. DISS shows a Secret clearance. CLEOC shows two active Military Protective Orders (MPO). A review of S/COPELAND's OMPF shows no pertinent information.

7. This investigation continues pending the identification and interviews of Omar and Jaden and any other investigative steps deemed necessary.

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF LSSA OMERI SMOOT, USN

1. On 05JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Investigator (PI) Cotie WILSON interviewed LSSA Omeri SMOOT, USN, USS DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER (CVN-69), regarding the whereabouts of CCSN A[redacted] R[redacted] (V/[redacted] USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG-95). LSSA SMOOT was identified as a friend of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG-95.

2. The interview of LSSA SMOOT was recorded using an audio/visual recording system, and a digital copy was downloaded onto a Digital Video Disc-Recordable (DVD-R). This document is a summary of the interview and not a verbatim transcription. For full details of the interview, refer to the working copy of the original DVD-R; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. LSSA SMOOT was identified in a previous interview as the person who said S/COPELAND told him he was in jail over the weekend of 31MAY25-01JUN25.

4. LSSA SMOOT denied ever being told by S/COPELAND he was in jail during that weekend. LSSA SMOOT said this theory came from people in the group chat throwing out ideas to explain why S/COPELAND was counted as Unauthorized Absence (UA). LSSA SMOOT stated he picked up S/COPELAND on 02JUN25 and took him over to their friends' barracks in Portsmouth to hang out. During this car ride, LSSA SMOOT asked S/COPELAND what happened and why he was unaccounted for Friday. LSSA SMOOT stated S/COPELAND told him the Command would not let him on the ship. LSSA SMOOT also said S/COPELAND told him V/[redacted] was sad and she was having possible boyfriend issues when he last saw her. LSSA SMOOT did not press or ask any further questions as he did not want the car ride to be awkward.

5. LSSA SMOOT stated S/COPELAND stayed at this friends barracks in Portsmouth overnight and he drove him to work the next morning which was 03JUN25.

NAVY-MARINE CORPS TRIAL JUDICIARY
CENTRAL JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

UNITED STATES v. COPELAND, JERMIAH CSSN/ E-3 U.S. NAVY	DEFENSE MOTION TO DISMISS (FAILURE TO STATE AN OFFENSE) 26 November 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to Rule for Court-Martial (RCM) 907(b)(2)(E), the defense moves this Court to dismiss Charge VII and the sole specification because the charge and specification thereunder fail to state an offense.

BURDEN

As the moving party, the defense bears the burden to prove facts necessary to resolve the motion by a preponderance of evidence. R.C.M. 905(c).

FACTS

1. In Charge VII and the sole specification thereunder, CSSN Copeland is charged with violating Article 118 (Premeditated Murder):

> In that Culinary Specialist Seaman Jermiah T. Copeland, U.S. Navy, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95), on active duty, did, at or near Norfolk, Virginia, on or about 29 May 2025, with premeditation, murder CS3 A.R., U.S. Navy, by means of an act of the Accused. (Charge Sheet).

2. On 15 October 2025, the defense requested a bill of particulars. (Enclosure (A): Request for Bill of Particulars ltr of 15 Oct 25).

3. On 5 November 2025, the government provided a response to the defense's request. (Enclosure (B): Bill of Particulars). In the government's bill of particulars, its states that it does not have to prove a specific act, but that "as provided in [its] 5 November 404(b) notice, the Government will present evidence that CS3 A.R.'s death was consistent with strangulation by the Accused."

4. As of this filing, the defense has not been provided any direct evidence that CSSN Copeland strangled CS3 A.R. nor has it been provided any evidence of CS3 A.R.'s cause of death. Further, on 28 June 2025, an autopsy was performed by a Dr. Nemanja Rodic. This autopsy concluded that the manner of death is "deferred." (Enclosure (C): Autopsy Report). Dr. Rodic did not see any evidence of foul play, nor did he note any signs commonly associated with strangulation, he "considered it formally ruled [] out." (Enclosure (D): Voice Note Transcript provided with Autopsy Report).

5. In the government's bill of particulars, it reminds the defense that a bill of particulars does not restrict the government's proof at trial and that it can amend the bill of particulars.

6. On 5 November 2025, the government provided the defense notice pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b). In this notice the government states that it intends to use evidence that ABHAN C.R. and CSSN S.R. described being strangled as evidence of CSSN Copeland's "common scheme of controlling women to get them to comply." The government includes the "Accused's strangulation of CS3 A.R." as part of that common scheme. (Enclosure (A) of Def MIL M.R.E. 413 Motion: Government Notice Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b) of 5 Nov 25).

LAW

7. The Sixth Amendment provides that an accused shall "be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation" against him. Further, the Fifth Amendment provides that no person shall be "deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law," and no person shall be "subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy." Thus, when an accused Service Member is charged with an offense at court-martial, each specification will be found constitutionally sufficient only if it alleges, "either expressly or by necessary implication," "every element" of the offense, "so as to give the accused notice [of the charge against which he must defend] and protect him against double jeopardy."[1]

8. "A specification is sufficient if it first, contain[s] the elements of the offense charged and fairly inform[s] a defendant of the charge against which he must defend, and, second, enable[s] him to plead an acquittal or conviction in bar of future prosecutions for the same offense."[2] "If a specific intent, knowledge, or state of mind is an element of the offense, it must be alleged."[3]

9. The sufficiency requirement "ensures that a defendant understands what he must defend against."[4] "Indeed, '[n]o principle of procedural due process is more clearly established than . . . notice of the specific charge, and a chance to be heard in a trial of the issues raised by that charge.'"[5]

10. "If a specification fails to state an offense, the appropriate remedy is dismissal of that specification unless the Government can demonstrate that this constitutional error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt."[6]

11. Merely reciting an element without alleging central facts or circumstances can deprive an accused of constitutionally required notice.[7] According to the Supreme Court the mere recitation of a statute's elements is insufficient unless they "apprise the defendant 'with reasonable certainty, of the nature of the accusation against him.'"[8] "Undoubtedly, the language of a statute may be used in the general description of an offense, but it must be accompanied with such a statement of the facts and circumstances as will inform the accused of the specific offense, coming under the general description, with which he is charged."[9] A vague charge "requires the defendant to go to trial with the chief issue undefined. It enables his conviction to rest on one point and the affirmance of the conviction to rest on another. It gives the prosecution free hand on appeal to fill in the gaps of proof by surmise or conjecture."[10]

12. The elements the government must prove here for a violation of Article 118 (Premeditated Murder) are:

(1) That CS3 A.R. is dead;
(2) That the death resulted from the act or omission of CSSN Copeland;
(3) That the killing by the accused was unlawful; and
(4) That at the time of the killing, CSSN Copeland had a premeditated design to kill.

13. The Manual for Courts-Martial sample specification for the charged offense of murder reads, in relevant part, that the accused did "murder _____ by means of (shooting (him) (her) with a rifle ( ))."

14. A bill of particulars cannot be used to repair a specification which is otherwise not legally sufficient.[11]

ARGUMENT

15. The government failed to allege what act (or omission) by CSSN Copeland caused CS3 A.R.'s death. In doing so, it has deprived CSSN Copeland of the constitutionally required notice.

Here, the government merely recited the elements without alleging the central fact – the act on the part of the accused that caused a death. In doing so, the government deprived CSSN Copeland of the constitutionally required notice. It is clear from the sample specification for the charged offense of murder that more is required to be alleged in a charge for murder. The government failed to allege a means or a cause of death. "The model specification calls for alleging that the accused murdered someone by doing a specific thing—like "by means of shooting him with a rifle."[12] Here, the government failed to do so. The Military Judges' Benchbook advises instructing that the "death resulted from the (act) (omission) of the accused in (state the act or failure to act alleged)." Together, these are guidelines for the government that it must state an actual act or omission which resulted in a death.[13] The government failed to do so here; therefore, Charge VII should be dismissed.

In the government's bill of particulars, it attempts to persuade the defense that the government does not need to prove "the act that caused the death but rather need only prove corpus delicti" citing United States v. Elmore, 31 M.J. 678, 683 (N-M. Ct. M. R. 1990). Nowhere in Elmore does the court make such a finding. Further, Elmore is a case about, among other issues, factual and legal sufficiency – there is little mention of the actual charge and there is no appeal based on failure to state an offense or lack of notice. In Elmore, the N-MCMR held that the government has no requirement to produce a body to sustain a conviction for murder.[14] What we do know about the charges in Elmore is that the government acknowledged in the murder charge that it accomplished by "an unknown act of violence or force."[15] Here, the government fails to do even that. Therefore, the violation of Article 118 in this case fails to state an offense.

While United States v. Richard is not binding on this Court, it should be very persuasive as the Coast Guard Court of Criminal Appeals (CGCCA) analyzes the very same issue of whether the government must allege a specific act to put an accused on notice of what he must defend against – it must. As the government points out in its bill of particulars, it is important to note that the court in Richard was analyzing the sufficiency of a charge of murder to place an accused on notice of the lesser included offense of involuntary manslaughter. However, the analysis regarding the absence of specificity regarding the actual act alleged is the same. Here, the government also failed to state a specific act.

Importantly, in this case, the government provided a bill of particulars, however announces that it could change – requiring CSSN Copeland to change his defense strategy – does he defend against a strangulation or some other unknown act? Further, much of the evidence the government wishes to elicit and have the court instruct the members on pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b) will not be relevant if there is a different "act" that the government wishes to allege is the means of murder. Here, the government decided not to charge CSSN Copeland with a means of murder but still intends to elicit evidence of prior acts of strangulation to prove a common plan or scheme for an uncharged means of murder – strangulation. Then, the government can introduce evidence of prior alleged strangulations and have this Court instruct the members that they can consider these prior acts as evidence of a common scheme to strangle CS3 A.R., all while not actually being required to prove strangulation. This Court cannot allow that. A specific act must be alleged. Here, it was not; therefore, Charge VII must be dismissed for failing to state an offense.

RELIEF REQUESTED

16. Pursuant to Rule for Court-Martial (RCM) 907(b)(2)(E), the defense moves this Court to dismiss Charge VII and the sole specification because the charge and specification thereunder fail to state an offense.

17. Unless the government concedes the motion or this Court grants the relief on the basis of pleadings alone, the defense requests a hearing to present evidence and argument on this matter.

Ref: (a) R.C.M. 906(b)(6), discussion
(b) Art. 30(b), UCMJ
(c) R.C.M. 307(c)(3)
(d) Glasser v. United States, 315 U.S. 60 (1942)

1. "The purposes of a bill of particulars are to inform the accused of the nature of the charge with sufficient precision to enable the accused to prepare for trial, to avoid or minimize the danger of surprise at the time of trial, and to enable the accused to plead the acquittal or conviction in bar of another prosecution for the same offense when the specification itself is too vague and indefinite for such purposes." Reference (a).

2. In the sole specification of charge VII, the Government charged CSSN Copeland with premeditated murder by means of "an act of the the Accused." The defense requests notice the actual "act" by which the govenrment alleges that CSSN Copeland caused CS3 A.R.'s death.

3. This request is made so that the accused may be precisely informed as to the nature of the charges. References (b) and (c) recognize that the pleading procedures currently utilized in the military provide only a succinct recitation of the manner and means alleged to have perpetrated the crime. Accordingly, this specification is inadequate in providing the accused with the essential facts constituting the offenses. Reference (d) recognizes the basic right of the accused to be aware, in some specificity, of the facts the government will attempt to prove.

4. I request a response within 10 days. If no response is received within that period, I will consider it a denial of this request. If you have any questions or concerns, please contact me at amanda.m.serfess.mil@us.navy.mil or 850-452-5572 with questions.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN / E-3 USN	BILL OF PARTICULARS 5 NOV 2025

1. The Government provides the following bill of particulars pursuant to R.C.M. 906(b)(6) with respect to the charges against CSSN Jermiah T. Copeland, USN, as requested by the Defense on 15 October 2025.

2. The purpose of this bill of particulars is to inform the accused of the nature of the charges with sufficient precision to enable the Accused to prepare for trial and to avoid or minimize the danger of surprise at the time of trial.

3. To prove a violation of premeditated murder under Article 118, UCMJ, the Government must show:

a. That a certain named or described person is dead;

b. That the death resulted from the act or omission of the accused;

c. That the killing was unlawful; and

d. That, at the time of the killing, the accused had a premeditated design to kill.

4. The Government is not required to prove a specific act caused CS3 A.R's death. Instead, the Government must only prove that an act of the Accused caused the death.[1] While the Government will argue that position at trial, as provided in our 5 November 2025 404(b) notice, the Government will present evidence that CS3 A.R.'s death was consistent with strangulation by the Accused.

1. See United States v. Elmore, 31 M.J. 678, 683 (N-M. Ct. M. R. 1990) (explaining that when evaluating the sufficiency of a murder conviction that in a case involving no body or only traces of a body, the Government need not prove the act that caused the death but rather need only prove corpus delecti); United States v. Richard, 84 M.J. 586, 591 (C.G.C.C.A. 2022) (articulating the distinguishable notice required in pleading for involuntary manslaughter vice intentional murder).

5. A bill of particulars does not restrict the Government's proof at trial. Pursuant to RCM 906(b)(6), this bill of particulars may be amended at any time, subject to such conditions as justice permits.

CONSENT FOR AUTOPSY

Consented and reviewed by Dr. Nemanja RODIC. Consenter was, Esmeralda CASTLE. The relationship of the individual, providing consent for autopsy, to the decedent is mother. Type of autopsy was complete, including brain.

PRIOR POSTMORTEM PROCEDURES

Following macroscopic examination there was NO EVIDENCE of organ donation. Following macroscopic examination there was EVIDENCE of prior autopsy.

EXTERNAL EXAMINATION

The body was that of a well-developed & well-nourished female. The body weighed about 120 pounds, was 4 feet 5 inches in height, and appeared compatible with the reported age of 21 years [calculated body mass index 20.6(1)]. There were no personal effects identified. The body was cold. The body was in state of late decomposition marked by skin discoloration, desquamation, and skeletonization. Rigor and lividity designation deferred. The scalp hair was black. The eye examination deferred. The nose examination deferred. The lips examination deferred. Some upper and lower teeth were present with good dental hygiene. Dentures were not present. The skin was free of any significant abrasions, bruises, lacerations, lymphadenopathy, or burns. Examination of the neck revealed no evidence of injury. No injury of the ribs or sternum was evident externally; negative for deformity and increased anterior-posterior diameter. The abdomen was grossly unremarkable. The extremities were grossly unremarkable. Leg circumference 10 cm from medial malleolus were, 20 cm on the right, and 20 cm on the left. Negative for pitting edema. The fingernails examination deferred. Negative for palpable lymph nodes. Negative for joint deformity, abnormal mobility, and non-therapeutic punctures or needles track marks. The external genitalia were those of a normal adult female. The posterior torso was without note; negative for sacral decubitus ulcer. Negative for tenting of skin. Negative for sunken eyes.

EVIDENCE OF THERAPY:

ID band with decedent name and case number (T-246-25 T2025-00840) were identified on patient body bag and bilateral lower extremities. Negative for nasogastric tube, central venous line, intravenous line, PEG tube, endotracheal tube, and Foley catheter.

INTERNAL EXAMINATION

BODY CAVITIES:

The body was re-opened by the usual Y-shaped thoraco-abdominal incision and the chest plate was removed. No adhesions nor abnormal collections of fluid were present in any of the body cavities. The subcutaneous fat layer of the abdominal wall was less than 1" thick. There were no abnormalities of the omentum and mesenteries. There was no internal evidence of blunt force or penetrating injury to the thoraco-abdominal region.

CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

The head was normocephalic. External examination revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for dry surface of the galea. The dura showed no lesions. The leptomeninges showed no lesions. The cerebral hemispheres were symmetrical and showed no lesions. The brain base showed no lesions. The cerebellum showed no lesions. The brainstem showed no lesions. The superior spinal cord showed no lesions. The eyes were not submitted for microscopic examination.

NECK:

Examination of the soft tissues of the neck, including strap muscles, thyroid gland and large vessels revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for trauma of the gingiva, lips, or oral mucosa.

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM:

The epicardial fat was mild. The coronary ostia were normally positioned. The foramen ovale was closed. The coronary arteries arose normally, followed the usual distribution and were free of grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis of the right coronary artery, left common/main coronary artery, left anterior descending artery, and circumflex artery. The chambers, valves, leaflets, and chordae tendinae exhibited the usual size-position relationship and were unremarkable. The myocardium was red-brown, firm and unremarkable; the atrial and ventricular septa were intact; negative for infarcts/lesions of the myocardium. The endocardium was smooth and thin; negative endocardial hemorrhages and endocardial discoloration. The aorta was fairly elastic and of even caliber throughout with its major branches distributed normally, followed the usual course and were widely patent. Negative for significant abdominal/thoracic aorta atherosclerosis. Negative for tortuosity or widening of the thoracic segment. Negative for dilation of the lower abdominal segment. Negative for aortic aneurysm. The venae cavae and their major tributaries returned to the heart in the usual distribution and were free of thrombi. No focal endocardial, valvular, and myocardial lesions were seen.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM:

Scant secretions were found in the lower bronchial and upper respiratory passages. The mucosa has pink-tan postmortem discoloration. The upper airway was clear of debris and foreign material; the mucosal surfaces were smooth, yellow-tan and unremarkable. The pleural surfaces were smooth, glistening, well-expanded, and unremarkable bilaterally. Lungs were atelectatic and subcrepitant. The pulmonary parenchyma was red-purple in color, congested, and edematous. There was dependent congestion and postmortem softening. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions/scarring. The pulmonary arteries were normally developed The bronchi were patent with no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The lungs were cut fresh.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM:

The hepatic capsule was smooth, glistening and intact, covering dark red-brown parenchyma with minimal congestion. Serial sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The extrahepatic biliary tree was patent, without evidence of calculi. The gallbladder was present and showed thin wall, velvety mucosa, and no calculi. The portal vein, hepatic arteries, and hepatic veins were patent.

ALIMENTARY TRACT:

The mucosa was pink-tan with normal mucosal folds. No tablets or capsules could be discerned in the stomach or the stomach contents. No residual medications were identified. The external and in situ appearance of the small intestine and colon were grossly and palpably unremarkable. The small intestine and colon were opened along the anti-mesenteric border to reveal soft liquid fecal material in the small bowel and soft semi-formed, thick green stool in the colon. The small bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The vermiform appendix was grossly and palpably unremarkable. The large bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan peri-circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The distal large bowel contents were stool. The superior mesenteric artery was free of grossly identifiable and palpable atherosclerosis. The pancreas occupied a normal position, had a normal pink-tan lobulated parenchyma, and the ducts were patent, not ectatic. No parenchymal calcifications; negative for necrosis or trauma.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM:

The red-brown surface of renal capsules were rough and uneven to touch. The ureters were patent. The renal arteries showed no grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis. The cortices were sharply delineated from the medullary pyramids, which were red-purple to tan and unremarkable. The calyces, pelves and ureters were unremarkable. The urinary bladder contained minimal urine; the mucosa was gray-tan and grossly unremarkable.

LYMPHORETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM:

The spleen had a smooth, intact capsule covering red-purple, moderately firm parenchyma; the lymphoid follicles were unremarkable. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The regional lymph nodes appeared normal. The bone marrow was dark red. The lymph nodes were not enlarged. The thymus was not identified.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM:

The thyroid was symmetrical in appearance and sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The breast tissue was sectioned in the usual manner and contained small amount of white fibrous tissue; negative for significant abnormality.

MUSCULOSKELETAL SYSTEM:

The diaphragm was intact. Skeletal muscles were red-brown and firm. The calvarium was intact. The vertebral columns showed normal curvature. The ribs were negative for fractures. The vertebral bodies were negative for fractures. No bone or joint abnormalities were noted.

AUTOPSY PROCEDURES AND ANCILLARY TESTING

The approach to autopsy dissection was M. Letulle's Technique (en bloc from tongue to rectum). There were not special dissections performed. Tissue retained in stock jars until signout. Additional samples taken as follows, homogenized viscera. Ancillary testing, toxicology.

HISTOLOGIC SECTIONS (2&3):

HISTOLOGIC SECTIONS (2&3)

MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM: Sections showed cardiac parenchyma and stroma free of significant interstitial-type fibrosis and nuclear & cytoplasmic hypertrophy, acute & chronic inflammation, hemorrhage, and necrosis. Sections of coronary arteries were free of significant cholesterol clefts and dystrophic calcifications within narrowed vascular walls. Sections of aorta were free of significant cholesterol clefts deposits. Negative for malignant cells.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM: Bilateral sections of pulmonary parenchyma and stroma notable were free of significant congestion, variably sized & increased alveolar spaces, acute inflammation, chronic inflammation, fibrosis, hemorrhage, and hemosiderin-laden macrophages. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Sections of hilar lymph nodes showed benign primary follicles. Sections of larynx were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM: Sections showed hepatic parenchyma and stroma free of significant acute & chronic inflammation, macrosteatosis, glycogenated nuclei, and fibrosis. Negative for malignant cells.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM: Sections showed bilateral renal parenchyma and stroma notable for medial hypertrophy of medium sized vessels and interstitial/subcapsular lymphocytic inflammation, but free of significant basement membrane thickening, hyaline change, thyroidization, and interstitial fibrosis. Section of urinary bladder were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Sections of genitourinary tract were histologically unremarkable. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Negative for malignant cells.

ALIMENTARY TRACT: Sections showed histologically unremarkable pancreatobilliary and tubular gastrointestinal tract. Negative for malignant cells.

RETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma, free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

INTEGUMENTARY SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for malignant cells.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for adrenal hemorrhage. Negative for malignant cells.

MEDICAL RECORDS REVIEW

Accompanying medical information collected from pre-autopsy verbal report by _Esmeralda CASTLE, the mother of the decedent, was notable for following medical findings:

Past Medical History: negative for suicidal attempts; equivocal for prior past suicidal ideation (10/2024);

Surgical Procedures: none;

Medical Laboratory: antemortem COVID-19 negative test.

Additional Notes: Clinical symptoms/signs, not in acute distress (5/28/2025-5/29/2025), asymptomatic (interim). The decedent did not receive blood transfusions or lived in Europe prior to death. The decedent was vaccinated against COVID-19 prior to death. The decedent had been consuming alcoholic beverages (wine and liquor)/tobacco (vaped) prior to death. The decedent had not been consuming illegal habit-forming drugs prior to death. The decedent did not have history of cancer prior to death. External and macroscopic images taken for posterity. Examination limited by autolysis and tissue preservation. Preliminary diagnosis called to and confirmed by Esmeralda CASTLE on 7/3/2025 at 1615. See accompanying Axis 3327991 report. Final diagnosis called to and confirmed by family friend on 8/1/2025 at 1615.

OPINION:

Based collectively on my autopsy findings herein as well as my review of the accompanying submitted medical information, in the case of this 21-year-old female, A[redacted] [redacted] R[redacted], the manner of death is deferred (1,4-6,&9). I reserve the right to amend my opinion(s) upon the receipt of additional material (7).

Comment: "The following statement applies to tests, i.e. to dye(s), chemical solution stains, and Class I IHC reagents and kits. Dye(s), chemical solution stains are defined in the Code of Federal Regulations as "mixtures of synthetic or natural dyes or nondye chemicals in solutions used in staining cells and tissues for diagnostic histopathology, cytopathology, or hematology" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1850). This definition encompasses many of the common materials found in a conventional histopathology laboratory, such as routine hematoxylin and eosin stains, as well as special stains like trichrome, iron, and Grocott-Gömöri's methenamine silver, among others, and are considered Class I devices subject to general controls. Class I IHC reagents and kits are defined as those that "provide the pathologist with adjunctive diagnostic information that may be incorporated into the pathologist's report, but that is not ordinarily reported to the clinician as an independent finding," noting that "these IHC's are used after the primary diagnosis of tumor (neoplasm) has been made by conventional histopathology using nonimmunologic histochemical stains, such as hematoxylin and eosin" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). The 1998 final rule further describes these as "adjunctive tests [to conventional histopathologic diagnostic examination] and presenting a low risk to public health."37 An example of a Class I IHC specifically mentioned in the IHC reagents and kit regulation is keratin (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). Many other Class I IHC reagents and kits can be found by searching for the "NJT" product code on the FDA establishment registration and device listing database.47 These IVDs are exempt from premarket notification/510(k) submission, although they are still subject to FDA general controls and QS/CGMP requirements. Most IHC stains used by anatomic pathologists are considered diagnostic markers and therefore are categorized as Class I by the FDA. The tests herein have not been cleared or approved for the specific use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. FDA does not require this test to go through premarket FDA review. These tests are used for clinical purposes. It should not be regarded as investigational or for research. This laboratory is certified under the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendments 1988 (CLIA) as qualified to perform high complexity clinical laboratory testing. All stains and tests are performed with general controls, i.e. positive and negative control reactions as necessary, and all controls show appropriate reactivity. However, stains and tests have not been validated on decalcified tissues. Results should be interpreted with caution given the likelihood of false negativity on decalcified specimens. Certain tests utilize Class I Analyte-Specific Reagents (ASR); these tests are developed, and their performance characteristics determined by this laboratory. ASRs used in this laboratory have been established and verified for accuracy and precision.(8)"

NAVY-MARINE CORPS TRIAL JUDICIARY
CENTRAL JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

UNITED STATES v. COPELAND, JERMIAH CSSN/ E-3 U.S. NAVY	DEFENSE MOTION TO SUPPRESS (THE 3 JUNE 2025 SEARCH OF CSSN COPELAND'S BARRACKS ROOM) 26 November 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution, Military Rule of Evidence (M.R.E.) 311, and Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 905(b)(3), the defense respectfully moves this Court to suppress all evidence obtained and derived from the unlawful search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room – namely the blood found in his room and closet.

SUMMARY

On 3 June 2025, NCIS searched CSSN Copeland's room pursuant to a Command Authorized Search and Seizure (CASS). This CASS stated that it permitted the search of CSSN Copeland's room for evidence of a violation of Article 86 (Absence without leave). Specifically, the CASS purported to authorize the search of CSSN Copeland's room for items containing DNA, blood, or bodily fluids, or other evidence, instrumentalities, or fruits of the alleged offense of absence without leave. This CASS was invalid as it was overly broad without particularity. If there was any particularity, the blood on the floor was outside the scope of the CASS, and there was no probable cause to believe that CSSN Copeland was absent without leave or that there would be any evidence of that crime in his room or closet. Therefore, this court should suppress all evidence derived from the 3 June 2025 search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room.

BURDEN

"[T]he prosecution has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the evidence was not obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure" or that some valid exception applies.[1]

[1] MIL. R. EVID. 311(d)(5)(A).

FACTS

1. In the early morning hours of 29 May 2025, CS3 A.R. called her ex-boyfriend, ET3 Rich. She was upset and wanted to be picked up. She did not mention CSSN Copeland, being in danger, or concern for her safety. (Enclosure (A): Results of Initial Contact with ET3 Rich of 31 May 25 [138-139]).

2. On 29 May 2025, CSSN Copeland did not go to work. Therefore, at around 0930 on 29 May 2025, FCC Parker, his LCPO, knocked on CSSN Copeland's barracks room door. CSSN Copeland was in his room. He answered the door. CS3 A.R. was in CSSN Copeland's room, in his bed. CS3 A.R. was alive. She waved to FCC Parker, who was also her LCPO. CS3 A.R. did not go to work that day because it was her day off. (Enclosure (B): Results of Initial Contact with FCC Parker of 1 Jun 25 [163]; Enclosure (C) Text message from FCC Parker to LSC Janson of 29 May 25 [279]).

3. CSSN Copeland was marked unauthorized absent (UA) for 29-May to 1 June 2025. CS3 A.R. did not go to work 30 May to 1 June 2025 although she was scheduled to do so.

4. On 1 June 2025, NCIS interviewed CS3 A.R.'s mother and she told NCIS that her daughter has attempted suicide and suffers from mental illnesses that require medication. (Enclosure (D): Results of Contact with Esmeralda Castle of 1 Jun 25 [168-169]).

5. On 1 June 2025, NCIS interviewed CSSN Copeland. (Enclosure (E): Results of Interview of CSSN Copeland of 1 Jun 25).

6. On 3 June 2025, CSSN Copeland reported to work and he was interrogated by NCIS. (Enclosure (F): Results of Interview of CSSN Copeland of 3 Jun 25).

7. On 3 June 2025, the Commanding Officer, Naval Station Norfolk (NSN), signed a CASS for Room 335B of the X-2 Barracks onboard NSN. The CASS was signed in the case of United States v. CSSN A[] Copeland. (Enclosure (G): Results of Scene Examination of 3 June 25 at 8).

8. The CASS permitted the seizure of the items in attachment B, which included bed linens, sheets, towels, blanket, and pillows, used condoms, clothing belonging to a female, items containing or could reasonably contain DNA or bodily fluid, and "other evidence, instrumentalities or fruits of the alleged offense." (Id. at 14). The purpose of the CASS was to look for evidence of a violation of Article 86 (Absence without leave). (Id. at 1). The affidavit was signed in the case of the United States v. CSSN A.R. (Id. at 9).

9. On 3 June 2025, NCIS executed a search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room – they incorrectly believed that they were permitted to search CSSN Copeland's barracks room in an effort to locate anything belonging to CS3 A.R. (Id. at 1).

10. At 2004, NCIS arrived with several special agents along with dogs who were trained to find electronic storage and cadavers. (Id.). NCIS used these dogs to search CSSN Copeland's room. (Id. at 3).

11. Bluestar was also used in support of the search of CSSN Copeland's room. (Id.)

12. CSSN Copeland's closet was locked with a padlock which had to be cut in order for NCIS to search it. (Enclosure (H): Photograph of CSSN Copeland's closet door).

13. On 22 August 2025, the government preferred charges in this case.

LAW

The Fourth Amendment's Purpose

14. The Fourth Amendment provides: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."[2] The "purpose of the Fourth Amendment was to prevent the use of 'governmental force' to search a man's house, his person, his papers or his effects and to prevent their seizure against his will."[3] The Fourth Amendment was "the founding generation's response to the reviled 'general warrants' of the colonial era, which allowed British officers to rummage through homes in an unrestrained search for evidence of criminal activity."[4]

15. The military rules of evidence have codified the bulk of the Fourth Amendment precedent in M.R.E. 311, 314, and 315. Under M.R.E. 311, absent certain exceptions, "evidence obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure made by a person acting in a government capacity is inadmissible against the accused."[5] Under M.R.E. 315, probable cause is required for "evidence obtained from reasonable searches conducted pursuant to a search warrant or search authorization.[6] Under M.R.E. 314, several types of searches which do not require probable cause are outlined, including consent searches.[7]

Reasonable Expectation of Privacy

16. The Fourth Amendment 'protects people, not places,"[8] and this protection includes people's expectations of privacy that "society is prepared to recognize as reasonable."[9]

17. The Supreme Court held that government employees had a limited privacy interest in the workplace.[10] However, a plurality recognized that the scope of this expectation of privacy depended in part on the demands of the workplace and its openness to employees and the public.[11] Normally a person does not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in government property that is not issued for personal use.[12]

18. There is a rebuttable presumption of no expectation of privacy in government property not issued for personal use.[13]Wall and floor lockers are normally issued for personal use and have a rebuttable presumption of an expectation of privacy.[14]However, whether or not government property was issued for personal use "depends on the facts and circumstances at the time of the search."[15]

Probable cause determination

19. Where an expectation of privacy exists the Fourth Amendment requires a warrant or, in the military, a search authorization.[16] An authorizing Commander (in place of an unbiased magistrate) must be able to determine from the face of the search authorization application and attached affidavits or relied upon oaths, that there is a "fair probability that … evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place."[17] To be constitutionally valid, a search authorization can only be issued "when, based on the totality of the circumstances, a common-sense judgment would lead to the conclusion that there is a fair probability that evidence of a crime will be found at the identified location."[18] Normally searches pursuant to prior authorization are given deference, but upon review of a Commander's search authorization, a military judge "may conclude that the commander's probable cause determination "reflected an improper analysis of the totality of the circumstances."[19]

20. A commander must make an independent determination of probable cause and "his action cannot be a mere ratification of the bare conclusions of others."[20] Bare conclusions include conclusory allegations and factually unsupported statements by the affiant that the search is likely to yield evidence or fruits of crime.[21] Probable cause for searching a particular place exists in an affidavit only when the affidavit sets forth facts constituting a substantial basis for finding a fair probability that first, a crime has been committed, and second, the particular place may contain the fruits, instrumentalities or evidence of the crime committed.[22]

21. Probable cause requires a sufficient nexus between the alleged crime and the item to be seized.[23] The question of nexus focuses on whether there was a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place.[24]

22. The search authority must have "a substantial basis for concluding probable cause exist[s]."[25] "A substantial basis exists 'when, based on the totality of the circumstances, a common-sense judgment would lead to the conclusion that there is a fair probability that evidence of a crime will be found at the identified location."[26] To establish probable cause, a sufficient nexus must be shown to exist between the alleged criminal activity, the things to be seized, and the place to be searched.[27] Such a nexus "may be inferred from the facts and circumstances of a particular case, including the type of crime, the nature of the items sought, and reasonable inferences about where evidence is likely to be kept."[28] In evaluating the issuing search authority's probable cause finding, the court must examine: 1) the facts known to the authority when he issued the warrant and 2) the manner in which he came to know these facts.[29]

Particularity Requirement: General Searches Prohibited

23. When warrants are issued upon probable cause, the Fourth Amendment, by its terms, requires particularity in the warrant—not in the supporting documents.[30] The "manifest purpose of [the] particularity requirement was to prevent general searches."[31] "The Fourth Amendment requires that a search warrant describe the things to be seized with sufficient particularity to prevent a general exploratory rummaging in a person's belongings."[32]

Plain View

24. In order for the plan view exception to apply: (1) the officer must not violate the Fourth Amendment in arriving at the spot from which the incriminating materials can be plainly viewed; (2) the incriminating character of the materials must be immediately apparent; and (3) the officer must have lawful access to the object itself.[33]

Scope

25. "The scope of a lawful search is 'defined by the object of the search and the places in which there is probable cause to believe that it may be found. Just as probable cause to believe that a stolen lawnmower may be found in a garage will not support a warrant to search an upstairs bedroom, probable cause to believe that undocumented aliens are being transported in a van will not justify a warrantless search of a suitcase.'"[34]

Exclusionary Rule as the Remedy for Unlawful Searches and Seizures

26. M.R.E. 311 codifies the Fourth Amendment's exclusionary rule as follows: Evidence obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure made by a person acting in a governmental capacity is inadmissible against the accused if (1) the accused makes a timely motion to suppress or an objection to the evidence under this rule; (2) the accused had a reasonable expectation of privacy in the person, place, or property searched; [. . .] and (3) exclusion of the evidence results in appreciable deterrence of future unlawful searches or seizures and the benefits of such deterrence outweigh the costs to the justice system.[35]

Inevitable Discovery

27. M.R.E. 311 codifies the inevitable discovery exception to the exclusionary rule as follows: "Evidence that was obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure may be used when the evidence would have been obtained even if such unlawful search or seizure had not been made."[36] The inevitable discovery doctrine does not apply unless the government establishes by a preponderance of the evidence "that when the illegality occurred, the government agents possessed, or were actively pursuing, evidence or leads that would have inevitably led to the discovery of the evidence in a lawful manner."[37]

Fruit of the Poisonous Tree Doctrine

28. "Evidence derivative of an unlawful search, seizure, or interrogation is commonly referred to as the 'fruit of the poisonous tree' and is generally not admissible at trial."[38]

ARGUMENT

29. The 3 June 2025 search of CSSN Copeland's X-2 barracks room violated his rights under the Fourth Amendment and the Military Rules of Evidence.

All evidence obtained and derived from the 3 June 2025 search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room should be suppressed because the search violated CSSN Copeland's rights under the Fourth Amendment and the Military Rules of Evidence and the exclusionary rule is necessary to deter the unreasonable investigative practices used in this case.

This search should be suppressed because it violated CSSN Copeland's rights under the Fourth Amendment and the Military Rules of Evidence for at least two reasons: (1) the CASS was invalid, (2) the blood found on the floor of his room and closet were found outside the scope of the CASS, and (3) the CASS was not supported by probable cause.

30. The CASS was invalid.

The 3 June CASS lacked even nominal attempts at particularity and, therefore, was an unconstitutional general search limitless in scope by any measure. The Supreme Court has made clear that particularity is required on the face of the warrant, or the warrant must properly incorporate the supporting documents.[39] Here, the CASS permits the search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room for the items contained in attachment B. However, attachment B allows the search of "items containing or could contain [DNA], blood or other bodily fluids and trace biological evidence" and "[o]ther evidence, instrumentalities or fruits of the alleged offense." The alleged offense is a violation of Article 86 (absence without leave). Items that could contain DNA? That essentially turns this into a limitless search of anything and everything. This is clear as NCIS believed, despite these "limits" that they were searching CSSN Copeland's room "for anything belonging to CS3 A.R." despite there being no mention of CS3 A.R. in the items to be seized listed in attachment B.[40]

This CASS fails CAAF's requirement that there be, at least, some affirmative limitation of the scope of a search to limit the search to evidence of a specific federal crime or specific types of material[41]—no such limits (or even a facial reference to such limits) are contained in this CASS. Therefore, the CASS is facially and constitutionally deficient.[42]

31. If this Court finds that there were proper limits in the CASS, then the blood found in CSSN Copeland's room was found outside of the scope of the CASS.

The NCIS agents in this case exceeded that scope on 3 June 2025 when they searched CSSN Copeland's floor, including the closet floor, for blood. NCIS used dogs and Bluestar reagent,[43] neither of which was authorized by the 3 June 2025 CASS. There may have been a good faith basis to seize the bedding and towels, but the use of blacklights and swabbing the floor for blood was outside the scope of any limits of the CASS.

32. There was no probable cause to search CSSN Copeland's room for evidence of a violation of Article 86 and the items listed in Attachment B were not evidence of a violation of Article 86 (absence without leave).

The government, which has the burden for this motion, cannot prove that the 3 June 2025 CASS was supported by probable cause to search for blood on the floor of CSSN Copeland's room and closet. First, at the time the CASS was signed, CSSN Copeland was not absent without leave and no one suspected him of being absent. He was in NCIS custody. Second, none of the items sought in Attachment B of the CASS were evidence or instrumentalities of absence without leave. For instance, there is no correlation between a "used condom" and being absent without leave. Third, and more importantly, there was no probable cause to believe blood would be in CSSN Copeland's room or how that would be evidence of absence without leave. The last time there was evidence that CS3 A.R. was in CSSN Copeland's room, she was alive and there was no reason to believe that she was bleeding in his room. The facts in the affidavit to support the CASS support one thing – CS3 A.R. was at one time in CSSN Copeland's room. That is not probable cause to believe that a crime was committed or that there was evidence of a crime in the room – certainly not absence without leave when the Commanding Officer and NCIS knew precisely where CSSN Copeland was located.

33. All evidence obtained and derived from NCIS's unlawful searches of CSSN Copeland's property should be suppressed because the exclusionary rule is necessary to deter the unreasonable investigative practices used in this case.

By its terms, M.R.E. 311(a)'s exclusionary rule is fundamentally a balancing test between the benefits of deterring Fourth Amendment violations and the costs to the justice system associated with the suppression of evidence. In this case, the benefits of deterring the violations of CSSN Copeland's Fourth Amendment rights far outweigh the costs to the justice system. Suppression of the blood found in CSSN Copeland's room is minor, but the deterrence of practices such as this – looking for evidence of a crime the accused did not commit - is high and to the benefit of society.

34. The Government cannot prove that the unlawfully obtained property would have been inevitably discovered in a lawful manner.[44]

RELIEF REQUESTED

Pursuant to the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution, Military Rule of Evidence (M.R.E.) 311, and Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 905(b)(3), the defense respectfully moves this Court to suppress all evidence obtained and derived from the unlawful search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room – namely the blood found in his room and closet.

RESULTS OF INITIAL CONTACT WITH COMMAND, MTAC, AND ET3 DANIEL RICH, USN ON 31MAY25

1. On 31MAY25, Reporting Agent (RA) received a duty notification at 1637 hours, from Special Agent Jordan KENNEDY, in reference to missing persons concerns involving two sailors assigned to USS James E. Williams (DDG 95). SA KENNEDY reported receiving information from Norfolk Police Department (NPD) that ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95 was attempting to file a missing person's report for CSSN A[redacted] R[redacted] (V/[redacted], USN, DDG 95. SA KENNEDY informed RA that ET3 RICH stated V/RESENDIZ was last seen with CSSN Jerimiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95. Additionally, SA KENNEDY stated he had already spoken with LTJG David DEZMURE, USN, Legal Officer, DDG-95, who confirmed awareness of two sailors missing after not reporting for duty. SA KENNEDY further advised his attempts were unsuccessful to contact both V/R[redacted] and S/COPELAND. At 1635 hours, RA informed the Duty Supervisor, Special Agent (SSA) Matthew MILLER, with the information received from SA KENNEDY.

2. At approximately 1728 hours, RA made contact with the Multi Threat Assessment Center (MTAC) to request assistance in pinging V/[redacted]'s cellphone. RA spoke with Janice BAILEY, MTAC, who noted that without V/[redacted] experiencing immediate suicidal ideations or in harm, she would not be able to conduct a ping for S/[redacted]s cellphone. RA re-connected with LTJG DEMAZURE via telephone [redacted] PII), who reiterated his awareness of V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND not showing up for duty. LTJG DEMAZURE stated that V/R[redacted] last reported on 28MAY25. He also confirmed contact was made with S/COPELAND on 29MAY25. S/COPELAND was instructed to report to duty, but S/COPELAND never reported to work. LTJG DEZMURE acknowledged about being informed about ET3 RICH filing the missing person's report for V/R[redacted]. LTLG DEMAZURE did not indicate command had any safety concerns surrounding V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND.

3. ON 31MAY25, RA made contact with ET3 RICH via telephone [redacted] PII) in reference to the captioned investigation. ET3 RICH stated he last communicated with V/[redacted] around 0230 hours, on 29MAY25. ET3 RICH stated V/[redacted] was crying and made a comment about needing his help. ET3 RICH attempted to track V/[redacted] cellphone location which led him to the Willis Hall, X2 Barracks, located on Norfolk Naval Station (NOB). ET3 RICH advised he was able to track V/[redacted] location until approximately 0430 hours, at which time he stated V/[redacted]s phone powered down. ET3 RICH advised after speaking with V/[redacted]s friends (NFI), the last person V/[redacted] was in contact with was S/COPELAND on 29MAY25. ET3 RICH advised he requested a welfare check through NOB Police, who accessed V/R[redacted] barracks room and found her room untouched and empty. ET3 RICH also tried to contact V/R[redacted] mother, who confirmed she had not heard from V/[redacted] since 28MAY25.

4. On 01JUN25, RA followed back up with LTJG DEMAZURE to determine if any updates were available. LTJG DEMAZURE confirmed there were no new updates regarding V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND. RA contacted S/COPELAND's mother, Rochell BROWN, CIV via telephone [redacted PII]. BROWN confirmed she had not had any contact with S/COPELAND since 28MAY25. BROWN expressed significant concern over the lack of communication with her son and noted there was no bank account activity for S/COPELAND since 28MAY25. On 01Jun25, RA received notification from LTJG DEMAZURE vis telephone, at approximately 1341 hours, advising that S/COPELAND was located in his barracks room on NOB after receiving a call from BROWN requesting to a welfare check be conducted. RA contacted LTJG DEMAZURE at approximately 1346 hours, inquiring on updated information for V/[redacted] LTJG DEZMURE stated there were no updates on making contact with V/[redacted]

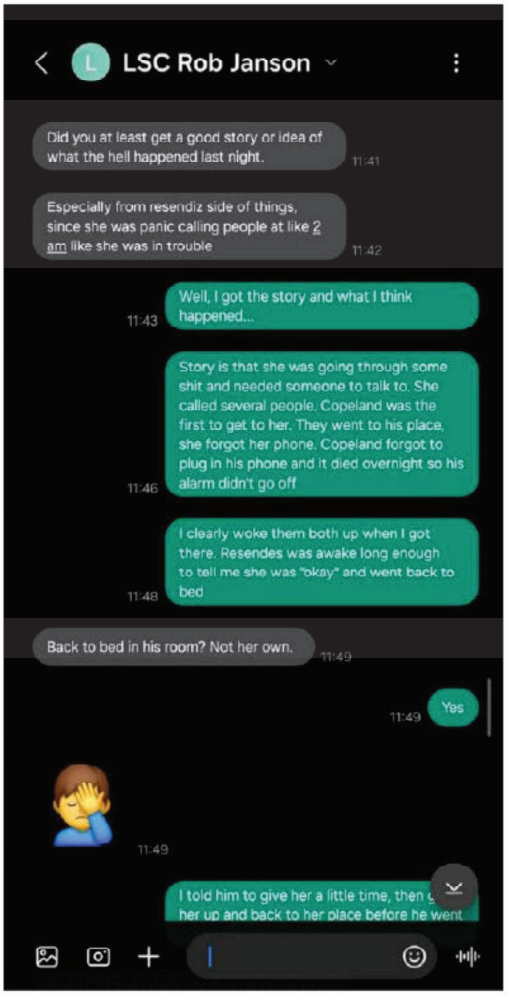
RESULTS OF INITIAL CONTACT WITH FCC BRAD PARKER, USN

1. On 01un25, Reporting Agent (RA) made contact with FCC Brad PARKER, USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95), to glean information pertaining to both CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95 and CSSN A[redacted]s (V/[redacted], USN, DDG 95 Unauthorized Absence (UA) status. As background, V/[redacted], USN, DDG 95 and S/COPELAND, were placed into an UA status subsequent to 29May25, after failing to report to work. On 01Jun25, after speaking with S/COPELAND's mother, Rochell BROWN, CIV, NCIS and BROWN contacted Naval Station Norfolk (NOB) Base Police to conduct a follow-up health and welfare check on both S/COPELAND and V/[redacted]. The Naval Station Norfolk Watch Commander advised NOB Security Forces located S/COPELAND in his barracks rooms on NOB, Willis Manor, Room 335. NCIS was advised that Security Forces received no answer at V/[redacted]s door when they knocked on her barracks room located on NOB, Miller Hall, Room 1083.

2. FCC PARKER was identified as being V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND's supervisor on DDG 95 and making positive contact with both S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] on Thursday, 29May25 at approximately 0900 hours.



3. FCC PARKER recalled that on 29May25, he went to S/COPELAND's barracks room, Naval Station Norfolk, Willis Manor, and woke him up because he did not show for work in the morning. FCC PARKER recalled it was obvious he had woke S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] up due to their grogginess. FCC PARKER stated he physically observed V/[redacted] in S/COPELAND's barracks, she acknowledged his presence, rolled over, and appeared to go back to sleep. FCC PARKER said he instructed S/COPELAND to report to work after he tended to V/[redacted] and took her home. FCC PARKER said S/COPELAND told him V/[redacted] was having some personal issues and came to his barracks room Wednesday, 28May25 to discuss.

4. FCC PARKER said S/COPELAND was supposed to only work Thursday and have the weekend off.

RESULTS OF CONTACT WITH ESMERALDA CASTLE, CIV

1. On 01JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) made initial contact with Esmeralda CASTLE, CIV, mother of CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted] USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) in regard to her daughter's missing status.

2. This contact was conducted via cellphone and not recorded.

3. RA attempted to contact CASTLE two times via phone call and followed up with a text message, with no response. After speaking with ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG-95 and learning he was in contact with CASTLE, RA instructed ET3 RICH to ask CASTLE to call RA.

4. RA asked CASTLE when the last time she spoke with V/[redacted] and CASTLE stated she had not spoken with V/[redacted] in approximately a week, however, V/[redacted] did attempt a Facetime call Wednesday 28MAY25, but CASTLE did not [redacted] CASTLE stated V/[redacted] most likely called her younger sister after she did not answer, but CASTLE was not certain. RA gathered contact information for the 3 siblings of V/[redacted] to contact.

5. RA asked CASTLE if she had access to V/[redacted] banking records, which CASTLE stated she did not.

6. RA asked CASTLE if she would be concerned about V/[redacted] mental health or concerned V/[redacted] may commit suicide, which CASTLE stated she did not think V/[redacted] would have committed suicide. However, CASTLE did disclose V/[redacted] had gone into mental health treatment sometime in the last year for inpatient treatment. RA followed up asking if CASTLE knew the reasoning for the inpatient treatment, which CASTLE responded, V/[redacted] was under a lot of pressure at work due to them being short staffed and V/[redacted] was also having problems with sexual harassment onboard DDG-95. RA followed up asking if CASTLE knew who was sexually harassing V/[redacted] which CASTLE stated an older white male.

7. RA asked CASTLE what, if anything had she been told about V/[redacted] missing. CASTLE stated she had been contacted by ET3 RICH, and he was concerned about V/[redacted] missing and to "not trust the command." RA asked CASTLE to explain further about not trusting the command. CASTLE stated ET3 RICH said they had lied to CASTLE and V/[redacted] was not found in a room, and she had not returned to work on Friday. CASTLE continued saying she called the Quarterdeck of DDG-95 and spoke to a Chief PARKER, who was identified as FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG-95. CASTLE stated FCC PARKER told

RESULTS OF INITIAL INTERVIEW OF CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN

1. On 01Jun25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Jessica GOKEY interviewed CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95) regarding his knowledge of the whereabouts of V/[redacted] The interview took place in the lounge area on third floor of building X2, Willis Manor, located on Naval Station Norfolk (NOB), and was not recorded.

2. As background, V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND were placed into a Unauthorized Absence (UA) status subsequent to 29May25, after failing to report to work. On 01Jun25, after speaking with S/COPELAND's mother, NCIS and S/COPELAND's mother contacted Naval Station Norfolk (NOB) Base Police to conduct a follow-up health and welfare check on both S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] The Naval Station Norfolk Watch Commander advised NOB Security [redacted] located S/COPELAND in his barracks rooms in Willis Manor, Room 335. NCIS was advised that Security Forces received no answer at V/[redacted] door when they knocked on her barracks room located on NOB, Miller Hall, Room 1083.

3. During his interview, S/COPELAND described his relationship with V/[redacted] as co-workers. S/COPELAND stated he texted with V/[redacted] on Wednesday, 28May25 to discuss recipes and ingredients for tacos. S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] came over to his barracks room, made tacos and they both consumed alcohol. S/COPELAND explained V/[redacted] gradually became more upset as the night progressed and they spoke about her current and past romantic relationships. S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] spoke on the phone to two (2) ex-boyfriends, both of which were confrontational calls. One call was with an ex-boyfriend he still believed was located in Texas (NFI) and the other call was with HT3 Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG 95.

4. S/COPELAND explained V/[redacted] and HT3 GILLESPIE argued over returning a motorcycle helmet and that HT3 GILLESPIE wanted it back. S/COPELAND said V/[redacted] explained her relationship with HT3 GILLESPIE was toxic and described her most recent ex-boyfriend, ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95, as at first being a sweetheart and then he wasn't. S/COPELAND said ET3 RICH and HT3 GILLESPIE do not get along, that they have issues with each other, and opined it was due to their relationships with V/[redacted] S/COPELAND said HT3 GILLESPIE has come to the galley on the ship a lot, which sometimes caused issues. S/COPELAND said he did not know of any instances of HT3 GILLESPIE being violent toward V/[redacted] and that HT3 GILLESPIE was more of a topic of conversation than ET3 RICH was during their evening together.

S/COPELAND, JERMIAH TAYLOR/SN USN
M/B/NEE3/[redacted] PII

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Bernadette DUFFY conducted an interview of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) in regard to the Unauthorized Absence of CSSN A[redacted] R[redacted] (V/R[redacted]), USN, DDG-95 and himself.

2. This interview was audio and video recorded utilizing Case Cracker. A copy of the recording was subsequently saved to an optical disc and maintained with the case file. This report should not be treated as a verbatim or comprehensive representation of the interview; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. Prior to being interviewed, S/COPELAND was advised of his Article 31(b) Rights by use of Military Suspect's Acknowledgement and Waiver of Rights form for an alleged violation of Article 86 (Absence without Leave) and Article 107 (False Official Statements). S/COPELAND, with full understanding of his rights, elected to waive his right to remain silent; Enclosure (B) pertains.

4. S/COPELAND was asked to recall the events on the night of 28JUN25 and what transpired the following days. S/COPELAND stated he and V/R[redacted] were talking about food and making tacos. S/COPELAND continued saying, V/R[redacted] was going to come over to his barracks, located at Building X-2, Willis Manor, Room 335, to make salsa and eat dinner. S/COPELAND explained he went to the Food Lion and bought the ingredients to make tacos and then he went back to X-2. S/COPELAND stated he then went and picked V/R[redacted] up from her barracks, Miller Hall, and brought her back to his room. COPELAND explained later he utilized his roommates vehicle, later identified as a belonging to AR John CALISSE, USN, VAW-124 and being a white Jeep Compass, to pick up V/R[redacted] S/COPELAND stated V/R[redacted] was wearing a black shirt, black pants, slip on Uggs, a bracelet, and a hair clip. S/COPELAND stated V/R[redacted] was also carrying her purple backpack. S/COPELAND stated he could not recall what time he picked V/R[redacted] up but after returning to the room they began to make tacos.

5. S/COPELAND stated after eating, him and V/R[redacted] started listening to music and started talking. S/COPELAND explained V/R[redacted] began talking about HT3 Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG-95, and how she saw him with another girl on his motorcycle and how it had really upset V/R[redacted] S/COPELAND stated V/R[redacted] then text HT3 GILLESPIE "Fuck you" and then called an ex-boyfriend (NFI) from Texas. S/COPELAND explained he was sitting on the couch, and she was sitting on floor talking to the ex-boyfriend. S/COPELAND continued explaining how when V/[redacted] ended the phone call with the ex-boyfriend, she started to call other people (NFI) and talk about how "GILLESPIE's not shit."

6. S/COPELAND explained he did not know much about the relationship between HT3 GILLESPIE and V/[redacted] but S/COPELAND did recall V/[redacted] was mad about the amount of money she would spend on HT3 GILLESPIE. S/COPELAND provided the example of HT3 GILLESPIE needed a lawyer and V/[redacted] gave him $500.00 to hire one even though HT3 GILLESPIE could have received a public defender. S/COPELAND did not believe HT3 GILLESPIE and V/[redacted] were in any physical altercations or abusive relationship. S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] went on a "rampage" and was becoming "agitated." S/COPELAND stated after completing the phone calls V/[redacted] was becoming "emotional" and "crying."

7. S/COPELAND stated one of the roommates, "the Mexican" later identified as PSSN Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, USN, Airborne Command and Control Squadron 124 (VAW-124), walked into the common area of the room and asked if V/[redacted] was okay. S/COPELAND stated he told PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ, V/[redacted] was fine and PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ proceeded to his room. S/COPELAND stated the night ended and they both went to sleep together in S/COPELAND's bed. S/COPELAND stated they did not have sexual intercourse. After going to sleep, S/COPELAND was awoken by FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG-95, knocking on the door of his bedroom. S/COPELAND said he could not remember what time it was but knew the sun was up. S/COPELAND stated FCC PARKER asked if the person in his bed was V/[redacted] which S/COPELAND replied it was V/[redacted] S/COPELAND explained FCC PARKER told him to get to work and asked if he had a ride, which S/COPELAND stated he told FCC PARKER one of his roommates could give him a ride to work. S/COPELAND admitted though he did not go to work due to "one of his roommates" not coming home. S/COPELAND further explained, him being UA was a big misunderstanding because he had the weekend off and he did not realize if you are marked UA for one day, you are marked UA for the days you remain away from work.

8. S/COPELAND stated he was marked UA Thursday, 29JUN25 until Sunday, 01MAY25 when base security located him within his barracks room. When asked his whereabouts for Friday and Saturday, S/COPELAND responded, he stayed in the barracks both days but would move from lounge to lounge. S/COPELAND stated he mostly hung out in the 5th floor lounge and Ms. Mary (NFI) could vouch for his whereabouts during the time frame.

9. RA asked S/COPELAND about the morning of 29JUN25 and what had transpired after FCC PARKER left the room. S/COPELAND recalled him and V/[redacted] woke up and cleaned the kitchen and V/[redacted] left in an Uber, later clarified to be a Z-Trip.

10. RA asked S/COPELAND if he would sign a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for his cellphone, S/COPELAND agreed to signing a PASS and provided his passcode, [redacted]. Prior to signing the PASS, S/COPELAND requested to call his mother, and would not sign the PASS; Enclosure (C) pertains. PA asked S/COPELAND if he would be fine with answering further questions and call his mother later, S/COPELAND agreed.

11. RA had previously informed S/COPELAND NCIS was conducting a Command Authorized Search and Seizure (CASS) in his barracks room and the common area and began to ask questions about S/COPELAND's barracks room and his electronics. S/COPELAND stated he had an iPhone15 in his room and a PlayStation 5 in the common room.

12. RA inquired about V/[redacted] electronics to include her iPhone. S/COPELAND stated the only electronic V/[redacted] had with her was her iPhone15. S/COPELAND confirmed the Apple iWatch was also his, which was located in his barracks room.

13. RA asked S/COPELAND if the statement he gave was true and accurate to the best of his knowledge, which S/COPELAND stated this statement was the correct statement. RA then confronted S/COPELAND on the discretions between his previous statement, given on 01JUN25 and the statement he gave during this interview.

14. RA asked S/COPELAND about him and V/[redacted] being naked on the floor by the couch, S/COPELAND denied being on the floor naked with V/[redacted] S/COPELAND stated he and V/[redacted] fell asleep in his bed, clothed.

15. RA asked S/COPELAND about him changing his story about dropping V/[redacted] off at her barracks, to V/[redacted] leaving on her own after cleaning, to which S/COPELAND stated he did not remember saying he had previously dropped V/[redacted] off at her barracks. RA asked S/COPELAND about how he knew V/[redacted] was taking a Z-Trip from his barracks versus walking from his barracks, and S/COPELAND stated he just assumed V/[redacted] had taken a Z-Trip back to her barracks.

16. RA inquired about S/COPELAND telling FCC PARKER he would wait for his roommate to get home to take S/COPELAND to work. RA asked about S/COPELAND's roommate's work schedule and why he would tell FCC PARKER the roommate would take him to work knowing his roommate does not get home until approximately 1600-1700. S/COPELAND stated he would not ask anyone else to take him to work. S/COPELAND stated he did not know when his roommate would be home due to a squadron's working hours being different from the ships work schedule.

17. PA conducted another PASS for a backpack, barracks room, and

1. BACKGROUND: On 31May25, NCIS was contacted by Norfolk Police Department (NPD) in reference to a missing person report. NPD relayed that ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95), was attempting to make a missing person report regarding CSSN A[redacted] R[redacted] (V[redacted] USN, DDG 95. NCIS subsequently contacted DDG 95 Command, and they advised V/[redacted] and CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, were in a status of Unauthorized Absence (UA) beginning on Thursday, 29May25. DDG 95 Command advised they believed V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND were involved romantically, but did not know to what extent. On 01Jun25, NCIS made contact with Naval Station Norfolk Base Police to conduct a welfare check on S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] rooms. Base Police stated they found S/COPELAND in his barracks room; however, they received no answer at V/[redacted] door when they knocked. NCIS responded to Naval Station Norfolk and was able to gain entry to V/[redacted] barracks room, in which V/[redacted] was not located. Subsequently, NCIS' Multi-Threat Action Center (MTAC) initiated cell phone pings on V/[redacted] mobile phone, which yielded no location data due to the phone possibly being powered off. NCIS conducted an interview of S/COPELAND who stated V/[redacted] came over to his barracks on Wednesday, 28May25. S/COPELAND said V/[redacted] stayed the night and the next day, 29May25, FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG 95, came to his barracks room because he failed to report for work. S/COPELAND stated he borrowed his roommate's vehicle and drove V/[redacted] back to her barracks room around 1000 hours on 29May25. ET3 RICH was interviewed and stated he attempted to file a missing person report due to V/[redacted] not responding to friends and family correspondence in conjunction with V/[redacted] phone being turned off. On 01Jun25, an emergency subpoena was served to Navy Federal Credit Union (NFCU) regarding V/[redacted] bank account, and the last reported activity was 28May25. On 03Jun25, The NCISRA Norfolk Major Case Response Team (MCRT) was activated to conduct a scene examination of S/COPELAND's barracks room, as this was the last confirmed location of V/[redacted] S/COPELAND resided in room 335 inside Willis Manor, Building X2, aboard Naval Station Norfolk.

2. JURISDICTION AND SEARCH AUTHORIZATION: Willis Manor, Building X2 is located aboard Naval Station Norfolk and is located within concurrent jurisdiction with Norfolk Police Department; however, NCIS retains primary investigative jurisdiction due to V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND'S status as USN service members. A Command Authorization for Search and Seizure (CASS) was signed by CAPT Matthew SCHLARMANN, USN, Commanding Officer (CO), Naval Station Norfolk, to authorize the search of S/COPELAND's barracks room in an effort to locate anything belonging to V/[redacted] A copy of the CASS is appended as Enclosure (A).

3. ARRIVAL AND SCENE SECURITY: The scene was not secured prior to NCIS' arrival. At approximately 2004, on 03Jun25, the following members of MCRT arrived on scene: Reporting Agent (RA), SA Joy NAROWSKI, SA Alison FOX, SA Brandon MOORE, Forensic Consultant (FC) Morgan CURRIE, and Supervisory Special Agent (SSA) Danielle ORTIZ. At approximately 2058, the room was cleared, and the scene was secured by SA Kenneth MASON, SA Ryan GARDNER, and SA Steve CONLON. SA David LAWHORN with Electronic Storage Detection (ESD) K9 Jill, Andrew PISKE, CIV, Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM) with Cadaver K9 Kyra, SA Salvatore MURGOLO, SA Cheyenne SIMMONS, SA Tiffany MARTINEZ, SA Caroline ROBINSON, SA Lauryn GODETTE, SA Morgan JOHNS, INV Jesse CLAAR, and INV Nick BURROWES were also on scene.

5. INTERIOR OBSERVATIONS: Upon arrival at the scene, at approximately 2117, RA, FC CURRIE, and SSA ORTIZ conducted an initial walk-through of room 335. After the initial walk-through was completed, RA completed photographic coverage of the room. RA a completed digital sketch of the scene which depicts associated items of evidence described throughout the remainder of the report. Figure [3] depicts the overall scene sketch with associated measurements and legend. The sketch has also been appended as Enclosure (B). Upon entering the room, a closet was located to the left and a washing and drying machine were located to the right. Continuing into the room, a kitchen was on the right and then the area proceeded to open up into a common space that contained a couch, two chairs, a coffee table, a smaller table, and a TV. Along the left wall was another doorway which led into the "B" side of the room, in which S/COPELAND resided with a roommate. Across the common space, "A" side was located, in which two other roommates resided. Inside the "B" side, there were two beds, each up against a wall. S/COPELAND's bed, desk, closet, sink, and belongings were on the side labeled "BA," located along the northeast wall. Once inside "B" side of room 335, a bathroom with a toilet and shower could be located along the northwest wall, past the closets and sinks. Side "A" was not entered by NCIS as it did not pertain to the captioned investigation; therefore, it was not covered in the CASS. At approximately 2203, SA LAWHORN and ESD K9 Jill searched room 335 side B and the common space for electronics belonging to V/[redacted] and found nothing pertinent. At approximately 2234, PISKE and Cadaver K9 Kyra searched room 335 side B and the common space for indications of human remains, to which Cadaver K9 Kyra alerted to a grey backpack located on S/COPELAND's side of suite B. This backpack was collected as evidence item (A). Figure [4] depicts the door and entryway into room 335. Figure [5] depicts the common area located within room 335. Figure [6] depicts S/COPELAND'S bed and desk located against the northeast wall. Figure [7] depicts a positive presumptive test for blood using a Hemastix with a swab taken from a "sticker" located on the floor of S/COPELAND's closet. Figure [8] depicts a positive presumptive test for blood using a Hemastix with a swab taken from the counter next to S/COPELAND's sink. In addition, Bluestar was completed by FC CURRIE and will be documented under a separate report.

VS.

CSSN A[redacted] R[redacted], USN

1. I, Jessica Gokey, am a Special Agent with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS) assigned to the NCIS Resident Agency Norfolk, VA and have been employed with NCIS since March 2022. During my tenure as a Special Agent, I have completed approximately 900 hours of instruction at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC) in Glynco, GA, where I attended the Special Agent Basic Training Integrated Program (SABTI). I was provided instruction on investigations, federal law, and other various practice issues for investigators. I am a member of the Military Criminal Investigative Organization Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force. I have attended the National Criminal Justice Training Center's Internet Crimes Against Children certification course and additional training through ICAC for an approximate total of 90 hours. I spent eight (8) years as an active duty member of the United States Navy, where I was a Master-at-Arms (MA). As a MA, I was a first responder to base incidents, misdemeanor crimes, and traffic accidents. During my tenure as a MA, I was employed with the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) where I worked various cases to include Domestic Violence cases, simple assaults, and other misdemeanor crimes. I have a Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice from Fort Hays State University, Hays, KS.

2. The following facts and information are known to your Affiant based upon information gained from the conduct of this investigation, witness observations, training and experience, and/or through information relayed through other law enforcement officers.

3. This affidavit is submitted in support of an application for a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure to search the residence belonging to CSSN Jermiah COPELAND as annotated in Attachment A.

4. Since this affidavit is being submitted for the limited purpose of securing a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure, your Affiant has not included each and every fact known concerning this investigation. Your Affiant has set forth the facts believed necessary to establish probable cause to believe that evidence of violations of Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) Article 86 (Absence without leave).

FACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES ESTABLISHING PROBABLE CAUSE

5. This United States is investigating violations of Article 86 (Absence without leave).

6. On May 28, 2025, CSSN A[redacted]R[redacted] was known to be in the barracks room located at X-2 room 335B Rack A located onboard Naval Station Norfolk, who is occupied by CSSN Jermiah COPELAND.

7. According to COPELAND, R[redacted] came to his barracks room to have dinner and have a couple drinks.

8. COPELAND stated [redacted] called a "ex-boyfriend from Texas" and was confronting the person about returning personal items. COPELAND stated, [redacted] became emotional and began to cry.

9. COPELAND stated the relationship with [redacted] was platonic and he is a friend from work and no sexual acts have happened between them.

10. During an interview with PSSN Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, who is a roommate of COPELAND, at approximately 0645 on 29 May 2025, GORDILLOCRUZ stated he was leaving for work and saw his roommate, later clarified to be COPELAND and an unknown female on the floor naked.

11. GORDILLOCRUZ stated the female looked to have darker skin, and black curly hair. He could see [redacted] breasts and could see COPELAND's head resting on [redacted] stomach area. GORDILLOCRUZ stated he could not see if [redacted] was wearing anything below COPELAND's head. GORDILLOCRUZ stated COPELAND was also naked but his back was facing upwards.

12. GORDILLOCRUZ stated he could tell [redacted] was breathing by her chest moving up and down. GORDILLOCRUZ stated, he had never seen the female before and has not seen her since.

13. COPELAND stated, he was late for work on the morning of 29 May 2025 and FCC Brad PARKER knocked on his door to say COPELAND was going to be labeled as Unauthorized Absence (UA). FCC PARKER stated COPELAND and [redacted] were in a state of undress and [redacted] waved and rolled over into a blanket. FCC PARKER told COPELAND to report to work and left the barracks room.

14. COPELAND continued explaining, the two of them got dressed and a roommate took him and [redacted] to [redacted] residence located at Miller Hall onboard Naval Station Norfolk at approximately 1000.

15. COPELAND's movements after dropping [redacted]IZ off at Miller Hall. However, we know after speaking with Command, COPELAND was marked UA for the days of 29-31 May 2025 and on 01 June 2025.

16. On 02 June 2025, NCIS spoke to FCC PARKER to verify [redacted] work schedule. FCC PARKER stated [redacted] was scheduled to work day shift Friday, May 30, 2025 - Sunday, June 1, 2025 with a report time of 0500-0530 hours. FCC PARKER stated [redacted] failed to report all three (3) days.

17. NCIS interview all remaining roommates of COPELAND who stated they did not give a ride to COPELAND and [redacted] on the morning of 29 May 2025.

18. The whereabouts of [redacted] are still unknown. Her cellphone last pinged on 31 May 2025 for last known location. The last known was approximately Latitude 36.896558 Longitude -76.435536, which appears to be located in Suffolk, VA.

19. Additionally, NCIS spoke with her mother in Texas and she conveyed [redacted] has attempted suicide in the past and suffers from depression, for which she is prescribed medication. Emergency Room's, psychology departments, morgues, and jails were all negative for her presence when called.

CONCLUSION

20. Based upon the information, your Affiant asserts there is probable cause to believe items in COPELAND's barracks room located at X-2 room 335B Rack A and the common room area onboard Naval Station Norfolk may constitute evidence of Article 86 (Absence without leave) of the UCMJ.

21. Your affiant respectfully requests a CASS be issued, authorizing NCIS Agents, forensic examiners tasked by NCIS, and other law enforcement entities and their forensic components to search and retain evidence as described above.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

Arrange and bind the record of trial with allied papers in the sequence indicated below. The court reporter is responsible for certifying the record of trial prior to transmittal for appellate review, in accordance with R.C.M. 1112 and JAG/CNLSCINST 5813.1G.

1. Pages 1 (Cover page) and 2 (Chronology Sheet) of DD Form 490 (enclosure 7).

2. Court reporter certification of Record of Trial (enclosure 8).

3. Military Judge verification of Record of Trial (enclosure 8).

4. DD Form 490 (pages 3-6 and any continuation pages if needed) (enclosure 7).

5. Completed Post-Trial Checklist from JAG/CNLSCINST 5814.1G (enclosure 2).

6. Completed Convening Authority's Action Checklist (enclosure 4).

7. Post-Trial Documents.

a. Certificates/Proof of Service of the Certified Record of Trial to the accused and victim, if applicable (enclosure 7).

b. Convening Authority's Action and Entry of Judgment (enclosure 6).

c. Any requests for copies of the court-martial record pursuant to R.C.M. 1106 or 1106A (attach written requests, and any certificates/proof of service, but do not attach the victim's post-trial rights advisement or DD Form 2704).

d. Matters submitted by the accused and/or victim under R.C.M. 1106 or 1106A, or any written waiver of the right to submit such matters. Include all responses to requests here as well.

e. Any deferment request and the action on it (including any request to waive automatic forfeitures under Article 58b).

f. Conditions of suspension and proof of service on probationer under R.C.M. 1107, if any.

g. All clemency recommendations by members or military judge, if any.

h. Statement of Trial Results (enclosure 1).

i. Crime Reporting Information.

j. Accused's request for appellate defense counsel, or waiver/withdrawal of appellate review under R.C.M. 1115, if applicable.

k. All transfer orders, confinement orders, and excess leave orders.

l. Briefs of counsel submitted after trial, if any.

8. Preliminary Hearing.

a. DD Form 457, Preliminary Hearing Officer's Report, pursuant to Article 32, if such hearing was conducted, followed by any other allied papers that accompanied the charges when referred for trial (including any matters submitted under R.C.M. 405(l), unless included elsewhere in the record of trial).*

b. Waiver of Article 32 Hearing (if applicable).

9. Pre-Trial Allied Papers.

a. Convening Order and all amending convening orders.

b. DD Form 458, Charge Sheet (unless included at the point of arraignment in the transcript).

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

c. Congressional inquiries and replies, if any.

d. Advice of staff judge advocate, when prepared pursuant to Article 34 or otherwise.

10. Record of Proceedings.

a. Substantially verbatim recording of court-martial proceedings. Segregate open and closed sessions of the court-martial in accordance with R.C.M. 1113 and the following guidance:*

b. Ensure that each closed session of the court-martial is recorded on a separate DVD marked CLOSED SESSION, placed in its own envelope marked CLOSED SESSION, and sealed.

c. Label all DVD(s) and envelopes with the information on page 1 of this template.

d. Mark all DVDs and envelopes with "1 of X." as necessary (for example, the second DVD of six DVDs and its envelope should be marked, 2 of 6). All DVDs of open sessions may be in one envelope.

e. Mark all DVDs with their beginning and ending timestamps. The timestamps for closed sessions should match those shown on the Index.

f. Verbatim transcript or summarized report prepared in accordance with JAGINST 5814.1G. Include the following:

I. A certificate of correction, if any (including any supplemental certification for additional proceedings).

II. Court reporter and transcriptionist certification of verbatim transcript.

g. Records of former proceedings (Article 30a) and/or trials, (e.g., electronic/digital record of former proceeding, including audio recording and any scanned documentation/transcripts, CD/DVD format).*

11. Prosecution exhibits admitted in evidence.

12. Defense Exhibits admitted in evidence.

13. Appellate Exhibits including but not limited to, proposed instructions, written offers of proof or preliminary evidence (real or documentary), briefs of counsel submitted at trial, request to be tried by military judge alone (if any), the accused election of members under R.C.M. 903 (if any), any statement by convening authority required under R.C.M. 503(a)(2), and the election for sentencing by members in lieu of sentencing by military judge under R.C.M. 1002(b).*

14. Redaction. The following information shall be redacted in accordance with JAGMAN 1059 from the record of trial prior to releasing it to any accused or victim (including any transcript made pursuant to R.C.M. 1114 and attached to the record of trial) unless the information establishes an element of an offense, or is otherwise required:

a. Any recordings of closed sessions, any transcripts of closed sessions, and any sealed exhibits.

b. Names of minor victims, and names of minor witnesses. If an identifier is used, use only the initials.

c. Social Security Numbers.

d. Financial account information.

e. Home addresses.

f. Telephone numbers.

g. Personal e-mail addresses.

h. Dates of birth.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

i. Any other information that could be used to identify a specific person other than the accused.

*If the report of preliminary hearing or record of trial contains exhibits, proceedings, or other materials ordered sealed by the preliminary hearing officer or military judge, counsel for the Government, the court reporter, or trial counsel shall cause such materials to be sealed to prevent unauthorized examination or disclosure, pursuant to R.C.M. 1113. Sealed material shall be properly marked, individually placed in separate envelopes with a copy of the preliminary hearing officer or military judge sealing order affixed to it, and inserted at the appropriate place in the record of trial. Do not duplicate sealed material to include it in any copy of the record of trial. Instead, insert a copy of the sealing order in lieu of any sealed material, in any copies of the record of trial.

DIVIDERS ARE NOT NECESSARY TO SEPARATE EACH SECTION. IF USED, THEY CAN BE PAPER RATHER THAN CARD STOCK. IF A PARTICULAR COMPONENT IS NOT APPLICABLE IN THE RECORD OF TRIAL, SUCH AS AN ARTICLE 32 HEARING, EXHIBITS NOT ADMITTED, POST-TRIAL PROCEEDINGS AND VACATION HEARINGS, DO NOT INSERT A DIVIDER OR PLACEHOLDER.

FRONT AND BACK COVER MUST BE ON BLUE CARDS STOCK AND LABELED WITH GUM LABELS.

Binding. Each volume of a record of trial should be no more than 1.5 inches thick and bound at the top with metal or plastic fasteners. DO NOT interlace or "piggy-back" prong fasteners to create an oversized volume. DO NOT place hole punches where it covers up the evidence or language in the transcript. When it becomes necessary to assemble the record of trial in more than one volume, the volumes will be numbered consecutively, on the front cover, as illustrated below:

Volume 1 of 4 (Pages 1-250)
Volume 2 of 4 (Pages 251-400)
Volume 3 of 4 (Pages 401-652)
Volume 4 of 4 (Pages 653-901 and Exhibits)

Make the first volume of a multi-volume record an inch thick or smaller to allow for inclusion of post-trial documents. Limit subsequent volumes to 1.5 inches, unless dividing them requires assembling an additional volume smaller than a half inch.

Label the upper right-hand corner or the Preparation and Certification of Record of Trial Form (enclosure (8)) to reflect which copy it is, i.e., "ORIGINAL," "ACCUSED," "REVIEW" etc.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3, USN	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION TO SEVER 5 December 2025

MOTION

1. Pursuant to Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 906(b)(10), the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny Defense's Motion to Sever.

2. "Offenses may be severed, but only to prevent manifest injustice."[1] In fact, "[j]oinder or minor and major offenses, or of unrelated offenses, is not alone a sufficient ground to sever offenses."[2] There is no "manifest injustice" in denying the Defense's motion here, where the evidence and manner of proof for each charge is intertwined and there is no reason to suggest that limiting instructions would be insufficient.[3]

FACTS

3. The Government adopts its facts from its Response to the Defense's Motion in Limine (M.R.E. 404(b) and 413) dated 5 December 2025.

BURDEN OF PROOF

4. Pursuant to RCM 905(c) and 906(b)(10), the Defense, as the moving party, bears the burden to establish that a manifest injustice will result from the continued joint trial of charge. The burden of proof on any factual issues the resolution of which are necessary to decide the motion is by a preponderance of the evidence.[4]

LAW

5. "Upon a motion, offenses may be severed, but only to prevent a 'manifest injustice.'"[5] Historically, "courts have been concerned with preventing impermissible spillover in various ways from the proof of one offense into the trial of another."[6] But "joinder of offenses at court-martial is more permissive than joinder in federal district courts."[7] While in limited cases severance may be required to ensure the accused receives a fair trial, a better opportunity for an acquittal at separate trials is not enough to cause a "manifest injustice."[8]

6. The Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces (CAAF) outlined in United States v. Southworth the three factors to consider on appeal when determining whether a military judge has abused their discretion when denying a motion to sever:

> (1) whether the evidence of one offense would be admissible proof of the other;
>
> (2) whether the military judge has provided a proper limiting instruction; and
>
> (3) whether the findings reflect an impermissible crossover.[9]

7. "No single factor, or the absence of a single factor, controls the ultimate conclusion of whether manifest injustice has been avoided."[10]

8. A military judge may take other preventative measures aside from severance.[11] These measures include instructing the members to consider the offenses separately and bifurcating the presentation of evidence by the Government to avoid the risk of impermissible spillover.[12]

ARGUMENT

9. The Defense's request to sever some charges from others simply because they involve separate victims must be denied. Indeed, "[j]oinder or minor and major offenses, or of unrelated offenses, is not alone a sufficient ground to sever offenses."[13] The Southworth factors favor a denial of the Defense's motion—the Accused will receive a fair trial.

10. First, the evidence of each offense is admissible in some capacity as proof of each other offense.

July 18, 2007) (citing Duncan, 53 M.J. at 498) (finding no manifest injustice where military judge found evidence of one sex offense was not admissible to establish another sex offense because military judge ensured bifurcation of evidence and gave limiting instructions).

12. Id. at 498.
13. R.C.M. 906(b)(10) (Discussion).

a. While there is overlap in the evidence and method of proof as discussed below, each offense is also independently "[]supported by . . . actual evidence,"[14] to include physical evidence, forensic evidence, and eyewitness testimony—not to mention the strong accounts of each victim. Regardless, a better opportunity for an acquittal at separate trials is not enough to cause a "manifest injustice."[15] And as the CAAF noted in United States v. Buhl,[16] the question is not whether offenses involve different victims or different offenses but whether joinder would deprive the Accused of a fair trial. It would not.

b. As provided in detail in the Government's Response to the Defense's Motion in Limine under M.R.E. 404(b) and 413, there are several extremely probative evidentiary links between these cases that favor joinder. As the Defense notes, the evidence underlying these offenses are "inextricably intertwined."[17] In United States v. Gurfein, despite two unrelated incidents occurring years apart with different child victims, the military judge denied severance because each incident would have been admissible as M.R.E. 404(b) evidence in a separate trial.[18] The Defense cites United States v. Haye for the proposition that severance is appropriate, but fails to cite the court's additional analysis that the key test for evaluating potential spillover is whether the evidence in one case "would be independently admissible" in the trial of the other under M.R.E. 401, 402, and 404(b).[19] This logic applies equally here: where evidence is cross-admissible, severance serves no purpose.

c. To sever the charges would not only subject the Accused to multiple courts-martial, but also run counter to any attempt to preserve judicial economy as the same evidence (including many of the same witnesses) would be presented multiple times in multiple courts-martial.

10. Second, a limiting instruction can mitigate any risk of prejudice. "Absent evidence to the contrary [a court] may presume that members follow a military judge's instructions."[20]

a. In Gurfein, the military judge issued tailored spillover and M.R.E. 404(b) limiting instructions, and the Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals held they were sufficient to prevent prejudice.[21] The military judge can provide appropriate instructions here as well. Members are presumed to follow the instructions they are given, including directions to consider each specification separately and to use M.R.E. 404(b) evidence only for its limited, permissible purpose. This satisfies the second Southworth factor. Haye similarly noted that with proper instructions, even dissimilar offenses can be tried together without undue prejudice.[22]

---

14. Def. Mot. to Sever at 6.
15. United States v. Simpson, 56 M.J. at 464-65 (citing Duncan, 53 M.J. at 497-98).
16. 84 M.J. 501, 503 (C.A.A.F. 2024).
17. Def. Mot. to Sever at 6.
18. Gurfein, *33–34
19. United States v. Haye, 29 M.J. 213, 215 (C.M.A. 1989)
20. United States v. Stewart, 71 M.J. 38, 43 (C.A.A.F. 2012) (quoting United States v. Taylor, 53 M.J. 195, 198 (C.A.A.F. 2000)).
21. Gurfein, 2019 CCA LEXIS 201 at *35–36.
22. Haye, 29 M.J. at 215.

b. And even if this Court finds that each request for an M.R.E. 404(b) instruction is inappropriate, there is still no risk of manifest injustice with a proper limiting instruction. The Defense's argument that members could not possibly follow a common spillover instruction is baseless and contrary to the central legal principle that "[a]bsent evidence to the contrary [a court] may presume that members follow a military judge's instructions."[23]

11. And finally, the third prong of the test is aimed at appellate review, but the evidence does not suggest that there will be an impermissible cross-over in the findings if appropriate limiting instructions are given.[24]

12. The defense bears the burden under R.C.M. 905(c) to prove such injustice by a preponderance of the evidence. They have not done so. Considering the permissibility of M.R.E. 404(b) cross-admissibility, the availability of limiting instructions, the ability of members to compartmentalize evidence, and the strong presumption in favor of joinder under R.C.M. 601(e)(2), the defense has failed to demonstrate any prejudice—let alone the "manifest injustice" required for severance. Consistent with Southworth, Curtis, Buhl, Gurfein, and even Haye, severance is not warranted and should be denied.

RELIEF REQUESTED

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. CSSN JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3, USN	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY 5 December 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 701, Government respectfully requests that the Court grant in part and deny in part Defense's Motion to Compel Discovery.

FACTS

1. On 14 November 2025, Defense submitted a Second Supplemental Discovery Request.

2. In this Second Supplemental Discovery Request, Defense requested in part:

> "Disclosures of any statements any witness made to the trial counsel in this case along with any notes taken by any paralegal who was present during any interview with any potential witness in this case. This includes, for example, CSC Simmons and OSSN Owenskemper. This information is in the possession of the Government and relevant to the Defense's preparation. For one, a witness's credibility is imperative, therefore, whether the statement was consistent or not, it is relevant for the Defense. Further, this information goes directly to a witness's bias (i.e., are particular witnesses talking to the trial counsel but refusing to speak to the Defense?)."

3. On 20 November 2025, the Government responded in part,

> " Denied. A synopsis of expected testimony is not required pursuant to R.C.M. 701(a)(3). The Government will comply with its obligations under United States v. Brady, 373 U.S. 83 (1963) and United States v. Giglio, 405 U.S. 150 (1972). Any sworn or signed statements will be produced. Notes are not subject to discovery under R.C.M. 701(f). At this time, the Government is not aware of any discoverable material related to CSC Simmons or OSSN Owenskemper and the Government does not intend to call either as a witness at this time."

BURDEN OF PROOF

The Defense, as the moving party, bears the burden of persuasion and the burden of proof on any factual issue, the resolution of which is necessary to decide the motion, by a preponderance of the evidence. R.C.M. 905(c)(1)-(2).

LAW

R.C.M. 701(a)(2) mandates discovery of documents "if the item is within the possession, custody, or control of the military authorities and (i) the item is relevant to Defense preparation; (ii) the Government intends to use the item in the case-in-chief at trial; (iii) the Government anticipates using the item in rebuttal, or (iv) the item was obtained from or belongs to the accused."

R.C.M 701(f) states: "Information not subject to disclosure. Nothing in this rule shall be construed to require the disclosure of information protected from disclosure by the Military Rules of Evidence. Nothing in this rule shall require the disclosure or production of notes, memoranda, or similar working papers prepared by counsel and counsel's assistants and representatives."

ARGUMENT

The Defense Seeks Material That Is Not Discoverable Under R.C.M. 701. The Government is not required to produce paralegal notes or Government witness-meeting information.

The Defense seeks: (1) "any statements any witness made to trial counsel," (2) "any notes taken by any paralegal present during any interview," and (3) information regarding whether witnesses "are talking to trial counsel but refusing to speak to the Defense." This request must be denied because it seeks material that is not discoverable, misstates the Government's disclosure obligations, and improperly intrudes upon privileged work product.

A. Paralegal Notes and other Government Interview Notes Are Not Discoverable

Defense's request for "any notes taken by any paralegal" squarely targets protected Government work product. Such notes do not constitute statements unless they are:
(1) signed, adopted, or approved by the witness, or (2) a substantially verbatim contemporaneous recording of the witness's oral statement.[1] The notes at issue meet neither requirement. The Government has reviewed its files and confirms that no paralegal notes have been adopted by any Government witness in this case. Accordingly, nothing responsive is discoverable.

B. Witness Statements to Trial Counsel Are Already Governed by R.C.M. 701(a)(1)(F) and 701(a)(6);

Any qualifying witness statements—as defined by the rule, or evidence favorable to the Accused have been or will be disclosed if they meet the standard.

[1] R.C.M. 914(f)(1) and (2).

C. Information About Whether Witnesses Speak With Trial Counsel vs. Defense Is Not Discoverable

The Defense also seeks information regarding whether "particular witnesses [are] talking to trial counsel but refusing to speak to the Defense." This request is improper for multiple reasons. The Government has no obligation under any applicable rule to disclose when, how often, or under what circumstances it meets with witnesses. Witnesses are free to speak with either party or with neither. A witness's decision not to speak with Defense does not transform Government trial-preparation or other administrative activities into discoverable material. The Government does not—and is not required to—track or maintain records for the purpose of revealing which witnesses choose to engage with Defense counsel. If the Defense is concerned about witness access, their remedy is to request assistance through the appropriate channels, not to compel Government work-product to include, administrative scheduling information.

4. The Government will continue to meet all Brady and Giglio Obligations

The Government remains fully compliant with its duty to disclose Brady and Giglio material, including any information that tends to impeach a Government witness. Should the Government become aware of any information that "adversely affects the credibility of a prosecution witness," it will promptly disclose it.

RELIEF REQUESTED

The Government respectfully requests that the Court deny the Defense's motion to compel discovery as discussed above.

ORAL ARGUMENT

The Government requests oral argument in response to any Defense oral argument.

RESPONSE

1. The Government moves the military judge to deny the Defense motion to dismiss. It only took 122 days (46 when considering excludable delay) from the day that CSSN Jermiah Copeland was put into pretrial confinement until he was brought to arraignment on the charge of murdering CS3 A.R. That period is facially reasonable for a charge of murder in a case that required extensive investigation and forensic testing and thus does not trigger any further analysis beyond the first factor in Barker v. Wingo.[1] Similarly, the R.C.M. 707 requirement was not violated because the Convening Authority did not abuse his discretion in approving excludable delay in this case. No violation of the right to speedy trial exists in this case.

BURDEN

2. "Under Article 10, the Government has the burden to show that the prosecution moved forward with reasonable diligence in response to a motion to dismiss."[2]

FACTS

3. The following provides the procedural posture of this case from CSSN Copeland's placement into pretrial confinement until his arraignment:

2. In addition to the above investigative steps, if not otherwise noted, there were an abundance of subpoenas, warrants, and court orders requested and obtained in this case.[3] The above log also does not account for the daily work that was occurring on this case, including reviewing evidence, analyzing it, and discussing case/investigative strategy.[4]

3. A request for excludable delay was submitted on 1 July 2025 (approximately 22 days after CS3 A.R.'s body was recovered) for the period of 10 June 2025 through 25 July 2025.[5] This request detailed outstanding steps including "receipt and analysis of digital evidence, forensic analysis of multiple pieces of physical evidence, a report of the autopsy of the victim's body, and interviews of several witnesses."[6] This request was approved on 9 July 2025.[7]

4. A second request for excludable delay was submitted on 8 August 2025 for the period of 25 July 2025 through 15 August 2025.[8] It was approved on 27 August 2025.[9] This request provided specific details on why the excludable delay was being requested, stating:

3. Appellate Exhibit III. These include subpoenas, warrants, and orders issued on 10, 12, 16, 20 June, 10, 18, 21 July, 11, 12 13, 18, 26 August, and 1, 2, 4, 9, 10, 11, 16, 17, 30 September. Appellate Exhibit III.

> First, as to the allegation of murder, outstanding steps include receipt of the final reports of investigation, forensic analysis of multiple pieces of physical evidence, a report of the autopsy of the victim's body, a finalized toxicology report, and interviews of several witnesses. The Government is also waiting on returns from various providers relating to UCMJ Article 30a matters, and it is unclear when those results will be in the Government's possession. Second, regarding the sexual assault allegations, NCIS recently acquired information concerning pre-service incidents and a fifth post-service allegation, which may provide evidence regarding the current charges, or could constitute further charges. NCIS requires time to pursue these leads by interviewing witnesses, gathering court documents, and reviewing digital evidence.[10]

5. On 3 October, Trial Counsel asked the Defense when they were available the following week for arraignment.[11] The Defense replied "the earliest we could arraign him is Wednesday [9 October]."[12]

6. When discussing dates for a joint Trial Management Order, the Defense declined the Trial Counsel's requested February trial dates.[13] Instead, the Defense stated "I was thinking trial in May/June/July" and suggested "mid-June."[14]

7. The final DNA report confirming the presence of CS3 A.R.'s blood at the crime scene was not received until 20 October 2025.[15] The final DFE report was not received until 24 November 2025.[16] Several substantial investigative steps remain outstanding at the time of the filing of this motion, including substantive witness interviews, processing of additional forensic evidence, and analysis of digital evidence.[17]

LAW

A. General law on Article 10, UCMJ and R.C.M. 707

8. Article 10 and Sixth Amendment rights to speedy trial trigger when an accused is placed in pretrial confinement.[18] Because Article 10 requires the Government to act with "reasonable diligence[,]" a "more exacting" standard than under the Sixth Amendment, the Government can comply with the Sixth Amendment while violating Article 10, UCMJ.[19] "Article 10 [thus] provides a more stringent speedy trial requirement than the Sixth Amendment[.]"[20] Both speedy trial requirements apply until trial.[21] If Article 10 or Sixth Amendment rights to speedy trial are violated, dismissal with prejudice is "the only possible remedy."[22]

9. Under R.C.M. 707, "[t]he accused shall be brought to trial within 120 days after the earlier of: (1) Preferral of charges; (2) The imposition of restraint under R.C.M. 304(a)(2)-(4) [restriction, arrest, confinement]; or (3) Entry on active duty under R.C.M. 204."[23] An Accused is "brought to trial" for purposes of RCM 707 at arraignment.[24] Before referral, a Convening Authority can approve exclusions of pretrial delays, and such decision is within their sole discretion.[25] Approved delays are reviewed for an abuse of discretion.[26] In providing examples of reasonable bases to grant delay, the discussion of R.C.M. 707 includes "time to enable counsel to prepare for trial in complex cases" and "time to secure the availability of . . . evidence."[27]

10. "In [military] speedy trial jurisprudence, we break down the periods of delay, analyze the reasons for each, and may express concern with some but not other periods of delay[.]"[28] "As the touch stone for measurement of compliance with the provisions of the Uniform Code is not constant motion, but reasonable diligence in bringing the charges to trial. Brief periods of inactivity in an otherwise active prosecution are not unreasonable or oppressive."[29] "A conclusion of unreasonable diligence may arise from a number of different causes and need not rise to the level of gross neglect to support a violation."[30] An Article 10 motion properly applies where "the Government could readily have gone to trial much sooner than some arbitrarily selected time demarcation but negligently or spitefully chose not to."[31]

11. "In determining reasonable diligence for the purposes of Article 10, UCMJ, courts must conduct a four-factor analysis articulated in Barker [v. Wingo.]"[32] The Barker factors derive from Sixth Amendment analyses.[33] None of the four Barker factors alone are a "necessary or sufficient condition to the finding of a deprivation of the right of speedy trial."[34]

1. The Barker factors

12. The four Barker factors are:

(1) Length of delay;

(2) Reasonableness of delay;

(3) Whether the accused demanded speedy trial; and

(4) Actual prejudice.[35]

A. Lenth of Delay.

13. The first factor, length of delay, "is to some extent a triggering mechanism, and unless there is a period of delay that appears, on its face, to be unreasonable under the circumstances, there is no necessity for inquiry into the other factors that go into the balance."[36] Arraignment does not necessarily terminate the Government's Article 10 speedy trial obligations, as the Government's obligation of reasonable diligence remains.[37] The reasonableness of the delay necessarily depends on the specific facts and circumstances of any given case.[38]

B. Reasonableness of Delay

14. In applying the second factor, reasonableness of delay, military judges consider "the reason the government assigns to justify the delay."[39] "[D]ifferent weights should be assigned to different reasons."[40] In applying such weight, it is important to keep in mind that prosecution procedures are "designed to move at a deliberate pace."[41] "The right of a speedy trial is necessarily relative. It is consistent with delays and depends upon circumstances. It secures rights to a defendant. It does not preclude the rights of public justice."[42] "[A] valid reason [for delay], such as a missing witness, should serve to justify appropriate delay."[43] In contrast, "official bad faith in causing delay will be weighed heavily against the government[.]"[44] "Official negligence" occupies a "middle ground" between diligent prosecution and bad-faith delay.[45] "While not compelling relief in every case where bad-faith delay would make relief virtually automatic, neither is negligence automatically tolerable simply because the accused cannot demonstrate exactly how it has prejudiced him."[46] "[T]o warrant granting relief, negligence unaccompanied by particularized trial prejudice must have lasted longer than negligence demonstrably causing such prejudice."[47] "'Whether delay in completing a prosecution . . . amounts to an unconstitutional deprivation of rights depends upon the circumstances. . . . The delay must not be purposeful or oppressive[.]'"[48] "The essential ingredient is orderly expedition and not mere speed."[49]

C. Whether the accused demanded speedy trial

15. Considering the third factor, "[w]hether and how a defendant asserts his right is closely related to the other factors[.]"[50] "The more serious the deprivation, the more likely a defendant is to complain."[51] "The defendant's assertion of his speedy trial right . . . is entitled to strong evidentiary weight in determining whether the defendant is being deprived of the right."[52]

D. Actual prejudice

16. The fourth factor, prejudice, is assessed in light of three interests of the accused:

> (i) to prevent oppressive pretrial incarceration;
>
> (ii) to minimize anxiety and concern of the accused; and
>
> (iii) to limit the possibility that the defense will be impaired, to include the possibility that a convicted person's grounds for appeal might be impaired.[53]

17. For the first interest of the accused to be prejudicially impaired, pretrial incarceration must be "oppressive."[54] In Barker, the Supreme Court held that ten months of pretrial confinement was not prejudicial because "there was no adverse impact on the defendant's ability to present a defense."[55] Indeed, the NMCCA has stated as recently as 2023 that "[n]either this Court, nor our Superior Court has ever 'held that the mere fact of pretrial confinement constitutes prejudice.'"[56]

18. In considering the second interest of the accused, it is important to keep in mind that pretrial confinement—in any case—"necessarily involves some anxiety and stress."[57] There must be more than the typical "anxiety and concern" one would find in any other lawful case of pretrial confinement for this second interest to be prejudicially impaired.[58] "[T]he conditions of that confinement [must be] harsh or oppressive"[59]

19. The third interest, whether the accused's ability to present a defense or have grounds for appeal may be impaired, is "the most serious" form of prejudice "because the inability of a defendant adequately to prepare his case skews the fairness of the entire system."[60] This interest can be impaired "by dimming memories and loss of exculpatory evidence."[61] "[A]ffirmative proof of particularized prejudice is not essential to every speedy trial claim . . . [such as in cases of] excessive delay [which] presumptively compromises the reliability of a trial in ways that neither party can prove or, for that matter, identify."[62]

20. While there is no affirmative requirement for an accused to prove prejudice, courts have denied Sixth Amendment and Article 10 claims in-part due to the failure of an accused to show sufficient prejudice.[63]

2. United States v. Castanedamanzo provides a helpful point of comparison

21. In United States v. Castanedamanzo, the NMCCA found that Article 10, UCMJ was not violated after trial was delayed for 259 days with an accused in pretrial confinement.[64] There, the victim reported an abusive sexual contact on 30 August 2020.[65] The following day, the accused violated an order not to contact the victim and was placed in confinement.[66] The Government spent the following five months completing its investigation and preferring a total of six charge sheets.[67] On 1 September, a trial counsel was assigned.[68] On 4 September, a confinement hearing was held.[69] On 11 September, the Government preferred three charges—none of which involved the abusive sexual contact.[70] Over the course of September and October, NCIS interviewed over thirty witnesses.[71] On 30 October, NCIS received the results of a DNA analysis.[72] On 24 November, and without explanation for the nearly month-long delay other than that NCIS would issue an ROI in December which would not contain substantial information, the Government preferred two specifications under Article 120, UCMJ.[73] On 14 December, the accused demanded speedy trial.[74] On 15 December, the Government—for the first time and without explanation as to why it had done nothing for twenty-one days—"began coordination with the Defense to schedule the Article 32 preliminary hearing."[75] The preliminary hearing took place on 29 December.[76] The PHO report was issued on 8 January and two weeks later (on 20 and 21 January the Government preferred two additional charges.[77] Another week later, on 28 January (and without explanation), another charge was preferred.[78] The Government referred charges and presented them to the accused the same day.[79] The Government waited three days to request to docket the case, and the Government requested an arraignment to occur another three days later.[80] By arraignment on 3 February, the accused had been in pretrial confinement for 157 days.[81]

22. On appeal, the Castanedamanzo Court looked at the length of the delay and found that 259 days triggered analysis of the remaining three Barker factors.[82] Similarly, the Court found that the "demand for speedy trial" factor weighed in favor of the accused because he demanded speedy trial upon learning that the Government sought excludable delay for a fifty day period.[83] Considering the reasons for delay, the NMCCA noted that the Government's charging timeline and its repeated preferral of six total charge sheets were reasonable.[84] It found as much despite that "the bulk of the evidence behind the charged offenses was known by November 2020 and was rooted in offenses that took place in August 2020[.]"[85] Ultimately, the reasonableness of delay factor favored the Government because "[v]iewing the entire period of delay . . . there was no bad act by the Government, nor any intent to delay the trial. The pace of the Government's actions was not for the purpose of delaying trial or increasing the amount of time Appellant spent in pretrial confinement, but rather dictated by . . . administrative burden[.]"[86]

23. Finally, considering prejudice, the Castanedamanzo Court noted that the accused's allegation that his pretrial incarceration was oppressive to be "circular" because merely being in pretrial confinement, even for a lengthy period, does not on its own constitute prejudice—and there was no evidence that "the conditions of that confinement were harsh or oppressive."[87] The accused did not offer "any meaningful argument, apart from generalized claims, that his period of pretrial confinement impaired his defense . . . At no point did he raise concerns about lacking the ability to effectively communicate with his civilian defense counsel or his detailed defense counsel . . . [and there was] nothing to suggest he lacked the ability to effectively prepare his defense."[88] For these reasons the NMCCA found that the prejudice factor weighed in favor of the Government, and the accused's Article 10 speedy trial rights were not violated.[89]

ARGUMENT

I. The length of delay is not facially unreasonable. All periods of delay are extremely reasonable. The inquiry should end here.

24. This is not a simple case. It involves murder, aggravated sexual contact, abusive sexual contact, sexual assault, strangulation, indecent recording, indecent broadcasting, obstruction of justice, and false official statements. There are seven charges, fifteen specifications, and five victims on the charge sheet. Even without the many additional offenses, premeditated murder is an extremely complex offense to investigate. From discovering the corpse, it took seventy-four days to investigate the murder charge prior to preferral: a number that is not facially unreasonable. And it took forty-eight days to bring the case from preferral to arraignment: a number that is likewise not facially unreasonable. Indeed, the Government preferred the charges while the investigation was still pending—major investigative efforts such as receipt of the autopsy, DNA, and digital forensic reports were still pending when the charges were preferred—because the Government took CSSN Copeland's demand for speedy trial seriously. As it stands, many substantial investigative steps are still pending. The first Barker factor weighs in favor of the Government—there should be no further inquiry.[90]

25. Regardless, "break[ing] down the periods of delay[to] analyze the reasons for each" while "consider[ing] the specific facts and circumstances" demonstrates that no period of delay is unreasonable.[91] The Defense omits from its motion the numerous investigatory acts taken between

90. If the military judge agrees and finds that additional analysis is not triggered by the length of delay, the Government respectfully requests that the military judge make findings of fact pertaining to the remaining Barker factors. See Castanedamanzo, 2023 CCA LEXIS 85, at *12 ("In conducting our review, we give substantial deference to the military judge's findings of fact, reversing only if they are clearly erroneous").
91. Barker, 407 U.S. at 531; Danylo, 73 M.J. at 190.

CSSN Copeland's placement into pretrial confinement and his arraignment, and review of those steps show that the Government progressed its investigation on a near-daily basis. Indeed, the trial counsel met with investigators, created an investigatory plan prioritizing items of the highest necessity, and did not wait until completion of investigation to prefer charges. The factual timeline of the investigation shows that the periods of excludable delay were not, as the Defense argues, "rubberstamped . . . blanket exclusion[s] of time."[92] And the Government leaned forward to obtain evidence in draft form and only waited on the most critical evidence to charge rather than wait on all pending investigatory steps. For example, instead of waiting for a final autopsy report to be done, the trial counsel met with the medical examiner while it was still being drafted and preferred charges prior to its completion. Such is diligence and reasonableness.

26. Prosecution procedures are "designed to move at a deliberate pace" and "[b]rief periods of inactivity in an otherwise active prosecution are not unreasonable or oppressive."[93] Here, there are no noteworthy periods of inactivity because the Government did not wait on a completed investigation to charge but rather diligently progressed an investigation with near-daily steps, moved forward as soon as ready, scheduled the Article 32 hearing with sufficient time for the PHO to review the large amount of evidence presented in this complicated case, and quickly brought this case to arraignment after the PHO report was received. "The right of a speedy trial is necessarily relative. It is consistent with delays and depends upon circumstances . . . It does not preclude the rights of public justice."[94] Collecting necessary evidence and allocating sufficient time to review evidence, research the law, and thoughtfully prefer charges ensures that "the rights of public justice" are protected.[95]

27. This case is a stronger example of diligence than Castandamanzo, in which the Government was held to be reasonably diligent. In Castandamanzo, the Government preferred charges one month and again three months after completion of investigation; whereas here, the Government preferred charges while the investigation remained pending. In Castandamanzo, the Government waited twenty-one days to begin coordination with the Defense to schedule an Article 32 hearing; but here, the Article 32 hearing was requested the very same day charges were preferred. In Castandamanzo, arraignment did not occur until one month after the PHO report was received; but here, arraignment occurred the following week.

28. Nothing supports the Defense's insinuation that the Government must charge offenses in a piecemeal approach—preferring offenses one after another rather than finalize major investigatory steps and then prefer all known offenses together. Indeed, the Court in Castandamanzo, despite finding that the Government acted reasonably, did not champion the piecemeal approach there but rather referred to it as "inexplicabl[e]."[96] Castandamanzo underscores the problem with such a piecemeal approach: expecting the Government to prefer charges, schedule 32 hearings, and subsequently re-work the charge sheet can exacerbate timelines rather than expedite them. It is contrary to the notion of a speedy trial for all known offenses.

95. Id.
96. Castandamanzo, at *18 n.31.

29. "The delay must not be purposeful or oppressive[.]'"[97] There is no evidence of purposeful or oppressive delay but rather purposeful movement towards trial. Considering the timeline at hand, the Government's legitimate bases for each period of delay, and the short lapse of time in each period of delay, this case was reasonably and expeditiously brought to trial, and the Convening Authority did not abuse their discretion in granting the two periods of excludable delay, as discussed below.

II. The Defense Request for trial dates in June 2026 vice the proposed February 2026 trial dates from the Government undercuts the Defense argument.

30. The Defense writes, "CSSN Copeland and the Defense have not requested any delays throughout this case" and it argues that "Even worse . . . by the time CSSN Copeland will have gone to trial, he will have served 360 days."[98] But the Defense requested that trial be docketed in June 2026 rather than the February 2026 dates initially offered by the Government. Thus, the Defense is using their own request for delay in trial dates as both a shield and a sword. The Defense cannot have it both ways—their request for speedy trial is undermined by their subsequent requests delayed trial dates. Accordingly, the third Barker factor, the demand for speedy trial, weighs against the Defense.

III. There is no prejudice.

31. The pretrial incarceration has not been oppressive. CSSN Copeland has never been denied access to his defense counsel. The Defense argument that, "it was not until 6 October 2025 when the Government finally allowed for in-person attorney-client communications in the same room. Prior to this time, CSSN Copeland did not have the ability to have a private, privileged conversation with his defense counsel" is not factually correct.[99] As outlined in the Government's response to the Defense's motion to dismiss under Article 13, UCMJ, CSSN Copeland's classification as a MAX prisoner is not unduly harsh and furthers a legitimate, non-punitive Government interest.

32. Furthermore, there is no impact to his ability to prepare his defense. The time at issue here has not prejudiced the ability to present a Defense, and in fact, as noted above, the Defense has requested later trial dates than the Government.

33. CSSN Copeland has not suffered any prejudice, and the Government has reasonably and diligently progressed this case to trial.

IV. The Government met it's R.C.M. 707 requirement as the Convening Authority did not abuse his discretion in granting excludable delay.

34. Considering the approved delay, CSSN Copeland was arraigned on day 46. Both approved delay requests involved allowing "time to enable counsel to prepare for trial in complex cases" and "time to secure the availability of . . . evidence."[100] They specifically included requests for delay based on investigative actions, review of evidence, and pending receipt of critical evidence. They were legitimate and appropriate. In both cases, the convening authority determined the "request is reasonable in both length and rationale . . . ."[101] There is no evidence to suggest that the Convening Authority abused his discretion.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY
1. On 26JUL24, NCISRU USS HARRY S TRUMAN was notified by MA1 Ronald CORTESELLI, USN, USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), of an unrestricted report of sexual assault wherein [redacted], USN, CVN 75, stated she was sexually assaulted by CSSN Jermiah Taylor COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, CVN 75, while aboard the ship in port on 23Jul24 at approximately 0200 hours. During her interview on 06Aug24, [redacted] stated S/COPELAND grabbed her vulva, breasts, and buttocks over the clothing while applying pressure to her neck so that it was difficult for her to breathe. NCIS interviewed multiple witnesses in reference to the offense. During his interview on 16AUG24, subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights, S/COPELAND denied the allegations of sexual assault. A Military Protective Order (MPO) was requested. On 27JUN25, NCIS conducted the administrative criminal offender processing of S/COPELAND for violation of Article 120 (Abusive Sexual Contact) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) and collected his fingerprints, mug shot photographs, and DNA sample. All investigative actions completed, this case is hereby pending administrative and/or judicial action.

NARRATIVE
1. This reactive criminal investigation pertains to suspected violations of Article 120 (Abusive Sexual Contact) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ).

2. Reference (A) documents all previous investigative activity conducted under this heading.

3. 24JUN25, this investigation was re-assigned to Inv. John KOWALSKI due to the USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75) return to Norfolk.

BACKGROUND: On 31May25, NCIS was contacted by Norfolk Police Department (NPD) in reference to a missing person's report. NPD relayed ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95), was attempting to make a missing person's report regarding V/ A. R. (V/ A. R. USN, DDG 95. NCIS subsequently contacted Command who advised V/ A. R. and CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, were in a status of Unauthorized Absence (UA) beginning on Thursday, 29May25. Command advised they believed V/ A. R. and S/COPELAND were involved romantically, but did not know to what extent. On 01Jun25, NCIS made contact with Naval Station Norfolk Base Police to conduct a welfare check on the rooms of S/COPELAND and V/ A. R. Base Police stated they found S/COPELAND in his barracks room; however, received no answer at V/ A. R. 's door when they knocked. NCIS responded to Naval Station Norfolk and was able to gain entry to V/ A. R. 's barracks room, in which she was not located. Subsequently, NCIS' Multiple Threat Alert Center (MTAC) initiated cell phone pings on V/ A. R. 's mobile phone, which yielded no location data due to the phone possibly being powered off. NCIS conducted an interview of S/COPELAND who stated V/ A. R. came over to his barracks on Wednesday, 28May25. S/COPELAND stated V/ A. R. stayed the night and the next day, 29May25, FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG 95, came to his barracks room because he failed to report for work. S/COPELAND stated he borrowed his roommate's vehicle and drove V/ A. R. back to her barracks around 1000 on 29May25. During the interview of S/COPELAND, he signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for his cellular device which was provided to NCIS Digital Forensic Examiners (DFE) for review. The DFE observed a screenshot on the device of S/COPELAND of a saved marked location near Cary Avenue in Norfolk, VA. During the course of this investigation, NCIS would launch search teams near known phone pings and last locations of both V/ A. R. and S/COPELAND. On 09Jun25, subsequent to receiving the screenshot from the DFE, NCIS conducted a foot search of the area near the marked location and discovered a black duffel bag containing human remains, later identified through DNA as V/ A. R.

JURISDICTION AND ARRIVAL: At approximately 1700, NCIS arrived to the location of Cary Avenue in Norfolk, VA, and conducted a foot search around the Broad Creek neighborhood and Richard Bowling Elementary School. Figure [1] is the screenshot of the marked location utilized by NCIS. At 1735, Reporting Agent (RA) received a phone call from Participating Agent (PA) Tiffany MARTINEZ stating a bag had been located off of a brush covered path behind a row of townhomes. Due to the location of the bag, at 1740, NCIS initiated contact with the Norfolk Police Department (NPD) who responded to the scene to assist. A copy of the NPD incident report detailing their response is appended as Enclosure (A).

SCENE SECURITY: Upon arrival to the scene, no other persons were present in the area but residents going about their daily routine. The area which was searched was not secured prior to arrival and was an open, wooded area, behind a school and residential community. NCIS participants divided into groups and ultimately located the bag by following the smell. Once the duffel bag was located, Andrew PISKE, CIV, K9 Handler, Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM), and K9 Kyra, Certified Human Remains Detection Dog, approached the bag where she presented a positive alert to PISKE. An aerial topography image of the area searched by PISKE and K9 Kyra is appended as Enclosure (B). NCIS partially unzipped the bag to verify its contents to which human remains were observed. NPD was immediately contacted, and all searching immediately ceased. Due to rain, at approximately 1755, to protect the duffel bag, PISKE placed a black tarp over the bag. Figure [2] is a photo of the overall brush area where the remains were located. Figure [3] is a photo of the duffel bag in place. Figure [4] is the approximate GPS location of the duffel bag after conducting the foot search with the assistance of CalTopo. Figure [5] is the confirmation of the human remains inside the bag.

On 06Nov24, NCISRU USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), was notified by ET2 Courtney EFF, USN, Uniformed Victim Advocate (UVA), CVN 75, of a sexual assault wherein [redacted V/S.S.]), USN, CVN 75, reported she was sexually assaulted by CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, CVN 75, in a bathroom at a bar in Oslo, Norway, during a port call on 04Nov24 at approximately 2200 hours. [redacted V/S.S.] underwent a Sexual Assault Forensic Examination (SAFE) aboard the ship. During her interview on 07Nov24, [redacted V/S.S.] stated she was intoxicated and did not remember sexual contact with S/COPELAND, but other sailors approached her the following day and indicated S/COPELAND showed multiple sailors a video on his cellular telephone of his sexual contact with her. Multiple witness interviews were conducted corroborating the existence of a video and sexual encounter. S/COPELAND was interviewed on 18Nov24 and 20Dec24 and subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights stated the sexual contact with [redacted V/S.S.] was consensual and admitted to producing a video recording during the sexual encounter. A Military Protective Order (MPO) was requested. On 27JUN25, NCIS conducted the administrative criminal offender processing of S/COPELAND for violation of Article 120 (Abusive Sexual Contact) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) and collected his fingerprints, mug shot photographs, and DNA sample. This investigation remains open pending forensic analysis of the Sexual Assault Forensic Examination (SAFE) kit and any other investigative actions deemed necessary.

UNITED STATES v. JERMIAH COPELAND CSSN/ E-3 USN	AFFIDAVIT OF MS. SHELLEY CROSSLEY 4 December 2025

1. I, Ms. Shelley Crossley, am currently employed as a paralegal with the Office of Special Trial Counsel in Norfolk, Virginia.

2. I have assisted in the prosecution of the United States v. CSSN Jermiah Copeland. Attached to this affidavit is a case activity log from the trial counsel in this case. This log is not all-encompassing and does not reflect the daily discussion, analysis, and review that this case has undergone.

3. Additionally, it should be noted that several investigative steps remain outstanding, including substantive witness interviews, processing of additional forensic evidence, and analysis of digital evidence.

4. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Enclosure (1): Trial Counsel Log – United States v. CSSN Copeland – 09 June 2025 though 9 October 2025.

Entry	Event Date
NCIS discovered human remains in wooded area of Norfolk. Began preparation for IRO.	6/9/2025
Conducted VWAP interview with the victim's mother.	6/11/2025
IRO complete; Accused remains in confinement. Provided update to victim's mother, command, and NCIS. Submitted Inv. Sub. for Cash App. The Defense requested a demand for speedy trial.	6/16/2025
Received Fee schedule from civilian DFE; drafted excludable delay request; SA Martinez served CashApp subpoena; reviewed demand for speedy trial. Met with SA Martinez to discuss any developments in the investigation. Followed up on SAFE Kit for CSSN S.S.	6/17/2025
Contacted CSSN S.S. via SJA and CSSN S.R. to inform them that the Accused's name had been made public. E-mailed CSSN S.R. as a follow-up and asked to set up a meeting with her the following week. Attempted contact of ABHAN C.R., but did not get a response.	6/20/2025
Contacted by SA Gokey to discuss case developments. Began review of evidence from NCIS, including recorded witness interviews.	6/24/2025
Obtained and reviewed jail calls.	6/25/2025
Evidence review is pending search warrant returns. Received update from SSA - Items outstanding - USACIL results on various pieces of physical evidence, final forensic report on Accused's phone, interview of 128b victim (CSSN S.R.), review of gate security footage is ongoing, results from autopsy not expected for 3 - 6 months. First interim published on 27 June. Awaiting distro; Drafting excludable delay request. Defense emailed regarding brig search of Accused's cell. Accused's cell searched and autopsy photos found (IRO evidence). Defense directed to speak with brig and NCIS.	6/30/2025
Requested excludable delay from 10 June 2025 - 25 July 2025. SJA in receipt. Will not meet with CA until 9 Jul. Defense filing objection today. Received and 17Jun25 (intial) ROI. Visited NCIS to review evidence. Conducted one crime scene visit (Suspect Barracks); Received multiple CDs with interviews and scene pictures.	7/1/2025
Received the following update regarding forensic testing: Division Chief Matthew Graves, USACIL's Forensic Case Management Division (FCMB), has consulted with the DNA Division Chief and the DNA examiner and they are estimating it will be completed in 30-45 days of receipt of the evidence, barring any unforeseen circumstances that would cause delays. Some evidence has already been received and analyzed/examined. On Monday, SA/FC Currie had a teleconference with the DNA Division Chief, the FCMB case manager and the DNA examiner and they developed the priority list of evidence that would be sent to the lab next. This evidence should be arriving to the lab on Monday, 07Jul25, and the 30-45 day estimated time of completion will begin once those items are received. An additional item of evidence will soon follow that shipment. Visited evidence facility to ascertain scope of evidence collection, processing, and testing.	7/2/2025

Subj: GOVERNMENT REQUEST FOR EXCLUDABLE DELAY ICO UNITED STATES V. CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN

Ref: (a) R.C.M. 707 (2024 ed.)

1. Pursuant to reference (a), the Government respectfully requests excludable delay for the period beginning on 10 June 2025 through 25 July 2025.

2. On 10 June 2025, CSSN Copeland was placed in pre-trial confinement. Per reference (a), this event requires CSSN Copeland be brought to trial within 120 days of the imposition of restraint. CSSN Copeland is under investigation for violating Uniform Code of Military Justice Article 107 (False official statement), Article 117a (Wrongful broadcast or distribution of intimate visual images), Article 118 (Murder), Article 120 (Rape and sexual assault), Article 128 (Assault), and Article 128b (Domestic Violence). These alleged violations primarily span four separate, complex alleged incidents and investigation remains ongoing into each.

3. Taken alone, any of one of these offenses is extremely complex and several lengthy investigative steps remain. Specific to the allegation of murder, these steps include receipt and analysis of digital evidence, forensic analysis of multiple pieces of physical evidence, a report of the autopsy of the victim's body, and interviews of several witnesses. NCIS and counsel for the Government are working on this case daily to further the investigation and move with reasonable diligence toward trial. Pursuant to reference (a), the Government may receive excludable delay to thoroughly investigate a case and prepare for trial. Therefore, the Government respectfully requests the time beginning on 10 June 2025 through 25 July 2025 be excluded.

4. Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter. If you have any questions about this request, please contact me via e-mail at lauren.a.mayo2.mil@us.navy.mil or via phone at (757) 341-4598.

1. Pursuant to Rules of Courts-Martial 707, the Government's request for excludable delay, reference (a), from 10 June 2025 to 25 July 2025 is hereby approved. In response to that request, I received reference (b), Defense Counsel's objection to the Government's request.

2. In weighing the Government's request against Defense's objection, I have determined that the Government's request is reasonable in both length and rational based on the Government's stated basis.

3. My point of contact for this matter is Staff Judge Advocate, CDR Beasley-Ledet, JAGC, USN (757) 322-2936, or via email at ronisha.t.beasleyledet.mil@us.navy.mil.

Subj: GOVERNMENT REQUEST FOR EXCLUDABLE DELAY ICO UNITED STATES V. CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN

Ref: (a) R.C.M. 707 (2024 ed.)

1. Pursuant to reference (a), the Government respectfully requests excludable delay for the period beginning on 25 July 2025 through 15 August 2025.

2. On 10 June 2025, CSSN Copeland was placed in pre-trial confinement. Per reference (a), this event requires CSSN Copeland be brought to trial within 120 days of the imposition of restraint. On 1 July 2025, the Government requested excludable delay from 10 June 2025 through 25 July 2025. This request was granted 9 July 2025.

3. CSSN Copeland is under investigation for violating Uniform Code of Military Justice Article 107 (False official statement), Article 117a (Wrongful broadcast or distribution of intimate visual images), Article 118 (Murder), Article 120 (Rape and sexual assault), Article 128 (Assault), and Article 128b (Domestic Violence). These alleged violations primarily span four separate, complex alleged incidents and investigation remains ongoing into each.

4. Although NCIS and the Government have exercised all expedience in this case, several lengthy investigative steps remain. First, as to the allegation of murder, outstanding steps include receipt of the final reports of investigation, forensic analysis of multiple pieces of physical evidence, a report of the autopsy of the victim's body, a finalized toxicology report, and interviews of several witnesses. The Government is also waiting on returns from various providers relating to UCMJ Article 30a matters, and it is unclear when those results will be in the Government's possession. Second, regarding the sexual assault allegations, NCIS recently acquired information concerning pre-service incidents and a fifth post-service allegation, which may provide evidence regarding the current charges, or could constitute further charges. NCIS requires time to pursue these leads by interviewing witnesses, gathering court documents, and reviewing digital evidence.

5. Pursuant to reference (a), the Government may receive excludable delay to thoroughly investigate a case and prepare for trial. Accordingly, the Government respectfully requests the time beginning on 25 July 2025 through 15 August 2025 be excluded.

6. Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter. If you have any questions about this request, please contact me via e-mail at patricia.t.cannaday.mil@us.navy.mil or via phone at (757) 341-4509.

CDR Mayo,

If he was served yesterday, the earliest we could arraign him is Wednesday. LCDR Morgan has a 39(a) in the coast guard court room so Thursday is probably best. If CSSN is willing to waive the 5-day waiting period, we could do Tuesday if that works for yall. We will ask him. Do you have a draft TMO?

Subject: RE: Pre-Arraignment Plea Offer ICO CSSN Copeland

CDR Mayo,

Other than the holiday weekend, I am available.

We plan to litigate the same motion at the arraignment now that the court has jurisdiction.

The plea offer contemplates a significant amount of confinement and a proffer. We cannot do that in the no contact room. The case law is pretty clear that to adequately prepare for trial, an attorney must be in the same room as the client – who has absolutely no incident's of misconduct since he has been in the brig. If the government really would like negotiate a plea agreement, we need to be able to speak with our client in-person. The brig is clear – the command can bring him to A-50 so that we can talk to him. The fact that you were able to prepare your clients for a plea agreement or for a trial in the no contact room, is not evidence that I can. I cannot competently prepare CSSN Copeland (a person with a 15 AFQT score) for this type of complex plea agreement or trial without being able to meet with him in person with papers and a computer.

LCDR Serfess,

I understand your position. However, the brig and the command have made their position clear. As outlined in our response to your motion, I also do not believe the current brig accommodations are insufficient for private meetings with your client. I say this also as someone who has spent a lot of time in the no contact room at this brig.

For planning purposes, I expect referral will happen shortly - what is your schedule like over the next two weeks for an arraignment?

degraded and/or an insufficient amount of male DNA detected.

TECHNICAL NOTES

1. DNA profiles were detected using PCR (polymerase chain reaction) technology on twenty-one autosomal STR (short tandem repeat) loci, two Y-chromosome loci (DYS391, Y-indel) and a gender identification locus from the Applied Biosystems GlobalFiler kit.

2. DNA profiles were detected using PCR (polymerase chain reaction) technology on twenty-seven Y-STR (Y-chromosome short tandem repeat) loci from the Applied Biosystems Yfiler Plus kit.

3. Match will be used when complete genotypes are obtained at all loci included in the amplification kit, and all of the detected alleles are the same as those in the reference being compared.

Consistent with will be used when genetic information is missing at one or more loci included in the amplification kit (a partial profile), but all of the detected alleles are the same as those in the reference being compared.

4. The autosomal STR statistical calculations in this report were generated using STRmix™ software which calculates a fully continuous probabilistic likelihood ratio (LR). Unless otherwise noted, the most conservative LR was reported using the lower bound 99% credible interval from unrelated individuals in the U.S. Caucasian, Black, and Hispanic population groups. The population allele frequencies were obtained from the NIST 1036 U.S. Population Dataset.

A likelihood ratio is a measure of the strength of support that particular findings give to one proposition against a stated alternative, given certain conditioning information. For these reported likelihood ratios, the propositions and conditioning information were based on data from these results and current case circumstances. If any aspects of the case should change or new information is provided regarding these propositions and conditioning information, then the evaluation of these results to include the likelihood ratio may change. This will be the subject of a separate report.

The reported statistical calculation for an association will be capped at 1.0 quintillion. The actual calculated value may be higher, but not less than this number, which is equivalent to the laboratory's minimum statistical threshold.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

1. On 31MAY25, NCIS received a report of a missing person, CSSN V/A.R. (V/A.R. USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95), who was marked as Unauthorized Absent by DDG-95 along with CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG-95. On 01JUN25, base security was able to locate S/COPELAND, however, V/A.R. was still missing. NCIS responded to Naval Station Norfolk and began conducting field interviews of friends and family members of V/A.R. NCIS also spoke with S/COPELAND who stated, he along with one of his roommates dropped V/A.R. off at her barracks, Miller Hall, on the morning on 29MAY25, and he had not seen or spoken to V/A.R. since. Throughout the course of the investigation, NCIS conducted exhaustive efforts yielding S/COPELAND was the last person to see V/A.R. and he was not truthful about her whereabouts or his actions from 29MAY25 through 01JUN25. These efforts included submission and execution of legal process, interviews, foot canvasses, collaborative search efforts, and the utilization of digital forensics. NCIS seized the cellular device of S/COPELAND and conducted a forensic review, which led NCIS to a neighborhood where V/ V/A.R. 's body was located inside a black duffel bag. After the discovery, NCIS detained S/COPELAND and attempted to conduct an interview; however, he requested counsel and the interview was terminated. Subsequently, S/COPELAND was placed into pre-trial confinement pending charges. On 09OCT25, S/COPELAND was arraigned on all charges and General Court Martial is set for 03JUN26-26JUN26. This investigation is pending evidence analysis, interviews, cellular data findings, and any additional investigative steps deemed appropriate.

NARRATIVE

1. This reactive investigation pertains to the suspected violations of Article 107 (False Official Statements), Article 118 (Murder) and Article 131b (Obstruction of Justice) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ). NCIS maintains primary jurisdiction.

2. References (A-D) document additional NCIS cases wherein CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) was identified as the subject of the investigations.

in a bathroom at a bar in Oslo, Norway, during a port call on 04Nov24 at approximately 2200 hours. V/[redacted] underwent a Sexual Assault Forensic Examination (SAFE) aboard the ship. During her interview on 07Nov24, V/[redacted] stated she was intoxicated and did not remember sexual contact with S/COPELAND, but other sailors approached her the following day and indicated S/COPELAND showed multiple sailors a video on his cellular telephone of his sexual contact with her. Multiple witness interviews were conducted corroborating the existence of a video and sexual encounter. S/COPELAND was interviewed on 18Nov24 and 20Dec24 and subsequent to waiving his Article 31b Rights stated the sexual contact with [redacted] was consensual and admitted to producing a video recording during the sexual encounter. Forensic analysis of the SAFE was completed and identified S/COPELAND as a contributor of sperm cell DNA located on the crotch area of [redacted] clothing collected during the SAFE. Active investigation is complete. This case is pending judicial/administrative action.

NARRATIVE

1. This reactive criminal investigation pertains to a suspected violation of Article 120 (Sexual Assault) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ).

2. References (A) through (D) document other NCIS controlled investigations wherein S/COPELAND is the subject. References (E) and (F) document all previous investigative activity conducted under this heading. References (E) and (F) also document under paragraph 1 of the Narrative section that this "investigation pertains to a suspected violation of Article 120 (Abusive Sexual Contact) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice" in error. It should state "This investigation pertains to a suspected violation of Article 120 (Sexual Assault) of the Uniform Code of Military Justice". Reference (F) erroneously reports in the Executive Summary that S/COPELAND was apprehended for abusive sexual assault in this investigation; however, he was apprehended for sexual assault. Reference (F) erroneously identifies Reference (B) as having control number 00029; that should be corrected to 00237.

3. On 19Nov24, CSSA McKenzie SAUNDERS, USN, USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), was interviewed in reference to the offense. The interview was not appended to Reference (A) due to administrative oversight. CSSA SAUNDERS recalled interacting with [redacted] in the bathroom of the bar prior to liberty expiration, and opined [redacted] did not appear intoxicated until exiting the bathroom to return to the ship; Exhibit (20) pertains.

4. On 31Jul25, NCIS obtained a copy of the Military Protective Order issued to S/COPELAND in reference to this investigation. The MPO requires no contact between S/COPELAND and [redacted] This order is effective until rescinded; Exhibit (21) pertains.

5. On 26Aug25, CSSA SAUNDERS was re-interviewed in reference to the offense. CSSA SAUNDERS provided amplifying information pertaining to the investigation; Exhibit (22) pertains.

6. On 15JUL25, Meta Platforms Inc provided the results of the subpoena. The subpoena results revealed the account holder had an associated name of "Jermiah" was associated with Instagram account 23jcopeland and Gmail account jeremiahcopeland7@gmail.com. The Registration Date of the account is listed as 27JUN2017 and is listed as "active". The results also include multiple dates/times of Logins utilizing assorted IP addresses; Exhibit (23) pertains.

7. NCIS received and reviewed the DNA Report pertaining to captioned investigation from the United States Army Criminal Investigation Laboratory (USACIL). The DNA Report received identified an F2 DNA (sperm cell DNA) mixture was present on the inside crotch of the sweatpants belonging to V/S.S. S/COPELAND was identified as a contributor to this DNA mixture; Exhibit (24) pertains.

8. As if relates to this investigation, on 22Aug25, S/COPELAND was charged with violating UCMJ Article 120 (Sexual Assault - Incapable of Consenting), Article 117a (Wrongful Broadcast), Article 120c (Indecent Recording) and (Indecent Broadcasting). He was also charged with violating Article 131b (Obstruction of Justice); Exhibit (25) pertains.

9. On 28Aug25, CDR Michelle MATTHEWS, USN, Commanding Officer (CO), USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95), was updated on the status of the investigation.

10. Active investigation complete. This case is pending judicial/administrative action. Any additional investigative steps required through judicial/administrative review will be documented as appropriate; however, routine reporting is hereby suspended.

four to five (4-5) seconds. On 07JUL25, NCIS obtained and reviewed Navy Criminal Investigation Division (CID) police report #2547523001, pertaining to the reported domestic violence incident involving S/COPELAND and V/S.R. The report identified V/S.R. as the suspect and S/COPELAND as the victim, and documented Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) violations, voluntary statements, a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS), and related photographic evidence. On 16JUL25, NCIS conducted the interview of YN3 Sean MONGHAN, USN, Helicopter Mine Countermeasures Squadron 12 (HM-12). YN3 MONAGHAN reported hearing arguments between S/COPELAND and V/S.R. from the evening of 10APR25 into the early morning of 11APR25. On 19AUG25, NCIS telephonically contacted LCDR Amanda SERFESS, USN, JAGC, Defense Counsel, to inquire if she represents S/COPELAND. LCDR SERFESS stated she represents S/COPELAND and relayed he does not wish to speak to NCIS regarding the captioned investigation. On 21AUG25, NCIS conducted the administrative criminal offender processing of S/COPELAND for the offense of Article 128b (Domestic Violence) of the UCMJ. On 22AUG25, NCIS received a charge sheet from the Office of Special Trial Counsel (OSTC) indicating charges for Article 128b, UCMJ, had been preferred against S/COPELAND. On 25AUG25, NCIS conducted the interview of CS2 Joshua BRYANT, USN, DDG-95. CS2 BRYANT reported S/COPELAND and V/S.R. were romantically involved circa JAN25 and lasted approximately three to four (3-4) months. CS2 BRYANT stated S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] V/A.R. 's relationship ended when V/S.R. was transferred following the aforementioned domestic violence incident. This investigation is complete and is pending judicial/administrative action. Any additional investigative steps required through judicial or administrative review will be documented as appropriate; however, routine reporting is hereby suspended.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY
1. On 24JUN25, NCIS conducted a cold call to a phone number "[redacted]," which was located during a review of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND's (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) cellphone while investigating Reference (C). During the search of the cellphone, the phone number was thought to be a minor child based off the inference of the text messages between S/COPELAND and the phone number. NCIS ran the phone number which determined it was a VoIP number. NCIS then cold called the phone number and identified the person who answered to be [redacted] ([redacted] CIV, who was determined to be an 18-year-old female. NCIS identified themselves and asked [redacted] what information, if any, did she know about S/COPELAND. [redacted] then stated S/COPELAND had sexually assaulted her in April or May 2025. NCIS

Good Morning Dr. Gunther,

I am just following up on this. Was there a result for the escitalopram?

Thank you!

Very Respectfully,

Well, it's going to take the lab quite a while to do the escitalopram, particularly since Dr. Lameira pointed out to me that we don't have blood, just liver and muscle. I'm not sure the expensive, fast lab (NMS) will even do naproxen on liver and muscle; I think they only work on blood. So you're looking at 60 days if you want to wait for the escitalopram.

If you don't, then there is a much shorter timeline; I'll leave it up to Dr. Lameira to estimate it for you.

We can definitely ask for escitalopram, and if we have to we can send out for naproxen, but we can't do Cefpodoxime, the antibiotic.

I kind of think naproxen isn't indicated; if it's going to kill you, it does it by internal bleeding, and that wasn't part of the findings, right, Dr. Lameira?

How about if we ask our lab for escitalopram, and if it's positive, we don't do naproxen? If it's negative, the expense of outside lab can do naproxen within a couple of weeks.

Dr. Gunther

Good Afternoon Dr. Lameira and Dr. Gunther,

Thank you so much for taking the time to meet with us on Tuesday. I apologize for the delay in getting back to you, but it took some time for us to track down the specific prescriptions we'd like to have the sample tested for (if that has not already been done). They are:

- Escitalopram/Lexapro
- Cefpodoxime
- Naproxen

Thank you!

a. The mixture is interpreted as originating from three individuals.

b. Assuming COPELAND, V/A.R. is included as a contributor to the mixture.

c. This mixed DNA profile is at least 1.0 quintillion times more likely if it originated from COPELAND, V/A.R. and an unknown individual than if it originated from COPELAND and two unknown individuals.

d. The remaining partial minor contributor cannot be conclusively interpreted due to an insufficient amount of DNA detected.

e. CALISSE, GILLESPIE, GORDILLOCRUZ, MONAGHAN, RICH and WILLIAMS are excluded from the interpretable results from this mixture.

7. No DNA profile foreign to COPELAND was detected from stain 2 flat sheet/SCENE-COPELAND DESK or stain 4 flat sheet/SCENE-COPELAND DESK.

8. No DNA profiles were eligible for submission to CODIS (Combined DNA Index System).

TECHNICAL NOTES

1. DNA profiles were detected using PCR (polymerase chain reaction) technology on twenty-one autosomal STR (short tandem repeat) loci, two Y-chromosome loci (DYS391, Y-indel) and a gender identification locus from the Applied Biosystems GlobalFiler kit.

2. The autosomal STR statistical calculations in this report were generated using STRmix™ software which calculates a fully continuous probabilistic likelihood ratio (LR). Unless otherwise noted, the most conservative LR was reported using the lower bound 99% credible interval from unrelated individuals in the U.S. Caucasian, Black, and Hispanic population groups. The population allele frequencies were obtained from the NIST 1036 U.S. Population Dataset.

A likelihood ratio is a measure of the strength of support that particular findings give to one proposition against a stated alternative, given certain conditioning information. For these reported likelihood ratios, the propositions and conditioning information were based on data from these results and current case circumstances. If any aspects of the case should change or new information is provided regarding these propositions and conditioning information, then the evaluation of these results to include the likelihood ratio may change. This will be the subject of a separate report.

The reported statistical calculation for an association will be capped at 1.0 quintillion. The actual calculated value may be higher, but not less than this number, which is equivalent to the laboratory's minimum statistical threshold.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH COPELAND CSSN / E-3 U.S. NAVY	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION FOR APPROPRIATE RELIEF: ARTICLE 13, UCMJ 5 DECEMBER 2025

RESPONSE

1. The Accused's maximum confinement (MAX) status is appropriate and does not violate Article 13, UCMJ, or the Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The Accused's confinement is not unduly harsh, inflexible, or arbitrary and does not unlawfully interfere with private pretrial preparation with his Defense counsel. It is also due to a legitimate, non-punitive government interest.

2. Any interference with the attorney-client relationship is also outweighed by legitimate penological interests and is constitutional. Since 6 October 2025, the Brig has explicitly permitted contact visitation between the Accused and his counsel. It is not clear why the Defense has not availed themselves of that opportunity more regularly, but the Government is not at fault. The Government's regulations regarding contact visits between the Accused and his counsel are "reasonably related to legitimate penological interests."[1]

3. No credit beyond the day for day credit warranted under United States v. Allen[2] is appropriate.

FACTS

4. The Accused was ordered into confinement at the Naval Consolidated Brig Charleston Detachment Chesapeake (the Brig) on 9 June 2025.[3]

5. The Accused is classified as a MAX prisoner and has been since the start of his confinement.[4] MAX is defined as "[p]risoners requiring special custody supervision because of the high probability of escape or are potentially violent or dangerous, and whose escape would cause concern of a threat to life, property, or national security."[5]

1. Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 89 (1987).
2. United States v. Allen, 17 M.J. 126 (C.M.A. 1984).
3. Def. Encl. A.
4. Encl. 1.
5. Encl. 2 at 4-5 and 4-6.

6. Initially, the Accused spent 22 hours a day in his cell. As of 11 August 2025, his status was stepped down and he now spends 21 hours a day in his cell but is still in a MAX status.[6]

7. The Accused's step-down on 11 August provides him an additional hour a day outside of his cell to clean.[7] This was done to allow him an additional opportunity to prove that his behavior is improving and that re-classification may one day be appropriate.[8]

8. Approximately every 30 days, his classification is reviewed.[9] The board considers a range of factors from SECNAV M-1540.1, such as his behavior at the brig, the prisoners' civilian and military record, the seriousness of the offenses alleged, and the potential length of confinement awarded if found guilty in calculating a certain amount of points.[10] If a certain threshold is met, the recommendation for classification is reduced.[11] The OIC of Naval Consolidated Brig Chesapeake, CDR Flanagan, can "override" the classification status recommendation for an accused in pretrial confinement to increase or decrease their custody classification.[12]

9. On 11 August 2025, the C&A board recommended that the Accused remain in a MAX status, but begin the above-described step-down program.[13] The Accused then completed coursework that reduced his point total before the C&A board and the board recommended on 14 October 2025 that the Accused be reclassified to MDI status.[14] CDR Flanagan overrode that recommendation as well as a recommendation on 17 November 2025 to keep him on MAX status.[15]

10. In accordance with SECNAV policy, CDR Flanagan has overridden the classification status of the Accused because of the severity of his offenses, the potential confinement time he is facing, the nature of the offenses as violent crimes, and because of limited safety protocols at the Brig, a Level I confinement facility.[16] CDR Flanagan does not give any significant weight to a couple of minor disciplinary infractions that have occurred.[17] CDR Flanagan has no intent to punish the Accused and is trying to balance MAX status by also offering him opportunities to get out of his cell, such as the step-down program mentioned above.[18] CDR Flanagan is not aware of an appeal from the Accused regarding his classification status.[19]

11. Prior to 6 October 2025, while in MAX, the Accused was allowed visitation with his defense counsel in a no-contact booth.[20] The no-contact booth was only occupied by the attorneys and the Accused, has plexiglass in the middle with slots to pass documents between client and attorney, allows for videos to be seen by the client, and can have white noise machines placed outside of the booth to avoid conversations being overheard by anyone outside of the attorney-client conversation.[21]

12. On 2 October 2025, the Office of Special Trial Counsel made a request to CDR Flanagan for a "narrowly tailored exception" for authorized contact visitations between the Accused and his defense attorneys.[22] On 6 October 2025, CDR Flanagan approved that request.[23] This approval remains in effect. The Defense asserts a "lack of communication" has prevented meetings after 29 October 2025, but does so without citation.[24] It is unclear why the Defense has not availed themselves of this opportunity since that date.

13. Throughout the Accused's pretrial confinement, it has been possible for private phone calls with attorneys to be accommodated at any time as long as the request is made during business hours (0730-1530).[25]

14. Charges were preferred against the Accused on 22 August 2025.[26] These charges include allegations of premediated murder and violent sexual misconduct.[27] These allegations span five victims in a less than one-year period.[28]

15. Both during and after the commission of the alleged offenses, but before the imposition of pretrial confinement, the Accused searched for options to escape.[29] Specifically, he searched for directions to "Bermuda" on 29 May 2025, the date of the alleged murder, and conducted searches for "norfolk airport" and "virginia airport" in the following days.[30]

BURDEN

16. In this motion for appropriate relief, the Defense bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence and the burden of persuasion as the moving party.[31]

LAW

17. Article 13, UCMJ, provides that:

> No person, while being held for trial, may be subjected to punishment or penalty other than arrest or confinement upon charges pending against him, not shall the arrest or confinement imposed upon him be any more rigorous than the circumstances require to insure his presence, but he may be subjected to minor punishment during that period for infractions of discipline.

18. Article 13 only "prohibits two types of activities: (1) the intentional imposition of punishment on an accused prior to trial, i.e., illegal pretrial punishment; and (2) pretrial confinement conditions that are more rigorous than necessary to ensure the accused's present at trial, i.e., illegal pretrial confinement."[32] If there is no intent to punish, the court must then decide whether government action furthered a legitimate, non-punitive government interest.[33]

19. SECNAV M 1640.1, Chapter 4 (Enclosure 2), permits an override by a Brig OIC of the C&A board's classification recommendation based on alleged offenses, potential length of future sentence, and a sentence that exceeds the designated length of confinement at that particular facility, among other factors.

20. While in pretrial confinement, MAX status can be appropriate for purposes of Article 13 even if the sole reason for placement in that status is because of the seriousness of his or her offenses.[34] Indeed, "the nature and seriousness of the offenses and the corresponding length of potential confinement are relevant facts that brig officials may consider in determining whether to place a detainee in special quarters."[35] In United States v. Mosby, the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces considered if pretrial confinement in MAX status was appropriate for an accused pending a murder allegation.[36] The CAAF held the military judge did not abuse his discretion in ruling no Article 13, UCMJ violation occurred even though that confinement was based only on the alleged offense of murder.[37]

21. Somewhat separately, an accused in pretrial confinement is entitled to the appointment of military counsel regardless of status.[38] This right, particularly as it applies to this case, is guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution.[39]

22. However, that right to counsel is not absolute for prisoners in pretrial confinement. "Prison regulations that impede an inmate's constitutional rights will . . . be upheld if the regulation 'is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests.'"[40] The Supreme Court held in United States v. Turner that there are four factors to consider when assessing the reasonableness of a prison regulation:

> (1) Whether there is a valid, rational connection between the prison regulation and the legitimate governmental interest put forward to justify it,
>
> (2) whether there are alternative means of exercising the right that remain open to prison inmates,
>
> (3) the impact the asserted constitutional right will have on guards and other inmates, and on the allocation of prison resources, and
>
> (4) the existence of obvious, easy alternatives may be evidence that the regulation is not reasonable, but is an exaggerated response to prison concerns.[41]

23. All four factors are not always "equally useful nor need be applied with equal value, depending on the circumstances of the case and the regulation that is challenged."[42] This test has been applied in military courts in a variety of cases.[43]

24. In evaluating the first Turner factor, a court should only strike down a regulation when a logical connection between the regulation and asserted goal does not exist or is "so remote as to render the policy arbitrary or irrational."[44] "[An Accused's] complaint may not be plausible unless it contains specific factual allegations demonstrating why the government's justifications do not have a rational connection to the challenged restrictions."[45]

25. In considering the second Turner factor, the existence of alternative means to exercise a constitutional right means a regulation is less likely to violate the Constitution.[46] Some deference is owed corrections officials in assessing the validity of a regulation.[47] "Alternatives are interpreted broadly; if a prisoner can still exercise the asserted right in a similar, though not identical way, the prisoner's constitutional rights are preserved."[48]

26. In assessing the third Turner factor, "the right of the prisoner is weighed against the rights of other prisoners and prison employees, and where 'the right in question can be exercised only at the cost of significantly less liberty and safety for everyone else, guards and other prisoners alike, we should defer to the informed discretion of corrections officials."[49] "Deference to prison administrators is due '[w]hen allocation of resources and the ability of administrators to protect staff and detainees at the facility are at issue.'"[50] Prisons do not need to use the least-restrictive available options.[51] "The Turner analysis . . . does not invalidate a policy just because it restricts one of many forms of legal assistance.:[52]

27. And last, in reviewing the fourth factor, "if an inmate claimant can point to an alternative that fully accommodates the prisoner's rights at de minims cost to valid penological interests," the regulation may be unreasonable. "[T]he burden is on the inmate 'to point to an alternative that accommodates their rights at de minimis cost to security."[53]

28. In United States v. Moi, the United States District Court for Alaska found a difference in the adequacy of representation that occurred between a private contact visit and a visit conducted behind a plexiglass wall and that difference was an unreasonable interference on the right to counsel for inmates at a specific facility.[54] In Moi, the plexiglass barrier prevented the ability to physically exchange material and the room contained other people, including prison visitors.[55] This ruling did not specifically contemplate potentially dangerous prisoners and was instead a review of the prison's COVID protocols.[56]

ARGUMENT

29. The Brig's classification of the Accused as a MAX prisoner is not unduly harsh and is furthers a legitimate, non-punitive Government interest.

30. The Defense has not provided any evidence of an intent to punish. CDR Flanagan's override of the C&A board's recommendation is based on legitimate, non-punitive factors and procedures in SECNAV M-1640.1 and is lawful under Mosby. It is therefore related to a legitimate, non-punitive government interest. Moreover, MAX status is not more rigorous than necessary in this case.

31. The Defense boldly asserts "there is absolutely no individualized demonstration of cause warranting CSSN Copeland's continued classification as maximum custody."[57] But the Accused is charged with the most violent offense in the UCMJ and demonstrated a repeated pattern of violent, impulsive behavior spanning across five victims in the months leading up to his confinement.[58] And even then, CDR Flanagan has individually altered that MAX status for the Accused's benefit on two occasions: the step-down program and contact meetings with his attorneys. The Accused's classification as MAX is both individualized and related to a legitimate non-punitive interest.[59]

32. The Defense's citation to two trial-level rulings proves insightful here.[60] Unlike in United States v. Pate, the Accused was not reclassified after initially being classified as a different status.[61] And unlike in United States v. Reimonenq IV, the accused was not accused of physically violent, impulsive offenses. While CDR Flanagan similarly never intends to reduce the Accused's status, his basis for doing so here is based on legitimate, non-punitive government interests. The court in Reimonenq IV selectively quotes the SECNAVINST to say "[c]lassification systems must follow established, but flexible, procedures."[62] But that paragraph is about ensuring prison resources are not "waste[d]" on a large amount of MAX custody prisoners, not to ensure a specific prisoners' reduction in status.[63] And while the SECNAVINST directs that classification be reduced when "warranted," that determination is plainly that of the OICs based on the criteria the SECNAVINST goes on to list immediately thereafter.[64] Nothing in the SECNAVINST says that the brig has to allow even the most objectively dangerous offenders into general population after a period of time. And there is good reason for that. CDR Flanagan permitted a step-down on 11 August and contact visits with his counsel on 6 October to be as "flexible" as is warranted while balancing his responsibilities for the safety of the Accused, his staff, and the other prisoners at his facility. He is best positioned to make this decision and the SECNAVINST permits him to do so for legitimate, non-punitive reasons. He did here in a manner that is not more rigorous than necessary.

33. The facts here more closely mirror the CAAF's opinion in Mosby that found no Article 13, UCMJ violation occurred when a pretrial confinee was kept in a MAX status based solely on his pending murder allegation. Here, there is similarly no intent to punish and there are legitimate, non-punitive reasons for keeping a suspected highly violent offender in MAX status.

34. Additionally, there is minimal, if any, interference with the Accused's right to counsel because of that status. And any interference is outweighed by the factors in Turner and is not unduly harsh. The options available to the Defense for in-person meetings with the Accused (including restrained contact visitation) while he remains in that status are "reasonably related to legitimate penological interests."[65] All four Turner factors favor the Government.[66]

35. First, even prior to permitting in-person contact meetings the Turner factors favored the Government.

a. There was a valid, rational connection for not allowing contact visits between the Accused and his counsel. The Accused is charged with extreme instances of violent behavior, including murder and violent sexual offenses. And after he had committed his most egregious offenses, he sought to escape. MAX classification, including a limitation on contact visitation, ensured the safety of the staff and other persons and also worked to prevent any escape opportunities. The Accused was also kept in this status for only a reasonable period of time.

b. There were alternative means of exercising the Accused's right to confer with his counsel in private. In addition to phone calls, the Brig was willing to facilitate meetings behind plexiglass that still allow for the transfer of documentation and full privacy, unlike in Moi. The Brig was also willing to provide white noise outside of the room to ensure no communications were overheard. While not identical to a contact meeting, any interference with the attorney-client relationship was minimal and should not overcome the discretion given to prison officials.

c. "Deference to prison administrators is due '[w]hen allocation of resources and the ability of administrators to protect staff and detainees at the facility are at issue.'[67] Unlike in Moi, the Accused is an alleged highly violent offender and requires additional security measures for a contact visit. Deference should be given to prison administration officials for their justified delay in permitting an exception to this policy.

d. Contact visits were not an easy alternative for the same safety concerns noted above.

36. In summary, any differences between a non-contact visit under these circumstances and a contact visit were minimal. That minimal difference was vastly outweighed when considering the Tucker factors. The restrictions in place were also "reasonably related to legitimate penological interests" and are not intended to punish.[68] As such, there was no constitutional violation or violation of Article 13, UCMJ.

65. Turner, 482 U.S. at 89.
66. Id.
67. Moi, 2021 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 171470 at *26.
68. Turner, 482 U.S. at 89.

37. Second, the Turner factors only continue to favor the Government after the Brig made an exception to policy to permit in-person, restrained contact meetings on 6 October 2025.

a. There is a valid, rational connection for not allowing unrestrained contact visits between the Accused and his counsel. The Accused is charged with extreme instances of violent behavior, including murder and violent sexual offenses. And after he had committed his most egregious offenses, he sought to escape. Permitting only restrained contact visitation ensures the safety of the staff and other persons and also works to prevent any escape opportunities.

b. There are alternative means of exercising the Accused's right to confer with his counsel in private. In addition to phone calls, the Brig is willing to facilitate private contact meetings as long as the Accused remains restrained. The Brig is also willing to provide white noise outside of the room to ensure no communications are overheard. Any interference with the attorney-client relationship for a meeting of this type is minimal and should not overcome the discretion given to prison officials. It is not clear why the Defense has not met with their client since 29 October 2025, but this is not due to Government action.

c. "Deference to prison administrators is due '[w]hen allocation of resources and the ability of administrators to protect staff and detainees at the facility are at issue.'[69] The Accused is an alleged highly violent offender and would require additional security measures for an unrestrained contact visit. Deference should be given to prison administration officials here.

d. Unrestrained contact visits are not an easy alternative to the permitted restrained contact visits that have been approved for the same safety concerns noted above. This is not an exaggerated response.

38. In summary, any differences between a restrained contact visit under these circumstances and an unrestrained contact visit are infinitely minimal. That minimal difference is vastly outweighed when considering the Tucker factors. The restrictions in place are "reasonably related to legitimate penological interests" and are not intended to punish.[70] There is no violation of the Constitution or Article 13, UCMJ occurring.

39. Neither the pre-6 October 2025 nor post-6 October 2025 limitations on attorney-client meetings were unduly harsh. There is no evidence of an intent to punish and the Accused's MAX status is in furtherance of legitimate, non-punitive penological interests.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH COPELAND CSSN / E-3 U.S. NAVY	GOVERNMENT SUPPLEMTNAL RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION FOR APPROPRIATE RELIEF: ARTICLE 13, UCMJ 29 MAY 2026

RESPONSE

1. The Accused's maximum confinement (MAX) status is appropriate and does not violate Article 13, UCMJ. No credit beyond the day for day credit warranted under United States v. Allen[1] is appropriate.

2. Critically, the CAAF held in United States v. Mosby[2] that solitary pretrial confinement can be appropriate based on a charge for murder alone. There is no reason to deviate from this binding precedent, particularly as in this case where the allegations are more egregious and the Accused has demonstrated insubordinate and alarming behavior while in pretrial confinement. As this Court ruled previously in considering contact visits between the Accused and his counsel, "the Government demonstrated a sufficient connection between the restrictions placed upon the Accused and the legitimate security and safety concerns the Brig leadership has" in making those decisions.[3] This finding should be applied again to Defense's now renewed request for relief from the brig's lawful security decision making. The Accused's pretrial confinement is not punitive and is related to legitimate, nonpunitive government objective. As such, there is no violation of Article 13.

FACTS

3. This filing adopts the facts from the Government's previous filing on this issue and related issues.[4]

4. The Defense's assertion that the Brig OIC has only continued to override reclassification boards is incorrect.[5] The 26 March 2026 C&A Board elevated the point total for the Accused

1. United States v. Allen, 17 M.J. 126 (C.M.A. 1984).
2. United States v. Mosby, 56 M.J. 309, 310-11 (C.A.A.F. 2002).

and recommended continued MAX confinement.[6] This increase in points occurred because of disciplinary issues and below average work performance, detailed below and in Appellate Exhibit XC.[7] The same result occurred at the 29 April 2026 C&A Board.[8] Because of these findings, no override of the points system was necessary to maintain a MAX custody classification.

5. On 5 March 2026, brig staff observed bloody tissues on the sink that's located in the front right section of the cell.[9]

6. On 22 March 2026, blood was again found in CSSN Copeland's cell. CSSN Copeland provided it had come from his hands.[10]

7. On 14 April 2026, two separate pools of blood were discovered at the bottom of the door frame of CSSN Copeland's cell.[11]

8. On 22 April, CSSN Copeland stated he had not been going to recreation call or doing personal time because "it feels like an inconvenience."[12]

BURDEN

9. In this motion for appropriate relief, the Defense bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence and the burden of persuasion as the moving party.[13]

LAW

10. The Government adopts the law from Appellate Exhibits XLVIII and XC.

11. In assessing Article 13, "the question of whether particular conditions amount to punishment before trial is a matter of intent, which is determined by examining the purposes served by the restriction or condition, and whether such purposes are 'reasonably related to a legitimate governmental objective.' [I]n the absence of a showing of intent to punish, a court must look to see if a particular restriction or condition, which may on its face appear to be punishment, is instead but an incident of a legitimate nonpunitive governmental objective."[14]

12. In United States v. Mosby, the CAAF held that placement in pretrial solitary confinement did not warrant additional confinement credit even when the sole reason for that confinement was the Accused's alleged misconduct. In Mosby, the Accused was placed in pretrial confinement after he was alleged to have "lost his temper and struck his 5 week-old baby's head against a coffee table and against his own knee."[15] There was also evidence "indicating a possible prior assault on the child" as well as evidence that "the confinee has trouble controlling his temper."[16] During his time in pretrial confinement, the accused was in solitary confinement. The military judge limited his decision to not award pretrial confinement credit for that solitary confinement to these facts.[17]

13. The CAAF held that the military judge's ruling was not an abuse of direction.[18] Specifically, the CAAF found that the military judge's decision to not award credit under Article 13 when the only evidence of intent to punish was placement in pretrial solitary confinement based on the alleged offenses alone was not an abuse of discretion.[19] The CAAF also found that the confinement officials' decision on this point was also appropriate.[20]

ARGUMENT

14. The Accused is not entitled to additional pretrial confinement credit as there is no evidence of an intent to punish and the Accused's placement in MAX furthers a legitimate, non-punitive Government interest.

15. Primarily, there is no evidence of an intent to punish the Accused by placing him in a MAX status. In Mosby, the CAAF found no abuse of discretion when the accused was placed into pretrial solitary confinement based solely on his alleged misconduct. Here, the Accused's misconduct is more severe than that in Mosby. Not only did the Accused murder another adult Sailor, he demonstrated a history over the 11 months prior to that murder of escalating, impulsive, violent misconduct, including two separate allegations of strangulation prior to the murder.

16. As in Mosby, the Accused's placement in MAX due to his alleged misconduct is not evidence of intent to punish. As the CAAF held in Mosby (and contrary to the assertions of the Defense), MAX classification based on an allegation of murder is entirely appropriate.[21] The Defense's repeated assertions otherwise should not be persuasive—they have failed to distinguish this precedent (and have failed to mention it at all).[22]

17. And even despite this lawful basis for solitary confinement, CDR Flanagan has demonstrated flexibility throughout the Accused's pretrial confinement. He has allowed the Accused additional time out of his cell and allowed contact visits with his attorneys and experts when appropriate—even in the face of documented misconduct by the Accused since he has been confined.

18. There is also no basis to believe CDR Flanagan is punishing the Accused because of the actions of his counsel as suggested by the Defense. Any statements from CDR Flanagan in properly educating defense counsel on the law and his authority as the Brig OIC are entirely appropriate. Simply because Defense did not get from the brig what they demanded, does not equate to a personal animus against defense counsel. CDR Flanagan, as the OIC, is tasked with the safety and security of all personnel under his authority. He makes fact-specific individualized risk assessments for pretrial prisoners and these decisions are not related to punishment. As this Court recently ruled, the Brig's actions towards the Accused specific to his meetings with counsel have been lawful. Repeated attempts by defense counsel to personally challenge CDR Flanagan's authority on these matters are both incorrect and inappropriate, but are not cause for animus against their client.

19. Of note, the Accused has proven the precautions taken by CDR Flanagan and authorized by the CAAF in Mosby to be fortuitous. Since being confined, the Accused has harmed himself and been insubordinate. He also has stated he could create a weapon and threatened that he would "lose it" eventually.[23] MAX status is completely appropriate.

20. Moreover, the Brig's classification of the Accused as a MAX prisoner furthers a legitimate, non-punitive Government interest. As this Court ruled in a related motion specific to the Brig's restrictions on the Accused meeting with his counsel in a contact setting, "the Government demonstrated a sufficient connection between the restrictions placed upon the Accused and the legitimate security and safety concerns the Brig leadership has" in making those decisions.[24] The Brigs legitimate concerns are not limited to only his interactions with counsel, but all personnel in the Brig. As such, there should be no doubt these MAX restrictions as a whole are appropriate and advance a legitimate, non-punitive government interest.

21. In conclusion, if the Accused was confined and placed in solitary pretrial confinement based on allegation of jaywalking, there would be a basis to suggest Article 13 has been violated. But the Accused is in pretrial confinement for a horrific murder that served as the exclamation point on an escalating series of impulsive, violent, and life-threatening actions. Even more so than in Mosby, the Accused's continued MAX status based on these allegations—let alone his behavior while in the brig— is not a violation of Article 13. These restrictions are instead merely the product of "legitimate security and safety concerns the Brig leadership has."[25]

REQUESTED RELIEF

22. The Government respectfully requests that the Court deny the Defense's motion for appropriate relief. The Accused is entitled to 366 days on confinement credit for his time in pretrial confinement.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JEREMIAH COPELAND CSSN/ E-3 USN	R.C.M. 701(a) DISCLOSURE

On 2 September 2025, CDR Lauren Mayo and LT Christopher Dempsey, JAGC, USN, interviewed CDR Brian Flanagan, USN, in the presence of Ms. Sharell Welch, RSC(AW) Amanda Cole, USN and LN1 Kathleen Vanetti, USN at RLSO MIDLANT. The following is a summary of the interaction and is not intended to be verbatim:

CDR Flanagan explained that CSSN COPELAND is currently in a maximum security confinement status (MAX), with some special conditions. As such, COPELAND is permitted to be out of his cell for three hours a day; one hour to clean the p-way and showers, one hour for personal time, and one hour for recreation. The hour to clean is a recent addition and is considered a "step down" from his full MAX status and is permitted without supervision. This began on 11 August 2025. Prior to 11 August, he spent 22 hours a day in his cell.

While in MAX, he is allowed phone calls and visitation by his defense counsel in a no-contact booth in addition to the three hours he is normally allowed out of his cell. The no-contact room is private, has plexi-glass with slots to allow the parties to pass documents between client and attorney, allows for videos to be seen by the client, and can have white noise machines placed outside of the room to further ensure conversations cannot be overheard by anyone outside of the attorney-client privilege relationship. Any phone call requests made by the defense attorney during business hours (between 0730 and 1530) will be accommodated, even if the requested call time is outside of business hours.

In accordance with the Chesapeake Brig Standard Operating Procedures (SOP) and the SECNAVMAN-1640.1, contact visits between COPELAND and defense counsel would not be permitted while he is in a MAX status. Every 30 days, COPELAND may participate in a C&A Board that evaluates his security risk as a prisoner, and makes recommendations to the OIC, CDR Flanagan, as to any changes to COPELAND's security status. COPELAND has participated in the last two C&A Boards, and was informed that he has the right to appeal the determination of the C&A Board. COPELAND has not appealed any of the determinations of the C&A Board (which have kept him in a MAX status).

CDR Flanagan reported that there have not been any behavioral issues with COPELAND and that he has attended at least one class while at the Brig. In addition to his behavior at the brig, the C&A Board must consider factors such as the prisoners' civilian and military record, the seriousness of the offenses alleged, and the potential length of confinement awarded if found guilty in calculating a certain amount of points. Once a certain point threshold is met, the classification status can change. CDR Flanagan can override the decision of the C&A Board under limited circumstances. CDR Flanagan did not foreclose the opportunity that COPELAND may be able to leave MAX at some point based on consideration of these factors even with the charges he is facing. However, he acknowledge reclassification is unlikely. He explained that the opportunity for an hour to clean the p-way and his shower was a recent step down to allow COPELAND an opportunity to prove his good behavior. A recommendation from the trial counsel would not influence the brig's decision on classification.

CDR Flanagan expressed a separate concern that the general population of the Chesapeake Brig has been exposed to the local news and he has some concern for COPELAND's safety if COPELAND were to be moved to general population based on the news coverage his case has attracted.

To date, Defense Counsel has not requested to use a white noise machine during visits with COPELAND at the brig. The email sent by Defense Counsel that asked about having COPELAND attend a meeting at the Defense Service Office was responded to with a logistical explanation of such a movement, as well as what accommodations were available within the Brig for a meeting that ensured attorney-client privilege. If the command decided that such a meeting was appropriate, the Brig would not be able to prevent the command from taking COPELAND to meet with his counsel at a separate location.

Chapter 4: Control, Security, and Emergencies

Section 1. Prisoner Accountability System

4101. Master Control Center Function

1. The control center is the focal point for all military correctional facility (MCF) security and control operations. The control center must be utilized for 24-hour continuously staffed monitoring and coordinating of the MCF's security, life, safety, and communications systems. It is here that all prisoner movements are directed, controlled, and accounted for; that all active keys are controlled and accounted for; where the entry and exit of all prisoners, staff, and visitors are controlled; and where emergency equipment may be stored. Main communications terminals, both regular and emergency, are located in the control center. Outside telephone switchboards will not be operated from the control center during normal daytime working hours. Master count records and the brig log are maintained in the control center and the reports of daily counts are prepared and verified there.

2. The control center must be manned and its security integrity maintained at all times. Access to the control center will be limited to only authorized personnel designated in writing by the brig officer. Prisoners must not be allowed access to the control center under any circumstances.

4102. Control Center Accountability Systems

1. Certain basic information must be maintained and controlled to ensure adequate accountability of prisoners at all times. Accountability systems will be controlled and maintained in the control center. The extent of these systems will be tailored to meet local needs. Many required accountability forms and reports, required per reference (z) and this manual, can be generated and accessed by utilizing the Correctional Management Information System (CORMIS) or its electronic equivalent.

2. Accountability System Elements

a. DD 2707 Confinement Order. A copy of the confinement order will be delivered to the control center by the Receiving and Release (R&R) supervisor immediately upon receipt of a new prisoner. The control center supervisor will make necessary adjustments to count records and the brig log.

b. Prisoner Identification Badge. Four prisoner identification badges will be created by R&R upon arrival of a new prisoner. A badge is given to the prisoner. A badge is forwarded to the supervisor responsible for records management for inclusion in the prisoner's individual confinement record. A badge is forwarded to the control center for inclusion in the control center's master file. A badge is forwarded to the prisoner's quarters supervisor. The control center will maintain their copies of prisoner identification badges in alphabetical order and in a readily visible file in the control center. New badges will be added only when new prisoners are received and those on file will be removed from the master file only upon receipt of an updated prisoner badge or an executed DD 2718 Prisoner Release Order. Removed badges will be forwarded to the supervisor responsible for records management.

c. Quarters Assignment Record. This record will follow the living quarters configuration of the MCF and show where each prisoner is specifically assigned (rack or cell). This billeting information will also be maintained in CORMIS or its electronic equivalent.

d. Work Assignment Record. This record is established to accommodate local work assignments for quick verification of work detail and location of the prisoner. Work assignment information will also be maintained in CORMIS or its electronic equivalent.

e. Out-Count Record. Format may be a wall chart or a log that, at a minimum, has the prisoner's name, status, custody, destination, and departure time.

f. Daily Change Sheet (DCS). Initiated by the classification and adjustment (C&A) board, a listing of all authorized changes of status, custody, program, billeting, and work assignments must be prepared each workday. The DCS must be authenticated by the brig officer's signature and distributed to applicable posts. All housing moves, except emergencies, must be accomplished in conjunction with the DCS.

g. Daily Appointment Sheet. A daily appointment sheet will be prepared listing all authorized prisoner appointments for the following workday (e.g.; medical appointments, legal appointments, etc.) and distributed to all applicable posts. The daily appointment sheet will list prisoner name, date and time of the appointment, appointment location, and any other relevant information (e.g.; escorts' names for outside agency escorts, uniform, fasting required for medical). This may be generated by CORMIS or its electronic equivalent from data previously entered.

h. DD 2718 Prisoner Release Order. A copy of an executed release order will be delivered to the control center for verification, log entries, and updating the count log.

i. Brig Log. The brig log is the permanent record of daily and historical events and other significant events of the operation of the MCF. It will be maintained in the control center and reviewed and countersigned by the command duty officer (CDO) or duty brig supervisor (DBS) at the conclusion of each shift. An accurate running count must be included in this log. Refer to section 8104 of this manual for other pertinent information to be logged in the brig log. Where authorized by Bureau of Naval Personnel Corrections and Programs Office (BUPERS-00D) and Deputy Commandant of the Marine Corps (Plans, Policies, and Operations (DC PPO)), an electronic brig log may be maintained.

4103. Counts

1. A minimum of three formal scheduled prisoner counts must be made daily (reveille, end of workday, and taps). More frequent and informal counts may be required depending on prisoner population and physical characteristics of the MCF; however, the frequency of counts will not unduly interfere with normal workday activity. In addition to scheduled counts, work supervisors and quarters supervisors shall be required to make irregular but frequent checks of all prisoners under their supervision, the frequency of checks shall not exceed one hour. There must be periodic bed checks of all prisoners during the night; however, prisoners must not be awakened for this purpose and silent counts will be used. Routine formal counts will be scheduled at times that will not interfere with work, training, sleep, or recreation schedules. Results and times of all counts

(i.e.; scheduled, unscheduled, or others directed by local policy) must be entered into the brig log.

2. Brig officers will develop, publish, and train staff to conduct count.

3. Under no circumstances will prisoners assist staff with count.

4. Unscheduled counts may be conducted whenever deemed necessary.

5. The control center will verify prisoner accountability, by telephone, the presence of all overnight temporary absences during regularly scheduled counts.

4104. Prisoner Movement

1. Activities and movements of prisoners must be controlled, orderly, punctual, and well supervised.

2. Prisoner passes or electronic prisoner tracking systems (e.g., biometrics) will be used in MCFs to control unescorted prisoner movements (exceptions may be made for installation custody prisoners). Either system will be used for instances which require prisoners to leave their regular details. Strict control of either system must be maintained. All staff and prisoners must be instructed in the operation of the MCF prisoner movement system and procedures.

3. In lieu of an Armed Forces identification card, installation custody prisoners will carry a DD 512 Installation Custody Agreement describing their status and limits of movement when outside of the security perimeter of the MCF.

4105. Sally Port Operations

1. A sally port is basic to the secure operation of any MCF. Used properly, it affords security and control over entry to and exit from the MCF.

2. The following procedures must be followed in sally port operations:

a. Provisions will be made to prevent two doors or gates from being inadvertently opened at the same time;

b. If sally port doors or gates are electrically operated, the controls will be located inside the control center or within a secure post that has an unobstructed view of the sally port; and

c. If the sally port is used primarily for vehicles, it must be constructed so the largest vehicle entering can be contained inside with both gates closed. Ensure that any prisoners accompanying a vehicle have been properly logged out of the MCF by the control center supervisor. All vehicles entering and exiting a sally port must be searched for contraband and prisoner escape attempts.

Section 2. Prisoner Custody Classification

4201. Purpose and Definitions

1. Purpose. Custody classifications establish the degree of supervision and restraint needed for control of individual prisoners. Custody classification allows for and supports graduated release through a systematic decrease in supervision and a corresponding increase in prisoner responsibility as part of the classification program. Custody classifications provide guidance for supervision of prisoners and permit establishment of security measures consistent with requirements of the individual. Where there is fair and impartial treatment, prisoners generally present no serious disciplinary problems. There are some prisoners, however, who can be uncooperative or aggressive. Efforts must be made to identify all special cases and control measures instituted to ensure the safe and orderly administration of the MCF. An objective-based custody classification process that addresses the characteristics of the prisoners must be used per reference (z) and this manual. CORMIS, which incorporates the objective-based classification process, or CORMIS' electronic equivalent, will be employed.

2. Classification Definitions. Every prisoner must be assigned one of the following custody classifications:

a. Maximum Custody (MAX). Prisoners requiring special custodial supervision because of the high probability of escape or are potentially violent or dangerous, and whose escape would cause concern of a threat to life, property, or national security. Ordinarily, only a small percentage of prisoners will be classified as MAX.

(1) Supervision. When inside their cell, observation checks by MCF staff will be at irregular intervals not to exceed 15 minutes. DD 509 Inspection Record of Prisoner in Segregation must be posted outside the cell door and appropriate entries made at least every 15 minutes. Two or more staff members must be present when MAX prisoners are out of their cell or the cell door is opened, and supervision must be immediate (e.g., near at hand or close proximity) and continuous (e.g., without loss or interval of time) unless physical plant design negates this requirement. Camera cells may be utilized for constant observation but do not replace the requirement for staff to physically view the prisoner in the prisoner's cell.

(2) Work. MAX prisoners will not be assigned to work details outside of their cell.

(3) Quarters. MAX prisoners must be assigned to the restricted housing unit (RHU).

(4) Restraints and Escorts

(a) MAX prisoners must wear hand-irons when outside of their cells in the RHU, unless the facility's design supports security and control, negating this requirement.

(b) Max prisoners must wear full restraints (hand irons, transport belt, and leg irons) and be escorted by a minimum of two escorts at all times when outside the RHU area. Exceptions may only be made for exigent circumstances (fire or safety) or on a case-by-case basis (court appearance or military judge ordered). The brig officer or designee will be notified of any request to remove restraints.

b. Medium Custody In (MDI). Prisoners who present security risks not warranting MAX.

(1) Supervision. Direct supervision within the security perimeter, and immediate and continuous when outside the security perimeter.

(2) Work. MDI prisoners must not be assigned to work details outside the security perimeter.

(3) Quarters. MDI prisoners will normally be assigned to general population housing where direct supervision is required.

(4) Restraints and Escorts

(a) MDI prisoners will not normally wear restraints inside the security perimeter. Any MDI prisoner required to wear restraints inside the security perimeter will be assigned to the RHU.

(b) MDI prisoners must wear hand irons and a transport belt at a minimum when outside the security perimeter unless the brig officer or designee directs otherwise. Escorts will carry leg irons.

(c) MDI prisoners must be escorted by at least two escorts at all times outside the security perimeter. When transporting multiple MDI prisoners, the brig officer or designee may direct only one escort be required for each additional MDI prisoner. Exceptions may only be made for exigent circumstances (fire or safety) or on a case-by-case basis (court appearance or military judge ordered). The brig officer or designee (senior security personnel) will be notified of any request to remove restraints.

c. Medium Custody Out (MDO). Prisoners who present security risks not warranting MDI.

(1) Supervision. Direct supervision within the security perimeter, and immediate and continuous when outside the security perimeter.

(2) Work. MDO prisoners may be assigned to work details inside or outside the security perimeter.

(3) Quarters. MDO prisoners will normally be assigned to general population housing where direct supervision is required.

(4) Restraints and Escorts

(a) MDO prisoners are not required to wear restraints while inside or outside the security perimeter. Escorts will carry hand irons when escorting MDO prisoners outside of the security perimeter.

(b) MDO prisoners require at least one escort when outside the security perimeter. Working party and other escort ratios will be determined by the brig officer or designee when escorted by MCF staff. Escort ratios for command escorts must be no less than one escort per five MDO prisoners.

d. Minimum Custody (MIN). Prisoners who present security risks not warranting higher classifications.

(1) Supervision. Will be occasional (periodic, situational dependent, and accountable as necessary by supervisory staff) within the security perimeter or outside the security perimeter.

(2) Work. MIN prisoners are normally assigned work outside the security perimeter.

(3) Quarters. MIN prisoners will normally be assigned to general population housing.

(4) Restraints and Escorts

(a) MIN prisoners are not required to wear restraints while inside or outside the security perimeter. Escorts will carry hand irons when escorting MIN prisoners outside of the security perimeter.

(b) MIN prisoners will require at least one escort when outside the security perimeter. Working party and other escort ratios will be determined by the brig officer or designee when escorted by MCF staff. Escort ratios for command escorts must be no less than 1 escort per 10 MIN prisoners.

e. Installation Custody (IC). Prisoners who present minimal security risks not warranting higher classifications.

(1) Supervision. Require only limited supervision. They may work and move about much the same as individuals in normal duty status.

(2) Work. IC prisoners are normally assigned work outside the security perimeter.

(3) Quarters. IC prisoners normally will be assigned to general population housing but may be housed outside the security perimeter.

(4) Restraints and Escorts

(a) IC prisoners are not required to wear restraints while inside or outside the security perimeter.

(b) IC prisoners normally will not require escorts when outside the security perimeter.

(5) Selection Criteria for IC

(a) Have completed at least one half of the confinement adjudged or the convening authority has taken action, whichever occurs first.

(b) Not more than 12 months from adjusted minimum release date or approved supervised release date.

(c) Consideration must be taken into account as to the nature of offense and applicable Federal, State, and local laws concerning unsupervised release for work and recreation into local geographical areas (especially those areas with schools, daycare centers, housing, etc.).

(d) Have not been removed previously from this custody for cause.

(e) IC prisoners must sign DD 512 Installation Custody Agreement and carry it with them at all times when outside the MCF's security perimeter. A locally prepared agreement listing the limitations on movement outside the MCF must be agreed to, signed by IC prisoners, and countersigned by the MCF commanding officer (CO). The DD 512 will be turned in and checked out from the R&R supervisor as required.

Assignments will depend on the ability to handle responsibility and, whenever possible, be commensurate to the prisoner's previous training, skill, needs of the Service, and potential training value to the prisoner.

(6) Additional Privileges. Additional privileges such as attending the installation theater, library, sports events or similar activities, and messing sequence may be authorized by the MCF CO.

4202. Classification Criteria

1. Custody classification will be based on the amount of supervision and restraint each prisoner requires.

2. All new prisoners, except those specifically deemed serious management problems, must be assigned an MDI custody classification during the reception phase. Pretrial prisoners must not be assigned any custody classification except MDI or MAX.

3. Ultra-conservative custody classification results in a waste of prisoner and staff manpower. A large number of MAX and MDI prisoners reduces the number of staff available for supervision of the kinds of productive work available to lower custody classifications. Classification systems must follow established, but flexible, procedures.

4. Prisoners will be placed in a lower custody classification as soon as practical and as warranted.

5. Override of the Objective-Based Screening Decision

a. The below factors, though not all-inclusive, are considered in assessing whether to override the objective-based classification system to increase a prisoner’s custody:

(1) Assaultive behavior;

(2) Disruptive behavior;

(3) Serious drug abuse;

(4) Serious civil or military criminal record (convicted or alleged);

(5) Low tolerance of frustration;

(6) Intensive acting out or dislike of the military;

(7) History of previous escape(s);

(8) Pending civil charges or detainers filed;

(9) Serving a sentence that the individual considers unjust or severe;

(10) Poor home conditions or family relationships;

(11) Emotional or mental instability;

(12) Indication of unwillingness to accept responsibility for personal actions, past and present;

(13) Demonstrated pattern of poor judgment;

(14) Length, or potential length, of sentence;

(15) Gang affiliation or ties with disruptive organizations;

(16) Awaiting transfer;

(17) A sentence length exceeding the designated length of confinement authorized at the MCF; and

(18) Refusal to accept or participate in recommended treatment or education programs.

b. The below factors, though not all-inclusive, are considered in assessing whether to override the objective-based classification system to decrease a prisoner's custody:

(1) Clear military record, aside from present offense;

(2) Close family ties - good home conditions;

(3) The offense(s) charged is not serious;

(4) Emotional and mental stability;

(5) Comparatively short sentence to confinement; however, length of sentence will not be a sole overriding factor;

(6) Behavior during confinement, and

(7) Successful completion of, or active participation in, offense-related treatment programs or groups.

c. The factors mentioned above are only indicators, not ironclad rules; therefore, the brig officer will consider objective-based overrides where applicable. An evaluation of all phases of the prisoner's performance will be made prior to each custody change. By following the criteria and concepts outlined in this chapter, the brig officer should be able to make more efficient use of staff and provide an atmosphere in which rehabilitative efforts will be more effective.

6. Adult Internal Management System (AIMS). An AIMS classification will be determined for each prisoner confined in level II MCFs. This is a five-level classification of prisoners based on aggressiveness of personality and methods of problem management used by an individual. AIMS is never used for custody or incentive determination but is very useful for housing and programming prisoners together in order to maximize their opportunities to succeed and to utilize programs offered. Each C&A Board will consider (but not be bound by) a prisoner's AIMS classification in assignment of berthing, program, and work assignment. AIMS classification is applicable only to male prisoners. AIMS is integrated within CORMIS or its electronic equivalent.

4203. Evaluation of Prisoners

1. All members supervising prisoners will be responsible for evaluating prisoners and must submit periodic written reports on their performance. Quarters supervisors and work supervisors will complete a prisoner evaluation, no less than monthly, to show levels of performance on a continuing basis. The evaluation must be submitted on DD 2712 Prisoner Evaluation.

2. A prisoner program plan must be developed for each post-trial prisoner to identify and prioritize all required and recommended correctional programs. The program plan will serve as the central source for documenting program progress and completion. The prisoner program plan should take into account the prisoner's sentence length, confining offense(s), needs, and program sequence.

3. Each staff member has responsibility for communicating information concerning prisoners to the proper authority in the MCF. The behavior and attitude of the prisoner in living quarters, at work, in recreation, and in a classroom provides a good overall indicator of problem areas and adjustment progress. Continuous documented staff evaluation of each prisoner cannot be overemphasized.

4204. C&A Board and Unit Team Management (UTM)

1. The C&A board will establish a prisoner's custody classification using objective-based classification or reclassification procedures. When the C&A Board convenes to develop prisoner classification and assignment, it will be composed of the brig officer, or designated representative, and members from varying departments of the MCF as appointed in writing by the MCF CO. At a minimum, the C&A Board must be comprised of a chairperson and no fewer than two additional members to ensure a multi-disciplinary perspective. See article 6401 of this manual for program functions of the C&A Board.

2. UTM. Level II MCFs may utilize UTM principles in the operation of their C&A boards. Unit teams oversee prisoner program plans, custody classification, incentive levels, and counseling on a routine basis. Unit teams are comprised, at a minimum, of a unit manager, case manager or counselor, leading chief petty officer or leading petty officer (or Military Service equivalent), and quarters supervisor(s).

4205. Quarters

1. General Population Quarters

a. To the largest extent that design and staffing allow, newly confined prisoners generally will be housed in an orientation quarters, that may be located in the RHU, and administered separately from post-orientation prisoners. During reception processing and orientation, prisoners will be objectively evaluated and a custody classification assigned prior to transfer to the general population.

b. Although preferred, there is no requirement that prisoners of different legal status (pretrial or post-trial) be berthed separately. Separation of prisoners may be by custody or AIMS classification or both (see article 4202.6 of this manual). Optimum situations permit housing different custody classification prisoners in different and separate areas. In many MCFs, practicality dictates commingling of prisoners in the same quarters; however, every effort will be made to maintain separate berthing where possible and when staffing allows. Direct supervision is required in general population housing.

2. RHU

a. The RHU provides living conditions similar to those of the general population; all exceptions will be clearly documented. RHU cells will be designed to permit prisoners to converse with and be observed by staff members. Prisoners are assigned to the RHU by the brig officer or designee and will not have normal privileges restricted unless privileges must be withheld for reasons of security or prisoner safety. In these cases, all restrictions must be documented on a special handling letter and signed by the brig officer or designee.

b. Definitions of Segregation Categories. Abbreviated segregation statuses listed below align with those in CORMIS or its electronic equivalent.

(1) Administrative Segregation (AS). A form of separation from the general population when the presence of the prisoner in general population poses a serious threat to life, property, self, staff, or other prisoners, or to the good order and discipline of the MCF. This segregation category is administrative in nature and may be for relatively extensive periods of time. Sub-categories of AS coincide with housing assignments in CORMIS or its electronic equivalent. Assignment to and removal from AS is authorized by the brig officer or designee.

(a) Medical Segregation (MED). MED is utilized for medical reasons.

(b) Prevention of Injury (POI). POI may be recommended by clinical, medical, CDO or DBS.

(c) Suicide Risk (SR)

1. Prisoners who are considered suicidal must be immediately referred to the medical department, clinical services, or mental health department for further evaluation and appropriate action, which may include hospitalization. References (aa) and (ab) provide guidelines in cases involving emergencies, specialized treatment or evaluation, or psychiatric treatment that cannot be deferred.

2. Such prisoners are normally hospitalized, but if not, the prisoner must be placed in the status of "SR" for continuous observation.

3. SR prisoners must be under continuous observation. Direct physical observation must be by a staff member and considered a primary duty. For documentation purposes, a logbook must be maintained by the staff observer (prisoner's name, date, observer, time the observer took over and ended the shift to include relief, and behavioral remarks as applicable). Annotation on the prisoner's DD 509 Inspection Record of Prisoner in Segregation will be made every 5 minutes. Supplemental (physical) sighting of and visit to suicide risk prisoners will be officially recorded on DD 509 and include date, time, name of visitor, and any appropriate remarks.

4. At levels II and III MCFs, a suicide watch companion program may be authorized by BUPERS-00D or DC PPO.

5. The brig officer or designee may direct removal of a prisoner's clothing and replacement with a suicide protection smock or privacy gown, or approved suicide blanket when deemed necessary by medical, clinical, or the CDO or DBS.

6. When no longer considered to be a suicide risk by medical officers, psychiatrists, doctoral-level clinical psychologists, or doctoral-level clinical social workers with clinical practice privileges, prisoners will be returned or stepped-down to POI or placed back in appropriate quarters.

(d) Escape Risk (ER). ER may be recommended by CDO or DBS or by the C&A Board due to seriousness of offense, misconduct while in confinement, or confinement capabilities.

(e) Potentially Violent or Dangerous (PVD). PVD may be recommended by CDO or DBS or by the C&A Board due to seriousness of offense, confinement capabilities, or dangerous conduct previously in general population.

(f) Pending Investigation (PI). PI may be recommended if the prisoner cannot be left in general population during an investigation.

(g) Loss of Privileges (LOP). LOP is used only when necessary to enforce loss of certain privileges requiring the prisoner to be housed in the RHU. LOP can also be served in general population based on the magnitude of the lost privileges.

(h) Awaiting Transfer (AT). A prisoner may be placed in AT when waiting to transfer to another facility.

(i) Protective Custody (PC). PC is a form of separation from the general population for prisoners requesting or requiring protection from other prisoners for reasons of health and safety. Admission to PC, to include rationale, must be fully documented with a consent form signed by the prisoner. Assignment to and removal from PC may be authorized by the brig officer or designee.

(j) Indoctrination (INDOC). Newly arriving prisoners assigned to the orientation program will normally be berthed in RHU on INDOC status until medically and clinically cleared to join general population.

(2) Disciplinary Segregation (DS). A form of separation from the general population directed by the approving authority after due process, in which prisoners committing violations of conduct, considered serious from an institutional standpoint, are housed within the RHU.

3. Procedures

a. Assignment to the RHU is not a punitive measure, except for DS, and must not be used as such. Prisoners must be aware of the reason they are assigned to the RHU and acknowledge in writing the limitations of their assigned status. All authorized special handling instructions that impact prisoners in the RHU must be annotated on a special handling letter.

b. When a prisoner is transferred to the RHU, health care staff will be informed immediately and will provide a screening and review as indicated by the protocols established by the health authority. Unless medical attention is needed more frequently, each prisoner in the RHU will receive a daily visit from a qualified health care professional. The visit ensures that offenders have access to the health care system. The presence of a health care provider in the RHU will be recorded on DD 509. The frequency of physician visits to the RHU is determined by the health authority.

c. All prisoners in the RHU will be under direct supervision. They will be sighted at least once every 15 minutes by a staff member and will be visited daily by members of the programs staff and the brig officer or designee. In addition, it is highly desirable that prisoners in the RHU be visited daily by a chaplain. Prisoners who are violent or who demonstrate unusual behavior may receive observation that is more frequent. The DD 509 must be used to document each sighting and visit to any RHU prisoner. Documentation of visits will include date, time, name of visitor, and any appropriate remarks.

d. Prisoners in the RHU must have the opportunity to be outside of their cell for at least 2 hours daily. The 2 hours may be comprised of opportunities for sunshine, recreation, exercise call, education, clinically appropriate treatment therapies, skill-building, and social interaction with staff and other prisoners. The amount of time and type of opportunity will depend on the prisoner's status; however, at a minimum, all prisoners residing in the RHU who are not designated as on a specific restricted housing reportable status must receive 2 hours outside of their cell daily. If a prisoner is a safety or security concern and cannot receive 2 hours outside of their cell daily, they will be classified as a specific RH-reportable status and will be handled per article 4206 of this manual.

e. Alternative meal service may be provided to a prisoner in the RHU who uses food or feeding utensils in a manner that is hazardous to self, staff, or other prisoners. Alternative meal service will be on an individual basis, based on health or safety considerations only, meets basic nutritional requirements, and occurs with the written approval of the brig officer or designee, or responsible health authority. The substitution period must not exceed 7 days.

f. Prisoners in the RHU can write and receive letters on the same basis as prisoners in general population.

g. Prisoners in the RHU have opportunities for visitation unless there are substantial reasons for withholding such privileges. These restrictions must be documented on a special handling letter.

h. Prisoners in the RHU are allowed telephone privileges, unless restricted for cause or under investigation concerning the abuse of telephone privileges. Prisoners on DS are allowed limited telephone privileges. Regardless of status, prisoners in the RHU will have unlimited access to telephone calls related specifically to their attorney of record.

i. Prisoners in the RHU, regardless of status, must have access to legal materials, available legal reference materials, allowed access to legal counsel, access to courts, and access to reading or library materials.

j. Prisoners in the RHU will have access (which may or may not include attendance) to programs and services that include, but are not limited to, the following:

(1) Educational services;

(2) Commissary services;

(3) Library services;

(4) Social services;

(5) Counseling services;

(6) Religious guidance; and

(7) Recreational programs

4. Review of Segregated Prisoners

a. 72-Hour Review. The status of each prisoner placed in the RHU must be reviewed by the C&A Board within 72 hours of assignment of the RHU status. A prisoner placed in the RHU under PI status must be reviewed within 24-hours. This PI review may be accomplished through means other than the C&A Board as dictated through local policy.

b. 7-Day Review. A review of the status for prisoners in the RHU by the C&A Board must be conducted at least every 7 days for the first 60 days and every 30 days thereafter.

c. 30-Day Review

(1) A credentialed mental health provider must personally interview and provide a written report on any prisoner remaining in the RHU over 30 days. If segregation continues beyond 30 days, a credentialed mental health provider must make an assessment at least every 3 months, or more frequently if prescribed by the MCF medical officer, psychiatrist, or clinical services director. Prisoners in the RHU may develop symptoms of acute anxiety or other mental problems; regular psychological assessment helps ensure the mental health of anyone in the RHU for over 30 days.

(2) DS. A review of the status for prisoners in DS for more than 30 days must be reviewed and approved by the MCF CO. If a prisoner is in DS over 60 days, the prisoner must be provided the same program services and privileges as prisoners in AS (security and safety concerns permitting).

4206. Restrictive Housing (RH). Reference (ac) details RH policy for use within MCFs. RH-reportable status must only be utilized in extreme situations when no other corrections alternative is available.

1. Definition. Any type of detention or segregation that involves all three of these basic elements triggers an RH-reportable status:

a. Removal from the general prisoner population, whether voluntary or involuntary

b. Placement in a locked room or cell, whether alone or with another prisoner

c. Inability to leave the room or cell for the vast majority of the day, typically more than 22 hours.

2. Placement in RH-Reportable Status

a. Prisoners will be housed in the least restrictive setting necessary to ensure their own safety, as well as the safety of staff, other prisoners, and the public. Assignment of a prisoner to the RHU does not necessarily mean the prisoner is in an RH-reportable status. RH-reportable status may only be used for a prisoner in the RHU if there is no safer alternative. To administer the corrections mission safely, a prisoner in the RHU may meet the definitional parameters in paragraph 4206.1 of this manual.

b. MCFs must strive to limit the use of RH-reportable statuses whenever possible, and to the extent used, to limit the length of a prisoner's stay and to identify services including group, educational, and therapeutic services that the prisoner can safely participate in while in an RH-reportable status.

c. A RH-reportable status must always serve a specific correctional purpose. In each instance, MCFs must clearly articulate and document the specific reason(s) for a prisoner's placement and retention in an RH-reportable status. CORMIS or its electronic equivalent is the primary method for documenting all prisoner record entries. The reason(s) and duration for use of an RH-reportable status must be supported by objective-based rationale and factual statements. Prisoners will remain in the RH-reportable status for no longer than necessary to address the specific reason(s) for their placement.

d. A prisoner's initial placement in an RH-reportable status will be reviewed by the C&A Board the next business day and ongoing placement in an RH-reportable status will be reviewed by the C&A Board every business day in an attempt to remove the prisoner from the RH-reportable status as soon as possible. This review will include not only security and housing staff but also medical and mental health professionals and be endorsed by the MCF CO.

e. All correctional staff will be trained annually on RH policies (inclusive of pre-service and in-service training). Correctional supervisors must ensure compliance with RH policies and training standards. This training will be reflected in staff training records. Emphasis must be placed on the difference of being housed in the RHU vice actually being in an RH-reportable status.

f. MCFs will formally establish a RH committee, consisting of command and department-level correctional staff to regularly (i.e., not less than semi-annually) evaluate existing RH policy, develop safe and effective alternatives to the use of RH, and craft special handling letters and step-down plan strategies.

4207. Management of Mixed-Gender Prisoners and Staff Supervision of Opposite-Gender Prisoners

1. Background. Confinement of both male and female prisoners in a MCF manned by both male and female staff present significant correctional challenges and requires a gender-relevant approach to ensure safety, security, and meet identified privacy needs.

2. Definitions

a. Commingled Mixed-Gender Prisoners. Male and female prisoners mixed in the same space or area at the same time.

b. Opposite-Gender Supervision. MCF staff supervising a prisoner of the opposite gender.

3. Management and Supervision of Commingled Mixed-Gender Prisoner Policy

a. There must be no prisoners of the opposite gender confined in the same space at the same time. For the purposes of this manual, the term “space” refers to quarters, to include cells and open-bays. At no time will male and female prisoners be commingled in any space during the period between taps and reveille; or at any time or location without direct staff supervision.

b. MCFs must ensure visual and acoustic berthing separation of males and females confined, if simultaneous confinement of male and female Service members is authorized. For the purposes of this manual, "acoustic separation" is defined as out of range of normal conversation.

c. For operational planning purposes, the plan of the day must distinctly identify authorized commingled, mixed-gender events and times for general population prisoners. Adequate supervision and communication requirements must be in place prior to the commencement of the activity.

d. To the greatest extent possible, male and female prisoners will not be assigned simultaneously in the same program or work areas, while ensuring both have full access to a full range of programming opportunities. If assignment to the same work site simultaneously is unavoidable to ensure the same programming opportunities, the supervisor must provide direct supervision continuously and enforce prisoner rules that restrict mixed-gender communication to only that required to carry out the assigned work or task.

e. Mixed-gender prisoner working parties are not authorized outside the MCF security perimeter without specific authority of the brig officer or designee.

f. At no time will commingled male and female prisoners be unsupervised without a staff member being directly present in the program, workroom, or immediate area.

g. Staff members will permit no integration between opposite-gender prisoners except for verbal greetings and authorized exchanges during supervised activities (e.g.; work details, religious activities; morale, welfare, and recreation activities such as holiday functions; assigned group therapy sessions, etc.).

4. Staff Supervision of Opposite-Gender Prisoners

a. Staff must not be assigned duties that require supervision of prisoners of the opposite sex at times when routine nudity occurs.

b. Prisoners must be informed during reception that they are subject to observation by staff, to include staff members of the opposite sex. During the use of the toilet, showering, changing clothes, and similar periods of undress and nudity, mitigation efforts must be employed by the MCF to protect prisoner privacy. Efforts (temporary or otherwise) may include staff replacements to ensure observation by only staff members of same sex, privacy screens or partitions for each head area or shower area, etc. Nudity must not be permitted in common areas.

c. When both male and female prisoners are simultaneously confined in the MCF, at least one male and one female staff member must be on duty at all times and be positioned in a manner to support same-gender supervision requirements.

d. Accommodations must be in place to ensure camera monitoring by staff ensures adequate mixed-gender privacy (e.g.; during use of the toilet, showering, changing clothes, and similar periods of undress and nudity). Where necessary, staff augmentation will be employed to mitigate security and supervision concerns. For RHU prisoners in a camera cell, specialized clothing may be used to provide privacy from camera view. Such clothing will provide sufficient coverage of the body when seated on a toilet (i.e., longer than a standard uniform shirt).

e. MCF staff, volunteers, and all visitors who interact with prisoners of the opposite gender must always be under the continuous observation of correctional staff, at all locations. While direct observation is desired, frequent indirect observation such as camera or observation through a window is authorized.

f. Correctional staff must not conduct mixed-gender frisk searches, except as necessary in the event of an emergency affecting MCF safety and security. Such searches must be documented with an incident or information report and notated in the brig log.

g. Opposite-gender strip searches or opposite-gender visual body cavity searches (meaning a search of the anal or genital opening) are prohibited. These searches may only be performed by medical practitioners.

(1) MCF staff must not search or physically examine a transgender, intersex, or gender non-conforming prisoner for the sole purpose of determining the prisoner's genital status. Upon initial receipt and prior to search, if the prisoner's genital status is unknown, it may be determined during conversations with the prisoner, by reviewing medical records, or, if necessary, by learning that information as part of a broader medical examination conducted in private by a medical officer.

(2) Transgender, intersex, or gender non-conforming prisoners who do not feel comfortable being frisk-searched or stripped-searched by a staff member of the same sex will be searched by medical personnel.

h. Where mixed-gender correctional activities are authorized, there will be direct communication (radio) between the correctional staff and the control center. The CDO or DBS must pre-authorize and acknowledge mixed-gender presence, ensuring supervision requirements are in place prior to commencing the activity.

i. Male staff must not be permitted to enter places where females are housed, including a visual control center, unless they are accompanied by female staff or female staff are present, and only when entry is justified. The area must first be visually clear of prisoners who may be clothed inappropriately for the presence of male staff, and prior to entry, "male on deck" must be sounded loud enough to be heard. When female staff members enter a male area, the same procedures are followed and "female on deck" must be sounded. Justification for entry includes:

(1) Assist a prisoner;

(2) Restrain a prisoner;

(3) Accompany medical personnel; and

(4) Conduct official business.

j. Prisoner rules and regulations must be published at each MCF that:

(1) Identify mitigation efforts that provide privacy such as screens or partitions for each head area or shower area, etc., and the prisoner's obligation to use available protocols and procedures to avoid compromising themselves or undermining the staff

(2) Advise prisoners that they must not initiate or involve themselves in unduly familiar relationships with staff, volunteers, or other prisoners (e.g.; knowingly expose themselves in a state of undress where not authorized, conduct conversations of an intimate nature, or engage in sexual contact of any nature).

Section 3. Security Systems

4301. Responsibilities for Security

1. The primary purpose of a MCF is custody and control of prisoners. Control of prisoners requires impartial enforcement of reasonable rules and regulations that are necessary for the safe and orderly operation of the MCF. Custody and control measures must be adequate to maintain good order and discipline and to protect staff and prisoners.

2. An effective system of security, custody, and control must be established in each MCF. Every staff member must be aware that custody and security do not stand-alone but are interdependent with all other portions of the operation. Each staff member is responsible for security, custody, and control, regardless of duty assignment.

3. Fixed posts must be maintained to ensure all traffic is channeled with authorized access permitted to enter or leave only upon suitable identification and inspection. Use of armed staff within the security perimeter is not authorized. When necessary to post staff external to the security perimeter, staff must be located in a manner to ensure an unobstructed view of the observation area.

4. Security measures inside the MCF are the day-to-day control and supervision procedures designed to facilitate the movement of prisoners, to assure control of their whereabouts, to guard against violation of rules, and to promote good order and discipline. Posts must be established at key points such as in quarters and at entrances to work and recreation areas to afford control and direct supervision. Provisions must also be made for direct supervision during meals and plan-of-the-day activities.

5. Persons not assigned to duty at the MCF will not be allowed to enter the MCF except on official business or as authorized visitor. Authorized visitors shall wear a visitor's badge on the front of their outside garment, above the waist.

4302. Contraband and Searches

1. Contraband

a. Contraband is anything not specifically authorized by proper authority to be in a prisoner's possession, or any item authorized for use by a prisoner that has been modified for a use other than originally intended. Contraband can be controlled through close supervision and frequent searches.

(1) Unscheduled searches of prisoners, cells, visiting rooms, recreation areas, library, heads, dining facility, work areas, vehicles, deliveries, shipments, etc., are essential. Personal property and items of clothing that accompany new prisoners must also be closely searched to prevent the introduction of contraband.

(2) Staff will be provided sufficient furnishings, implements, and materials to conduct their duties. Introduction of unnecessary items into the secure area of the MCF must be strictly limited. Staff briefcases, purses, carrying bags, offices, and work areas are subject to search, along with all other areas of the MCF where prisoners may access for any reason. Regular and random searches of MCF staff should be conducted by the operations officer.

b. When contraband is discovered, a written report must be made listing the items and covering precisely the circumstances of discovery. The contraband items, along with the report, will be submitted to appropriate staff per local policy. It is essential that a strict chain of custody be maintained of any evidence that may be used in disciplinary action. OPNAV 5580/22 Evidence/Property Custody Receipt must be used.

2. Searches. Prisoners will be instructed that all persons, quarters, and work areas are subject to search at any time while confined. There are two types of searches, of a person and of an area. Searches are conducted to control contraband or recover missing or stolen property; use of non-intrusive methods (scanners) or other techniques instead of body searches should be used whenever feasible. Where random frisk or area searches are authorized, an objective-based method will be used; on-the-spot selection by staff is not an acceptable method. Random strip searches are not authorized. Searches are described below and will be used as the situation requires.

a. Search of the Person. Searches must be conducted by staff members of the same sex as the prisoner, absent emergency circumstances.

(1) Frisk Search. The prisoner's body, clothing, and possessions will be searched by the staff member. Requirements for prisoners to assume exaggerated positions are not authorized. Unnecessary force is prohibited. A quick, careless search is useless.

(2) Strip Search. A strip search must be conducted on prisoners being newly confined, entering or leaving the MCF on a temporary release, after visitation call, before and after transfer, or initially assigned to the RHU. Unnecessary strip searches must be avoided. Other than instances already stated, strip searches may be conducted only when specifically authorized by the brig officer or designee and there is reasonable belief that the prisoner may be in possession of an item of contraband or a good opportunity for concealment of contraband has occurred (e.g.; reliable information that the prisoner possesses contraband, the discovery of contraband in the prisoner’s living space, a serious incident in which the prisoner was involved or where the prisoner was present, refusal to be frisk searched, or breaks in custody). In these searches, prisoners must remove their shoes and all clothing. Clothing and personal effects must be physically searched. The prisoner’s body will be visibly searched. No contact is authorized. Strip searches must be made in privacy with only one prisoner at a time present and the searcher must have another staff member present as a witness. Both staff must be of the same sex as the prisoner. Strip searches must be documented in a log with date, time, prisoner name, staff, and reason for search.

(3) Body Cavity Search. Internal examination of body orifices may be conducted only by qualified medical personnel, when authorized by the MCF CO or designee, and only when there is a reasonable belief that prisoners are concealing contraband in or on their person. The use of body cavity searches must be extremely limited and fully documented.

b. Area Search. All areas will be subjected to a thorough search at random times and on an unscheduled basis. Visiting areas, including visitor-parking areas, must be searched by staff before and after all visits and must be completed prior to any further access by prisoners. Area searches will be conducted in an organized orderly manner (zone search). Prisoners must not be present during the search nor be permitted to see how the search is conducted. If prisoners are occupying the area to be searched, they will be escorted out of the area, each being frisk-searched upon leaving. All authorized articles will be handled carefully and replaced as neatly as possible when the search is completed. Care will be exercised to avoid any undue disturbance of the prisoners' personal effects.

4303. Key Control

1. Control of keys is a major element of security. Key control procedures must be rigidly enforced. A key control system must include routine (at least monthly) inspections to ensure the authorized number of keys are available and will operate their corresponding locks. The key control system must identify each key or ring of keys and give its location at all times. No key will be marked to indicate its function; however, keys to emergency exits must be properly controlled and distinctly marked. Locks and keys for fire escapes and emergency doors must be checked frequently to ensure their operation.

2. There must be three identical sets of keys and all keys will be stored in lockable security containers. All three sets of keys must be rotated regularly (at least every 6 months) to ensure proper function and even wear of keys.

a. Active keys will be located in the control center unless an electronic key watch system is approved by BUPERS-00D or DC PPO; however, emergency keys must always be kept in the control center. Emergency keys must be readily identifiable and stored in such a way that provides accessibility in case of emergencies.

b. The second set of keys will be located on the premises of the MCF but outside the security perimeter.

c. The third set of keys will be located outside of the MCF and at a secure location providing 24-hour access.

3. The active key set must be inventoried daily for accountability and inspected monthly for functionality. All three sets of keys must be inventoried quarterly for accountability, and rotated at a minimum of every 6 months to ensure even wear. Results of inspections, inventories, and verification of rotation of keys will be documented and maintained on file locally for 3 years.

4. Only authorized staff members on duty will have MCF keys in their possession and then only during the performance of duties requiring the use of those keys. A sentry within a locked area must have only the keys to a locked sub-area (such as keys to cells within a unit). Keys, except permanently issued keys, must not be taken from the MCF. Staff members authorized to draw keys or key rings will use a metal tag, logbook, or personal identification number system for each key or key ring drawn and returned. An accurate inventory showing the number of each key, trade name of lock and its location, and number and location of keys for that lock must be maintained in a secure location. Each key or ring of keys will have its own hook on a lockable key panel board or key watcher location. All keys must be accounted for at all times.

5. In the event of lost, misplaced, or stolen keys, an investigation must be conducted immediately; thereafter, a determination to replace affected locks or cores must be made by the brig officer or designee. Any lock, core, or key replacement deemed necessary must be accomplished immediately. Replacement or reserve locks, cores, and keys must be secured to preclude access by unauthorized individuals.

6. A system for the control of MCF staff and visitors' personal keys must be implemented.

7. A key custodian and alternate key custodian must be appointed in writing by the MCF CO to administer the key control program.

4304. Tool Control. All MCFs must have a formal tool control plan that includes culinary, barber, and medical and dental instruments and supplies. Tools must be etched or tagged for identification and closely controlled. Where tools or equipment are kept in a MCF, a secure and lockable tool crib equipped with shadow boards, ladder racks, and garden tool storage racks will be provided. Ladders, ropes, cords, and hoses, as well as other equipment that can be used for escape purposes or for weapons, must be included in the tool control plan and highly supervised.

1. Restricted and hazardous tools must be easily identifiable, used only under supervision, and secured in a double-locked environment. A list of restricted tools (not all-inclusive) follows:

a. Workshops. Files, hacksaws, blades, welding torches, and pipe or bolt cutters;

b. Culinary. Kitchen knives, meat saws, cleavers, ice picks;

c. Medical and Dental Instruments and Supplies. Syringes, needles, and other sharps; and

d. Miscellaneous. Barber instruments

2. Procedures

a. A record of all tools, including life-cycle, must be maintained and monitored, tracking each item from the time it enters the MCF until the date it is removed from the MCF.

b. Keep tools to a minimum and maintain an accurate up-to-date inventory.

c. Utilize a shadow-board with outlines for tools where feasible.

d. Restricted and hazardous tools such as hacksaw blades, knives, culinary instruments, files and tips for cutting torches, and welding equipment must be specially marked, placed in identifiable containers and double-locked.

e. Account for all tools daily.

f. Maintain a tool log to include identification number of the tool, name of personnel or prisoner in possession, date and time issued and returned, and the issuing personnel.

g. Frequently verify location of all tools. Restricted tools and hazardous must only be used by prisoners under continuous staff supervision.

h. Tools allocated to various departments within the MCF will be distinctly marked or etched for ready identification and to determine which department has responsibility.

i. Prisoner utensils and culinary tools must be inventoried after each meal .

j. Broken, damaged, or worn tools must be turned in to the responsible supervisor for disposal. The responsible supervisor must account for all pieces and parts of a broken tool prior to its disposal.

k. Missing or lost tools must be reported immediately to the CDO or DBS. In the event of lost, misplaced, or stolen tools, an investigation must be conducted immediately and a search must be conducted in an effort to locate the missing tool(s). A report of the lost, missing, or stolen tool(s) will be forwarded to the brig officer or designee as soon as possible, but no later than the end of the shift in which the tool(s) were noted missing.

4305. Vehicle and Equipment Control

1. Authorization for entry of any vehicle into the MCF compound is contingent upon consent to search. No personal vehicles are authorized within the security perimeter. All vehicles entering or leaving the security perimeter must be carefully searched. A staff member will remain with the vehicle the entire time it is in the security perimeter unless the compound is clear of all prisoners. Containers entering the compound must be searched unless they were banded or sealed at a point of shipment and have not since been opened. Laundry, trash, and other containers must be searched before leaving the compound. All vehicles that remain in the security perimeter overnight must be disabled with security safeguards implemented per local policy.

2. Vehicles parked in the MCF staff or visitor parking area must be locked, keys removed, and windows fully closed.

4306. Flammable, Toxic, and Caustic Substance Control. Supplies, which may be dangerous, must be stored and secured per applicable Navy or Marine Corps policy, Navy Occupational Safety and Health standards, and reference (h).

1. Definitions

a. Flammable or Combustible. Flammable materials, liquids with a flash point below 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

b. Toxic. Materials or substances that through chemical reactions or mixture can produce possible injury or harm to the body by entering through the skin, digestive tract, or respiratory tract (e.g.; zinc, chromate paint, ammonia, chlorine, antifreeze, herbicides, and pesticides).

c. Caustic. Materials or substances that can destroy or eat away by chemical reaction (e.g.; lye, caustic soda, sulfuric acid).

d. Medical Supplies. Everything containing a narcotic or alcohol requires special handling and accounting. Refer to chapter 10 of this manual for further information on medical supplies.

e. Flavoring Extracts, Spices, and Food. When the MCF operates its own dining facility, close supervision by dining facility personnel must be maintained to prevent theft of material for making alcoholic beverages or weapons.

2. Control

a. Handling. If a material or substance possesses more than one of the above definition properties, the safety requirements for all applicable properties should be considered. Prisoners must never possess such items unless they are under the close supervision of qualified staff. Substances that do not contain one or more of the above properties but that are labeled "Keep Out of the Reach of Children" or "May Be Harmful If Swallowed" is not prohibited; their use and control, however, will be addressed in local policies. Safety data sheets must be maintained as applicable. Personnel handling flammable, toxic, or caustic materials must use appropriate personal protective equipment and be trained in their proper use.

b. Storage. All flammable, toxic, and caustic materials must be stored in secured areas that are inaccessible to prisoners and a prescribed system must be used to account for their distribution. Fuel (e.g.; gasoline or diesel) will be stored outside the MCF. If stored within the security fence line perimeter, hazardous material (HAZMAT) must be stored in locked authorized HAZMAT containers. HAZMAT items must only be brought into the security perimeter when necessary and then only in the amounts needed for the immediate work on hand and managed under staff supervision.

c. Safeguards. Staff will not introduce any form of unauthorized flammable, toxic, caustic material or substance into the security perimeter.

4307. Weapons. Immediate medical examination and treatment is required in all instances involving the use of a weapon. A written report detailing the use of force involved, detailing prisoners, staff, or others involved, and to describe the nature of the offense must be submitted to the MCF CO or designee no later than the conclusion of the tour of duty when any weapon or chemical agent is used. If injury or adverse public reaction occurs, an interim telephonic report must be made immediately to BUPERS-00D or DC PPO with follow-up reports as soon as additional information becomes known.

1. Restrictions. The MCF CO must ensure proper training of staff prior to employment of any weapons within the MCF. Firearms, ammunition, non-lethal, or chemical riot control equipment will only be allowed inside the security perimeter of the MCF when specifically authorized by the MCF CO, or higher authority, and then only to prevent or stop a riot or major disturbance. The officer authorizing such use will ordinarily be physically present during the period of authorized use.

2. Firearms. Use of firearms must be authorized by the MCF CO, or higher authority, only as a last resort. The MCF CO must ensure all MCF personnel authorized to use firearms receive appropriate training and demonstrate competency in their use before being assigned to a post involving the possible use of such weapons. Weapon competency will be renewed at least annually (each 12-month period rather than calendar year). Firearms training should be conducted using a systematic curriculum and be appropriately documented. Firearms must be used only to prevent serious injury, loss of life, or to protect staff or prisoners who are held as hostages. Persons must not be fired upon to prevent their escape unless in their efforts to escape, they harm or threaten to harm others seriously, or in any other way endanger the lives of others. Orders to halt will be given first. Warning shots will not be fired. Firearms must be used only by personnel qualified in their use.

3. Batons. Batons of any type (e.g., riot batons, asps, Monadnock PR-24, etc.) may be considered deadly weapons if used improperly. The MCF CO, or higher authority, may authorize their use only when the degree of force that can be applied by hand is inadequate to quell violence or control unruly prisoners. When authorized, the minimum force necessary to control the situation will be applied. Specific training and annual certification is required.

4. Non-Lethal. Use of non-lethal weapons may be authorized by the MCF CO or higher authority. The Marine Corps has been designated as the executive agent for the DoD Joint Non-Lethal Weapons (JNLW) Program for the responsibility in providing program recommendations and for estimating and coordinating JNLW requirements. Due to the array of applications available and unique scenarios appropriate for their use, pre-selection of such weapons or munitions is required. Purchase of non-lethal weapons for use by MCFs must first be authorized by BUPERS-00D or DC PPO. The MCF CO must publish policy governing training requirements and application consistent with JNLW Program guidelines.

5. Arms Locker. An arms locker must be provided outside the security perimeter for the storage of weapons carried by personnel who visit the MCF. An arms clearing trap must be provided outside the security perimeter to safely clear all weapons prior to storage in the arms locker. Instructions on the safe loading and unloading of common types of firearms utilized must be posted to assist personnel in the safe loading and clearing of their firearms.

4308. Chemical Agents. Chemical agents may be used only upon order of the MCF CO, or higher authority, and only by a person trained in its use. All personnel authorized to use chemical agents must receive thorough training in their use and in the treatment of individuals exposed to a chemical agent. A special training curriculum will be established that includes both individual and group instruction by competent authorities. A trained riot force of the MCF must be utilized. Oleoresin Capsicum (OC) and Ortho-Chlorobenzylidene Malonitrile (CS) gas may be used in all MCFs, with the exception of overseas facilities where OC or CS gas is prohibited by the status-of-forces agreement with the host nation. OC and CS gas must be inventoried and weighed at least monthly and after each use to determine condition, amounts available, and expiration dates. A record must be maintained on the use of OC or CS gas during disturbance control, training, or accidental release to monitor the number of individuals exposed and any attributed adverse outcomes. Immediate medical examination and treatment is required in all instances involving the use of a chemical weapon. A written report detailing use of force involved, detailing prisoners, staff, or others involved, and to describe the nature of the offense must be submitted to the MCF CO or designee no later than the conclusion of the tour of duty when any chemical agent is used. If injury or adverse public reaction occurs, an interim telephonic report must be made immediately to BUPERS-00D or DC PPO with follow-up reports as soon as additional information becomes known. Additional restrictions and responsibilities are provided below.

1. OC Spray. Exposure to OC spray may cause respiratory failure in susceptible individuals. If the situation and time allow, medical records will be reviewed to determine at-risk prisoners prior to deployment of OC. Ensure MCF staff members are appropriately trained in basic life support procedures before using OC spray.

2. CS Gas. CS gas may be used when there is a large number of rioters so situated that their removal would be hazardous to other prisoners or staff members. CS gas will not be authorized in conjunction with any other chemical agent.

a. Sufficient CS gas must be used at the first attempt to quickly break-up all resistance. Minimum effective amounts and maximum amounts that can be safely used in any given area must be computed in advance and be maintained as part of the riot control plan.

b. Provisions for equipment and personnel must be made for a follow-up action. CS gas will likely break the resistance, but prisoners may have to be forcibly removed. A follow-up squad equipped with gas masks must be ready to enter the affected area.

c. CS gas must be permitted to develop fully but not to dissipate before sending in follow-up squad(s).

4309. Instruments of Restraint. Instruments of restraint are never applied as punishment, discipline, coercion, convenience, or retaliation by staff and are applied only with the approval of the MCF CO or designee. Instruments of restraint should be used only as a precaution to prevent escape during transfer, for medical reasons if directed by the medical officer, or to prevent self-injury, injury to others, or property damage. Restraints should not be applied for more time than is necessary.

1. Definitions

a. Ambulatory Restraints. Corrections-related restraint equipment (as opposed to medical-related) that limits movement of body extremities without preventing the prisoner from moving about an area (also referred to as "walking restraints"). Ambulatory restraints generally allow the prisoner to eat, drink, move, and take care of basic human needs with no or minimum staff intervention.

b. Authorized Restraints. Restraints authorized by BUPERS-00D or DC PPO include steel handcuffs, leg irons, and waist chains (referred to as "hard restraints"), transportation or restraining belts, "body cuff universal restraint system," and other restraints (referred to as "soft restraints").

c. Full Restraints. Full restraints include the collective use of steel handcuffs, leg irons, and transportation or restraining belts.

d. Progressive Restraint. Use of the least restrictive restraints deemed necessary to control the prisoner (e.g.; first use hand irons, then leg irons, then transportation or restraining belts, etc.). When MCF design supports single cells within the general population quarters, progressive restraint may also include de-escalation interventions such as staff directing a disruptive prisoner to return to his or her cell for a "cool down" period. Based on the prisoner's behavior, more or less-restrictive restraints and transportation belts may be used.

e. Soft Restraints. Soft restraints are made of material such as Velcro, vinyl, plastic or leather and designed to prevent excessive movement of the prisoner's body part to which they are attached in order to prevent the prisoner from Self-harm. Select soft restraints may also be considered "authorized restraints" when specifically authorized for use by BUPERS-00D or DC PPO.

f. Therapeutic Restraints. Therapeutic restraints include restraint equipment directed by a medical officer, most often a psychiatrist. Therapeutic restraints may include, but are not limited to, ambulatory soft restraints and immobilizing restraints such as "four-point" or "five-point" restraints, or a restraining chair. Immobilizing restraints secure the prisoner in such a way that the prisoner is prevented from self-rising, using toilet facilities, drinking, or eating. The use of four-point or five-point restraints is not authorized in MCFs but may be utilized during hospitalizations as prescribed by health care authorities. Medical, vice correctional, policy and regulation applies for use of therapeutic restraints. Neither the MCF CO nor staff have the authority to authorize the use of these restraints within MCFs.

2. Procedure

a. The MCF CO or designee is responsible for implementation of all aspects of prisoner ambulatory restraint policy and management with one exception. A military judge may direct restraints to be removed from a prisoner in the courtroom (and that the prisoner remain unrestrained while in the courtroom) if, in the judge's opinion, such restraint is deemed unnecessary.

(1) This exception does not extend to legal visits such as prisoner and attorney meetings occurring outside of court-martial proceedings.

(2) The MCF CO or designee is the approving authority (with exception to military judges as noted above) for any request to remove restraints outside of the MCF's security perimeter.

(3) Upon conclusion of court-martial, pretrial prisoners may be awarded "time served" or found "not guilty" resulting in pending release from confinement. In these instances, prisoners should be properly restrained based on their custody classification and returned to the MCF for out-processing and permanent release.

b. The MCF CO may delegate restraint authority to security personnel. MCF CO's will employ use of progressive restraint consistent with governing policy and guidance herein.

c. Restraint policy and guidance associated with prisoner custody classification is found in article 4201.2 of this manual.

d. The use of restraints on female prisoners during the active labor and delivery of a child is prohibited. Any deviation from this policy requires approval by, guidance on, and methodology from, the medical officer directing use of restraints and is based on serious security risks.

(1) The medical officer will provide guidance on the use of restraints on a pregnant prisoner prior to active labor and delivery.

(2) Restraints used on pregnant prisoners prior to active labor and delivery should not put the pregnant prisoner nor the fetus at risk.

e. Restraint equipment will be applied only for appropriate purposes and per applicable procedures. Staff and prisoner escorts must be specifically trained to each type of locally available authorized restraint.

f. Restraints may be authorized when regaining control during a disorder or when a prisoner is violent or escape-minded. If restraints are used because of a disorder or on a violent or disruptive prisoner, the brig officer will be notified immediately. The brig officer or designated senior security personnel will make an immediate on-site visit to observe that the use of restraints is appropriate and, where warranted, will report that use to their immediate superior in command. An incident report, a use of force statement, voluntary statements (including medical), and an updated scars and marks form must be submitted by the end of shift in all cases where restraints are applied in a non-routine use. In any case, senior security personnel will ensure restraints are removed as soon as practical.

g. Care will be taken not to unnecessarily display restrained prisoners to the public during transportation.

h. Staff may apply restraints to a prisoner who continues to resist after staff achieves physical control of that prisoner and may apply restraints to any prisoner who is placed under control by use of force (e.g., forced cell move). If a prisoner in a forcible restraint situation refuses to move to another area on his or her own, staff may physically move that prisoner by carefully lifting and carrying the prisoner to the appropriate destination. Staff members must not use the restraints for lifting or carrying a prisoner.

i. In circumstances when immediate use of restraints is required for control of the prisoner, the MCF CO or designee may require a prisoner to be restrained while in a cell or authorize restraints to remain on a prisoner once placed in a cell. Leaving prisoners restrained and unattended in a cell by themselves must not be authorized. Use of restraints on a prisoner in a cell must not be used unless a staff member directly and continually monitors the prisoner face-to-face. Staff must be cautioned and trained regarding the potential of injury to prisoners who are in restraints while in a cell by themselves. Injury can result from situations where prisoners fall and are not able to protect themselves from harm because of restricted movement.

j. Restraint equipment or devices must be used as designed and may not be used in any of the following ways:

(1) About a prisoner's neck or face or in any manner that restricts blood circulation or obstructs the prisoner's airway. Binding must never be placed around a prisoner's mouth, nose, and neck, or so tight to a limb that circulation is restricted. Staff protective gear generally provides sufficient insulation from a prisoner's spitting or biting; therefore, no effort should be made by use of towels, sheets, blankets, hosiery, masks or any other devices to prevent a prisoner from spitting or biting. However, when endorsed by a medical officer and approved by the MCF CO, the use of a medical mask may be authorized on a prisoner.

(2) In a manner that causes unnecessary physical pain or extreme discomfort and:

(a) Staff in general and supervisory personnel in particular must ensure that unnecessary pressure is not placed on a prisoner's body in applying restraints (e.g.; the prisoner's chest, back, or neck). While the proper application of restraints may result in some discomfort, examples of prohibited uses of restraints would include, but are not limited to: "hog-tying;" unnecessarily tight restraints; improperly applied restraints; or unauthorized restraints. Soft restraints, when specifically authorized by a medical officer, should only be used when all lesser measures to prevent the prisoner from harming him or herself are not working or such use is in the interest of safety. Helmets may also be considered as protective devices. Videotaping the application of restraints during a forced-cell move or for self-injurious prisoners is a good practice. Having medical personnel observe and examine the prisoner after application is also good practice.

(b) Restraints will be administered in a natural body position. If restrained in a supine position (face up), head should be free to rotate from side to side and, when possible, elevate head of bed to prevent risk of aspiration. Always avoid use of prone position (face down) due to possibility of a prisoner's airway becoming obstructed and lung expansion being restricted.

(4) To secure a prisoner to a fixed object, such as a cell door, cell grill, or vehicle component

k. De-escalation Interventions

(1) The effective handling of aggressive prisoners is one of the most demanding aspects of working in corrections. It is an area where good interaction and communication skills are required. The majority of situations, where there is a potential for violence, can be handled through effective communication. Staff must be trained to recognize the signs of aggression (e.g.; standing tall, red faced, raised voice, rapid breathing, direct prolonged eye contact, exaggerated gestures) and reasons for aggression (e.g.; frustration, unfairness, humiliation, immaturity, excitement, learned behavior, reputation, means to an end, decoy).

(2) Staff faced with aggressive prisoners should seek to defuse the situation as they continually assess the risk of violence. Staff should be cautious to do nothing to further escalate the situation, yet maintain control of the situation. Training must be provided to staff in methods to: appear confident; display calmness; create some space; speak slowly, gently, and clearly; lower their voice; avoid staring; avoid arguing and confrontation; show that they are listening; and calm the prisoner. Staff should adopt a non-threatening body posture: use a calm, open posture (sitting or standing); reduce direct eye contact (as it may be taken as a confrontation); allow the prisoner adequate personal space; keep both hands visible; avoid sudden movements that may startle or be perceived as an attack; avoid audiences, as an audience may escalate the situation.

(3) When MCF design supports single cells within the general population quarters, progressive restraint may also include de-escalation interventions such as staff directing a disruptive prisoner or prisoners to return to their cell for a "cool down" period. Such periods cannot exceed 30 minutes and all cases will be reported immediately to the CDO or DBS, be documented in the quarters supervisor’s log, and be brought to the attention of senior security personnel. Where warranted, the CDO or DBS can extend the cool down period by an additional 30 minutes.

l. Staff and prisoner escorts should be thoroughly trained in the use of locally authorized restraints. Restraints can be cumbersome to apply and harmful to a prisoner if proper training is not provided. In the rare cases where restraint is required for pregnant prisoners, an approved vinyl or leather restraint belt should be used instead of a metal waist chain, whenever possible, to prevent injury to the prisoner or fetus. Where a metal waist chain is directed for use on a pregnant prisoner, where possible, medical personnel should check for proper application.

m. All prisoners in restraints, internal or external of the MCF, must be under direct and continuous observation, supervision and, if under movement, assisted control.

n. To support prisoner escorts, restraint guidance for use on a specific prisoner must be indicated in the "Remarks" field (block 6) of DD 2708 Receipt for Pretrial/Post-Trial Prisoner or Detained Person.

o. Requests for use for other than traditional "hard restraints" must be forwarded to BUPERS-00D or DC PPO with pictures, design intent, technical specifications, application procedures, and training curriculum. For audit purposes, authorizations must be retained locally and readily available for review.

3. Staff Training

a. Brig officers will ensure all correctional staff, to include support staff and prisoner escorts, are thoroughly trained in the policy, application, and use of available authorized restraint equipment and such training will be inclusive within pre-service and in-service training programs and documented within staff training records.

b. At a minimum, restraint-related training should include such issues as: restraint terminology; types of restraints; staff authorized to direct restraints; proper procedures for applying and removing restraints; de-escalation interventions; communication skills; role of the medical officer; terminology, physiology, and medical risks associated with the application and the use of restraints; procedures for lifting or carrying a restrained prisoner; supervision, movement, and monitoring prisoners in restraints; measures to reduce the risk for asphyxia and death; and legal implications and liability.

Section 4. Disturbances and Emergencies

4401. Prevention of Disturbances

1. There are causes for all disturbances. Trouble may be indicated when prisoners become restless and flare-up easily or when they avoid contact with staff members. Excessive numbers of disciplinary reports, requests for work or housing changes, and suicide attempts are indications of potential trouble and must be investigated. To eliminate incidents that could result in a riot or disorder, staff should be able to observe and detect tensions and unrest among prisoners and report them promptly. Frequent causes of disturbances are mistreatment, untrained staff, failure to separate problem prisoners, and improperly prepared or served food.

2. When an incident or disturbance occurs, staff members must identify individual prisoners involved and report their actions. Immediate identification and isolation of leaders may prevent development of a major disturbance. Staff members will be trained in the exercise of patience in the control of troublesome groups. Unnecessary use of force or arbitrary actions may precipitate a disturbance.

3. Each MCF must implement adequate disturbance and emergency plans, and all MCF staff must be trained in their implementation. Work stoppage and riot or disturbance plans are communicated only to appropriate supervisory or other personnel directly involved in the implementation of those plans. An annual review of all disturbance and emergency plans must be an essential element of staff pre-service and in-service training. New staff must be thoroughly familiar with all disturbance and emergency plans prior to their permanent post assignment.

4. The principles of Incident Command System for Corrections (ICS-C) will be followed in the development and implementation of emergency bills. The ICS-C is based upon the National Incident Management System (NIMS) protocols, which identify steps for improved coordination in response to incidents that impact correctional operations. The result of the basic protocols is emergency management and incident response systems that provide a common operating picture, to include common incident response procedures, communication and language spoken, and universal priorities which applies across the spectrum of response agencies and departments whether Federal, State, local, or tribal governments. NIMS protocols directly relate to corrections and detention settings.

4402. Controlling Disturbances

1. Staff personnel must avoid use of force where the assigned responsibilities can be effectively discharged without its use. If security cannot be accomplished without the use of force, personnel will use the minimum amount of force necessary to control the situation.

2. When deciding a course of action, consideration must be given to general public safety, safety and welfare of hostages (if any), prevention of loss of life or injury to other personnel, prisoner welfare, and protection of property.

4403. Priorities of Force. Use of physical force is restricted to instances of justifiable self-defense, protection of others, protection of property, prevention of escapes, and to maintain or regain control, then only as a last resort per this manual. When use of force is necessary, it will be exercised according to priorities of force and limited to the minimum degree necessary under the particular circumstances. All instances requiring the use of force must be fully documented. Use of firepower is justified only when ordered by the MCF CO or higher authority, under conditions of extreme necessity as a last resort, and when all lesser means have failed or cannot be reasonably employed. Examples of such circumstances are stated in article 4404 of this manual. The application of any or all of the priorities of force listed or the application of a higher priority of force without first employing a lower priority of force will depend on and be consistent with the situation encountered during any particular disorder. Priorities of force and who may order them are as follows:

Priority of Force	Who May Order (billet)
An order	Any staff member
Show of force (condition or code)	Any staff member
Show of force (organized)	Brig officer or authorized representative
Use of physical force (individual)	Staff member in self-defense or CDO or DBS
Use of physical force (organized)	Brig officer or authorized Representative (if immediate action is required; otherwise CO
Chemical agents (OC spray)	CO
Use of batons	CO
Non-lethal munitions or use use of high pressure water water	CO
Fire by selected marksmen or full firepower	CO

4404. Deadly Force. Deadly force is defined as that force which is used with the purpose of causing, or which a person knows or should know would cause, a substantial risk of death or serious bodily harm.

1. The following are examples of extreme situations where use of deadly force may be directed:

a. To protect citizens, staff personnel, or hostages when a reasonable belief exists that they are in imminent danger of death or serious bodily harm; or

b. To prevent the commission of a serious offense involving violence and the threatened death or serious bodily harm to another prisoner

2. The CO must verify that all elements of intent, capability, and opportunity are in place prior to application of deadly force.

a. Intent. Threat or will of a person to cause injury to another

b. Capability. A means to carry out the threat; i.e., a weapon of some sort

c. Opportunity. Space in which a subject is in to complete the threat. Subjects with knives cannot injure individuals 50 yards away; however, if they had pistols the situation changes.

4405. Emergency Response Plan. The MCF emergency response plan will be prepared to ensure the safety of staff and prisoners in the event of an emergency and reviewed annually. At a minimum, the MCF must publish the following required bills; fire, escape, riot, hostage, natural disaster, work stoppage, hunger strike, and bomb threat. MCF staff must be trained in the implementation of written emergency response plans during pre-service and in-service training. Emergency response plans will specify the means for immediate release of prisoners from locked areas in case of an emergency requiring evacuation and provide for a back-up system in case the primary system fails. These plans must be safeguarded to ensure prisoners do not have access.

1. Fire Bill. Fire bills will provide for the following:

a. Secure and prompt evacuation of all personnel to a pre-selected control point and the means for the immediate release of prisoners from locked areas in case of emergency and provide for a back-up system of release;

b. Availability of efficient firefighting equipment at all times;

c. Modern, portable fire extinguishers in close proximity to all living quarters and at other strategic locations, as determined by the fire marshal;

d. Keys to emergency exits properly controlled and distinctly marked;

e. Availability of portable floodlight equipment;

f. Prisoners will be trained in fire evacuation procedures;

g. Prominent posting of primary and alternate evacuation routes and use of exit signs and directional arrows for traffic flow as information to staff and prisoners in quarters and administrative spaces;

h. Fire drills to be conducted at least monthly and recorded in the brig log;

i. All fire bills must be coordinated with and approved by the installation fire department. Fire bills must be reviewed annually, updated if necessary, and re-approved by the installation fire department; and

j. Detailed plan of building(s) for fire department only.

2. Escape Bill. All precautions must be taken to prevent the escape of prisoners. Reasonable precautions include proper custody classification of prisoners, adequate instruction and supervision of staff, alertness of all staff members, a system of security inspections, and issuance of an adequate escape bill. All staff members and prisoner escorts from other activities or units must be familiar with procedures to be followed in the case of an escape or attempted escape. In the event of an escape, or attempted escape, action as outlined below must be taken.

a. Attempted Escape from a MCF. If a prisoner attempts to escape from inside the MCF, take action in the following order:

(1) Command the prisoner to “halt” and repeat the command one time, if necessary.

(2) If unsuccessful using the command "halt," prevent the escape by physical pursuit and restraint as may be necessary under the circumstances.

(3) An escape, whether successful or unsuccessful, will tend to cause unrest and could lead to a disturbance. Care must be taken to ensure a proper count is conducted and the daily routine is resumed as soon as possible; and

(4) If the prisoner is injured when captured, request medical assistance immediately.

b. Attempted Escape from an Escort. If a prisoner tries to escape from an escort outside the MCF or if the person refuses to obey an order to remain with the detail, the escort will attempt to restrain the prisoner with any effective means at hand, provided it can be done without jeopardizing control over the remaining prisoners in the detail. If the prisoner successfully escapes, the escort will move the remaining prisoners to the nearest means of communication, report the incident to the MCF and request instructions.

c. Escape Bill Requirements. Specific procedures that can be used quickly when an escape occurs should be made available to all staff. Procedures must include the following: prompt reporting of the escape to the MCF CO; mobilizing of staff; implementing of a predetermined search plan; notify base security or provost marshal's office; higher headquarters; public affairs office; preparing of escape circulars for distribution and mailing; and, after apprehension of the escapee, promptly notify all who were previously alerted to the escape. Additional considerations include:

(1) Procedures for reporting absence of a prisoner and sounding the alarm without loss of time;

(2) Maintenance of an up-to-date list of all staff members with addresses and telephone numbers so they can be recalled when needed (emergency recall bill). The recall roster must be safeguarded to ensure compliance with personally identifiable information requirements and tested every quarter, at a minimum, to verify accuracy of recall numbers and response time of staff members;

(3) A listing of escape posts to be manned while the search is in progress. These may be divided into groups that provide for coverage according to areas and known circumstances;

(4) Escape post-specific instructions will be provided for each staff member assigned to an escape post. Instructions will include post number, location of nearest law enforcement agency, and any other information that will assist staff members when they arrive on the post. Portable communication will be issued for each escape post;

(5) Provisions for notification of military and civil law enforcement agencies in the area when an escape has occurred and their notification upon apprehension. The applicable Service Deserter Information Point (DIP) will be notified immediately via telephone with a message to follow the next working day, and DD 553 Deserter/Absentee Wanted by the Armed Forces will be completed and forwarded to the Service DIP by the most expeditious means available. The below points of contact are provided:

(a) USN: Toll free (877) 663-6772
Commercial (901) 874-2522

(b) USMC: Commercial (703) 604-0395, 6666

(c) USA: Commercial (502) 626-3711

(d) USAF: Toll free (800) 433-0048
Commercial (210) 565-3727

(6) Provisions for picking-up personnel assigned to outlying posts and for turn-in of equipment;

(7) Provisions for not disrupting unrelated activities of the installation or station; and

(8) Provisions for securing and preserving any evidence of, or related to, the escape.

3. Riot Control Bill

a. Personnel assigned to riot control response units must be properly equipped and trained in local riot control measures.

b. Each team must be given specific instructions in the course(s) of action to be followed.

c. An assessment of the situation must be made before committing personnel to a condition that could result in a hostage-taking situation. Reinforcements must be called as necessary to handle the situation and they will be assembled as soon as they arrive. This delay can be used to plan the operation and determine immediate objectives. Outer perimeter must be secured.

d. Chemical agents may be used as directed by article 4308 of this manual.

e. Prior arrangements must be made for appropriate emergency response units, not assigned to the MCF, to secure the outside perimeter of the MCF to prevent escape during the period of time spent in forming and briefing the MCF riot squad. Practice drills must be held on a periodic basis. Kind and amount of force used will be directed by the situation. A standby reaction force will be employed as required.

f. Riot control bills must provide for the following:

(1) Sounding the alarm;

(2) Basic procedures for dealing with riots in the mess hall, recreation area, auditorium, or any place where large numbers of prisoners normally gather; and

(3) Instructions for identifying, separating, and housing agitators and ringleaders

g. Provisions for notifying the MCF CO; security, fire, and utilities departments; public affairs; and staff members (emergency recall bill) who may be needed in controlling the riot

h. Safety measures for staff and prisoners who are not participants

i. Provisions for the protection of property

j. Taking immediate steps to close the security perimeter to any avenue of escape or breaching

k. Procedures for localizing the disturbance

l. Procedures to be followed in the event of a hostage-taking situation

m. Procedures for permitting withdrawal from the affected area by prisoners not wishing to participate

n. Provisions made for securing communications facilities, heat, water, and main electrical controls

o. Cause of the disturbance will be ascertained if possible. Rioters may be conferred with, but no promises will be made regarding any demands other than they will have a fair hearing. Use of a formally trained negotiator must be provided for in the emergency bill, but senior decision-making personnel must not become directly involved in negotiations with prisoners.

p. Personnel will be instructed to closely observe actions of the prisoners in order to provide future evidence concerning the agitators and ringleaders.

q. Use of cameras and video recording is encouraged during disturbances as they can serve as a deterrent, as well as providing graphic evidence in the case of future disciplinary hearings. A bullhorn, video camera, and tape recorder are practical equipment to have available for disturbances.

r. Detailed plan of building(s) (blueprint or video)

s. Steps must be taken as soon as the disturbance is under control to ensure no one has escaped and that the physical plant of the MCF is secure.

(1) Segregate all prisoner participants of the riot and assign sufficient supervision to prevent a recurrence of the disturbance.

(2) Account for all prisoners and involved staff.

(3) Provide extra supervisory personnel in all quarters and mess hall until it is certain the disorder is completely subdued.

(4) Segregate all prisoner leaders and agitators in the RHU pending investigation.

(5) Curtail all work and recreation activities, if necessary, and rearrange dining schedules so it is possible to provide adequate supervision for small groups of prisoners.

(6) Conduct a thorough investigation of the incident.

(7) Photograph all damaged areas and destruction before making repairs.

(8) Arrange for repair of damage to the MCF's physical plant and equipment.

(9) Debrief staff members.

(10) Evaluate use of traumatic stress teams.

4. Hostage Bill. Proper training of all staff members and specialized training of hostage reaction teams is imperative. A person, regardless of grade, held hostage has no authority. All orders received from an individual under duress or being held hostage will be referred to the applicable (non-hostage) staff member in the chain of command before being acted upon.

5. Natural Disaster Bill

a. If a MCF is not secure enough to withstand natural disasters, prisoners and staff may be evacuated prior to the final alert stage or condition. Pre-planning and coordination must be made with BUPERS-00D or DC PPO as appropriate.

b. Disaster bills must include the following:

(1) A secure area or structure must be predetermined for the security and prompt evacuation of all personnel

(2) Evacuation routes must be carefully predetermined for security and prompt evacuation of all personnel and take into account natural and manufactured barriers along the route

(3) Emergency food, water, first-aid supplies, fuel, and communications planned for either evacuation site or remain-in-place operations (3-day supply)

(4) If time permits, individual prisoner records will accompany personnel to the evacuation site.

(5) MCFs will be secured once evacuation is complete.

(6) Medical assistance must be provided for injured personnel.

(7) Procedures to account for all personnel and a plan to effect the orderly return to the MCF; and

(8) Working parties will be formed as necessary to repair damage and clear debris.

6. Civilian Work Stoppage Bill. A work stoppage occurs when civilian staff members actively demonstrate dissatisfaction by striking, calling in sick, and or creating work slowdowns or substandard performance.

a. Procedure. At a minimum, each MCF must maintain a work stoppage bill that includes:

(1) Continuity of operations based on the length of the adverse action(s);

(2) Security and safety;

(3) Communications with employees;

(4) Communication with the public affairs office; and

(5) Documentation of employee actions during adverse job actions.

b. After Action. At a minimum, upon resolution of a work stoppage, the MCF must:

(1) Devise a plan to release temporary assigned personnel from other commands;

(2) Resume normal MCF operations as soon as possible;

(3) Analyze cause of the action; and

(4) Analyze lessons learned for improvements.

7. Hunger Strike Bill. MCFs must publish a hunger strike bill consistent with the provisions contained within article 10201.6 of this manual.

8. Bomb Threat Bill. MCFs must prepare a bomb threat bill to react to bomb threats or explosions. Any type of bomb threat must be treated seriously and never ignored. All threats must be investigated before making a declaration that the threat is a hoax. The bomb threat bill must contain the following procedures:

a. Bomb threat by phone (bomb threat checklist);

b. Bomb threat by mail;

c. Suspicious items;

d. Event of an explosion;

e. Threat evaluation;

f. Bomb search procedures;

g. Bomb search techniques;

h. Evacuation;

i. Reporting or notification requirements; and

j. After action reports

Encl: (1) 48 Hour Notice of Classification Form

Cancellation. NAVCONBRIGCHASNSOP 401 of 28 Jun 2023.

Effective date. Twenty-four hours after issue.

1. Purpose. To set forth policies and procedures governing objective classification for prisoner custody level.

2. Applicability. To all staff and prisoners.

3. Definitions

a. Classification. A process for objectively determining the level of security and program requirements for prisoners based upon existing resources.

b. Custody. The degree of supervision each prisoner requires.

c. Prisoner. An individual in naval confinement. This includes individuals in pretrial confinement.

d. Unit Team. The Unit Teams are appointed by the Commanding Officer and comprised, at a minimum, of a Unit Manager, Unit Counselor, and Quarters Supervisor (s).

e. Security Perimeter. That area within the confines of the facility walls and/or the dual twelve-foot fence.

4. Policy

a. Staff will determine the degree of supervision, restraint and control needed for individual prisoners. This will be based on individual interviews and a review of all available records as from intake, orientation, program plan development, and evaluation by staff. Initial classification actions will be completed by the Command Duty Officer (CDO). Reclassification actions will be completed by the Unit Team and Classification and Adjustment Board (C&A Board) and approved by the Brig Officer or designee.

b. A written policy, procedure, and practice provide for a written prisoner classification plan. The plan specifies the objectives of the classification system and methods for achieving them, and provides a monitoring and evaluation mechanism to determine whether the objectives are being met (5-ACI-5B-01).

c. The classification system will specify the level of custody required and provides for a regular review of each classification (5-ACI-5B-02).

d. The classification plan will provide for maximum involvement of representatives of relevant institutional programs and the prisoner concerned in classification reviews (5-ACI-5B-03).

e. The institution or parent agency solicits and uses pre-institutional assessment information regarding the prisoner's progress and adjustment (5-ACI-5B-04).

f. At initial classification, each prisoner will be assigned to a staff member to ensure supervision and personal contact; a unit team may perform this function (5-ACI-5B-05).

g. The written plan for each prisoner classification status will be reviewed at least every 12 months (5-ACI-5B-06).

h. The classification plan specifies criteria and procedures for determining and changing a prisoner's program status; the plan includes at least one level of appeal (5-ACI-5B-07).

i. Unless precluded for security or other substantial reasons, all prisoners appear at their classification hearing and are given notice 48 hours prior to the hearing; such notice may be waived by the prisoner in writing (5-ACI-5B-08).

j. Prisoners may initiate a review of their progress and program status by submitting a request to their unit team (5-ACI-5B-09).

k. Special needs prisoners will be identified by receiving personnel, clinical, medical, or unit team staff or other qualified personnel (5-ACI-5B-11).

l. Adjudicated delinquent offenders and youths charged with offenses that would not be crimes if committed by adults will not reside in the brig (5-ACI-5B-12).

m. The maximum size of a single management unit is variable and is based upon the characteristics of its prisoner population but does not exceed 80 prisoners. The exact size of each management unit is determined by (1) the security classification of the prisoner occupants (higher security levels require smaller unit size), and (2) the ability of staff to complete regular security checks, maintain visual and auditory contact, maintain personal contact and interaction with prisoners, and be aware of unit conditions (5-ACI-2B-03). The Brig rated capacity is 175 which is designated by PERS-00D.

n. Security and program determinations necessary for any individual to be eligible for industries work are made by the unit team and the C&A Board, as outlined in ref (d) (5-ACI-7A-09).

o. Graduated release through a systematic decrease in supervision and corresponding increase in prisoner responsibility will be considered during the classification process (5-ACI-5F-03).

p. Staff and prisoner interaction are encouraged. Brig staff, particularly Unit Teams, follow the unit management system which provides staff with the authority to make decisions, and the ability to make recommendations regarding security, classification, services, and programs for prisoners as out lined in ref (c) (5-ACI-2B-02).

q. A graduated release through a systematic decrease in supervision and corresponding increase in prisoners responsibility is part of the classification program (5-ACI-5F-03).

r. The security and program determinations necessary for any individual to be eligible for industries work are made by the Classification and Assignment Board (5-ACI-7A-09).

5. Procedures

a. Initial Custody Classification. The initial custody classification is conducted during the reception process by the CDO using pre-institutional assessment regarding progress and adjustment (5-ACI-5B-05). The facility solicits and uses pre-institutional assessment information regarding the prisoner's progress and adjustment (5-ACI-5B-04). The CDO shall ensure the following are completed:

(1) Complete Prisoner Background Summary DD Form 2710.

(2) Complete Initial Custody Classification Form DD Form 2711.

(3) Determine prisoner level of custody and identify any special needs or problems (5-ACI-5B-11).

(4) An initial custody classification of MDI will be assigned to all pre-trial and post-trial prisoners, except when MAX is required due to special circumstances. Under no circumstances should a prisoner have an initial classification of MDO/MIN/IC.

(5) Classification actions are entered into the Corrections Management Information System (CORMIS).

(6) All prisoners shall be initially assigned to the Special Quarters' Chief to ensure supervision and personal contact, pending clinical/medical clearance and urinalysis. Once cleared, the prisoner will be assigned to the Orientation Housing Unit. (5-ACI-5B-05). Transient prisoners will remain in Special Quarters until transfer is affected.

(7) Policy, procedure, and practice provide for a written prisoner classification plan. The plan specifies the objectives of the classification system and methods for achieving them, and it provides a monitoring and evaluation mechanism to determine whether the objectives are being met (5-ACI-5B-01).

(8) Adjudicated delinquent offenders and youths charged with offenses that would not be crimes if committed by adults will not reside in the brig (5-ACI-5B-12).

b. Prisoner Notification. Unless precluded for security or other substantial reasons, all prisoners will be given the opportunity to appear at their classification hearing. They will be notified in writing at least 48 hours before the next Classification Review, using enclosure (1). Prisoners may waive the 48 hour notice and/or their right to appear at the hearing (5-ACI-5B-05). The right to appeal the outcome to the Commanding Officer is retained even if the prisoner declines to appear. Unless precluded for security or other substantial reasons, all prisoners appear at their classification hearing and are given notice 48 hours prior to the hearing; such notice may be waived by the prisoner in writing (5-ACI-5B-08).

c. Custody Reclassification. Custody reclassification shall be focused on the graduated release through a systematic decrease in supervision and corresponding increase in prisoner responsibility (5-ACI-5F-03).

(1) After orientation, prisoners will be reviewed by the Orientation Unit Team for placement in the general population, custody, housing, work, and special programs. Reclassification will be done if the following occurs:

(a) Meeting time requirements listed in paragraph (d) below.

(b) A guilty finding from a Discipline and Adjustment Board.

(c) Receipt of more than three negative spot reports within a 90-day period.

(d) After movement from disciplinary segregation.

(e) Any time determined appropriate by a unit team member or at the prisoner's request.

(2) To effect a reclassification review; the Unit Team will:

(a) Complete the Custody Reclassification Form DD Form 2711-1. This form is verified by the Unit Manager with input from the Unit Team. If the Unit Team agrees with the objective recommendation, "no" is circled on the override line. If the C&A Board disagrees recommendation, "yes" is circled with the override code and rationale written on the form for review by the Brig Officer. Override of the objective classification recommendation will be determined by the Brig Officer. An override will normally increase/decrease the custody by one level unless otherwise approved by the Brig Officer.

(b) Determine change in custody level and housing assignment.

(c) Notify the prisoner of the unit team decision.

(d) Forward form to Brig Officer via the Classification and Adjustment Board (C&A Board), a multi-disciplinary board, in accordance with SOP 635, and place completed form in the prisoner's file after Brig Officer's approval (5-ACI-5B-03).

(e) Input the classification actions into CORMIS after final approval is received.

d. Time Schedule for Reclassification. In accordance with reference (b), reclassification of prisoners will be accomplished by the Unit Team as follows (5-ACI-5B-02) (5-ACI-5B-06):

Criteria	Pretrial	Post-Trial
At completion of orientation or upon change in legal status	Maximum Custody	All
Every 30 Days	Maximum Custody	Maximum Custody
Initiated by staff recommendation to change custody classification to a higher/more restrictive level based on identification of risk, other salient factors or management problems. (e.g., MDI to MAX)	Medium-In Custody	All except Maximum Custody
Initiated by staff recommendation to change custody classification to a lower/less restrictive level based on performance, risk or other salient factors. (e.g., MDI to MDO)	N/A	All except Installation Custody
Quarterly*	N/A	Medium-In, or those with sentences of one year or less

Semi-annual*	N/A	All with sentences of 1 to 3 years
Annual*	N/A	All with sentences over 3 years

*Reclassification may also be conducted based on review of the prisoner's hard-card, work evaluations, disciplinary actions, or other performance or security issues. This review is initiated by the Unit Team at its weekly meeting, which reviews prisoner hard-cards and other related performance information. A review of the prisoner program plan will also be conducted at least annually and documented in CORMIS.

e. Prisoner Initiated Reclassification. Prisoners may initiate a review of their progress and program status, and custody classification at any time by submitting a DD Form 510 request to their unit team (5-ACI-5B-09). If a request for custody classification is received, the Unit Team will assess the prisoner and make a recommendation to the C&A Board. The C&A Board will review the prisoners request and Unit Team recommendation, and forward their recommendation to the Brig Officer for approval.

f. Guidelines for Custody Reclassifications. The Unit Team shall take into consideration the degree of supervision and restraint needed for control of individual prisoners, inside and outside the security perimeter, as outlined in Reference (a), Article 4201. The Unit Team/C&A Board will use the following guidelines to establish proper custody classification assignments for all post-trial prisoners; exceptions to any of the elements listed below must be approved by either the CO or XO.

NOTE: Time awarded for pretrial confinement and other administrative credits deemed appropriate by the court will be considered as time served and used in computing minimum time eligibilities for custody classification.

(1) Maximum Custody (MAX). Pre-trial and post-trial prisoners requiring special custodial supervision because of the high probability of escape, are potentially violent or dangerous, and those who are at risk of harming themselves. Ordinarily, only a small percentage of prisoners shall be classified as MAX.

(2) Medium Inside (MDI). Pre-trial and post-trial prisoners who present security risks not warranting MAX and are not regarded as dangerous or violent.

(a) Assigned to all new prisoners, except those specifically deemed to be serious management problems (MAX), shall be assigned a MDI custody classification during the reception/orientation phase.

(b) All pre-trial prisoners will maintain an MDI custody classification, except those specifically deemed to be serious management problems (MAX).

(c) Assigned to General and Special Courts-Martial prisoners who have more than 90 days remaining on their sentence and who have not served one fourth 1/4 of their sentence to confinement.

(d) May also be used when special circumstances warrant (e.g., previous or current conduct in confinement, convicted of serious violent crime, previous convictions, escape risk, pending civil charges, etc.).

(3) Medium Outside (MDO). Post-trial prisoners who present security risks not warranting MDI are considered MDO prisoners.

(a) Will normally be assigned to Summary Courts-Martial prisoners after completion of orientation unless special circumstances warrant remaining MDI.

(b) Assigned to General and Special Courts-Martial prisoners who have served one fourth (1/4) of their sentence to confinement or have less than 90 days remaining on their sentence to confinement unless special circumstances warrant remaining MDI (e.g., convicted of serious violent crime, previous convictions, escape risk, pending civil charges, etc.).

(4) Minimum Custody (MIN). Post-trial prisoners who present security risks not warranting the above classifications are considered MIN prisoners.

(a) Summary courts-martial prisoners may be assigned upon completion of orientation if facility needs require.

(b) May be assigned to General and Special Courts-Martial prisoners who have served one third (1/3) of their sentence to confinement or have less than 2 years remaining on their sentence to confinement.

(c) Must be active in or completed all required programs associated with their convicted offense(s) or any other condition that may exist (i.e., Sexual Offender Education (SOED), General Violence (GO) Treatment, Innovative Skills, Techniques, Options and Plans for Better Relationships (STOP) Treatment, Substance Use Treatment).

(d) No DRs or negative Observation Reports within 90 days. If more than 3 DR's received, prisoner must have completed 120 days without incident since their last DR. Exceptions may be granted on a case-by-case basis. Should a minimum custody prisoner be found guilty at a disciplinary hearing, the prisoner shall be reviewed for increased custody.

(e) Work and Training Reports must reflect above average to outstanding marks.

(f) A prisoner increased from minimum custody will not normally be reassigned to minimum.

(5) Installation Custody (IC). Certain post-trial prisoners who require only limited custodial supervision. They may work and move about much the same as individuals in a normal duty status.

(a) Assigned to prisoners upholding the highest standards of personal conduct and behavior.

(b) Have completed at least one half (1/2) of their confinement adjudged, or the convening authority has acted, whichever occurs first.

(c) No violent charges or any charges that are of a sexual nature.

(d) No more than twelve months from minimum release date.

(e) Never previously removed from IC classification for poor performance or behavior.

(f) Must be active in or completed all required programs related to their offense or any other condition that may exist.

(g) No DR's or negative Observation Reports within 180 days of the nomination. If more than 3 DR's received, he must have completed 180 days without incident since his last DR. Exceptions may be granted on a case-by-case basis.

(h) Work and Training Reports must reflect above average to outstanding marks.

(i) Consideration will be taken when assigning jobs to prisoners adjudicated for serious sexual or aggravated assault offenses.

(j) IC Classification shall be administered in accordance with ref (e).

g. Other Factors Affecting Custody Classification

(1) Factors, though not all inclusive, to be considered in assessing higher custody classifications (MAX or MDI) include:

(a) Assaultive behavior.

(b) Disruptive behavior.

(c) Serious drug abuse.

(d) Serious civil/military criminal record (convicted or alleged).

(e) Low tolerance of frustration.

(f) Intensive acting out or dislike of the military.

(g) History of previous escape(s).

(h) Pending civil charges/detainer filed.

(i) Serving a sentence which the individual considers to be unjust or severe.

(j) Poor home conditions or family relationships.

(k) A mental evaluation indicating serious neurosis or psychosis.

(l) Indication of unwillingness to accept responsibility for personal actions past and present.

(m) Demonstrated pattern of poor judgment.

(n) Length, or potential length, of sentence.

(o) Gang affiliation or ties with disruptive organizations.

(p) Awaiting transfer to another confinement facility.

(q) Refusal to accept/participate in recommended treatment programs.

(2) Factors that indicate lower custody classifications (MDO, MIN, or IC) include:

(a) Clear military record, aside from present offense.

(b) Close family ties; good home conditions.

(c) The offense(s) charged is not serious.

(d) Apparently stable mental condition (responsible for own actions).

(e) Indications the individual wishes to return to duty.

(f) Comparatively short sentence to confinement; however, length of sentence shall not be an overriding factor.

(g) Behavior during a previous confinement.

(h) Completion of, or active participation in, treatment programs or groups.

(3) The factors listed above are indicators, not ironclad rules; therefore, the Brig Officer will consider objective based overrides where applicable. An evaluation of all phases of prisoner performance shall be made prior to each custody change. By following the criteria and concepts outlined above, the Brig Officer shall be able to make more efficient use of staff and provide an atmosphere in which rehabilitative efforts shall be more effective.

h. Staff and prisoner interaction are encouraged. Brig staff, particularly unit teams, follow the unit management system which provides staff with the authority to make decisions, and the ability to make recommendations regarding security, classification, services, and programs for prisoners (see SOP 633) (5-ACI-2B-02). The maximum size of a single management unit is variable and is based upon the characteristics of its prisoner population but does not exceed 80 prisoners. The exact size of each management unit is determined by (1) the security classification of the prisoner occupants (higher security levels require smaller unit size), and (2) the ability of staff to complete regular security checks, maintain visual and auditory contact, maintain personal contact and interaction with prisoners, and be aware of unit conditions (5-ACI-2B-03).

i. The security and program determinations necessary for any individual to be eligible for industries work are made by the Classification and Assignment Board (5-ACI-7A-09).

6. Appeals. Appeals of classification decisions shall be forwarded to the Commanding Officer via DD Form 510 in accordance with the Prisoner Handbook (5-ACI-5B-07).

7. Records Management. Records created as a result of this SOP, regardless of media or format, must be managed per Secretary of the Navy Manual 5210.1 of January 2012.

8. Review and Effective Date. Per OPNAVINST 5215.17A, the originator will review this instruction annually around the anniversary of its issuance date to ensure applicability, currency, and consistency with Federal, Department of Defense, Secretary of the Navy, and Navy policy and statutory authority using OPNAV 5215/40 Review of Instruction. This instruction will be in effect for 10 years, unless revised or cancelled in the interim, and will be reissued by the 10-year anniversary date if it is still required, unless it meets one of the exceptions in OPNAVINST 5215.17A, paragraph 9.

Subj: RESPONSE TO THE REQUEST FOR A CONTACT VISIT WITH COUNSEL ICO CSSN JERMIAH T. COPELAND

Ref: (a) Naval OSTC Det Norfolk ltr of 2 Oct 25

1. In response to ref (a) and in support of the government's position on this unique case, limited exception to policy is cautiously granted with the following caveats:

a. The prisoner will remain restrained at all times during the visit.

b. The prisoner visits will be conducted in a brig contact room and staff will maintain current security protocols; no further adjustments will be authorized.

c. Any guilty Disciplinary Review Board findings, whether related to a visit or not, will revoke this exception and return the prisoner to standard protocols associated with his classification.

d. Any security protocol violations during the visit will return the prisoner to standard protocols associated with his classification.

2. I note that isolated instances of previously demonstrated compliance do not mitigate risk with prisoners facing severe sentences and consequences. This is particularly true in cases where a prisoner may receive unexpected news or information that serve as a trigger for volatile behavior. Allowing contact visits for prisoners designated with a custody classification of "maximum" increases risk to the safety of visiting personnel and my staff. Brig security policy is in place for everyone's safety, even when it is inconvenient. I have seen numerous staff assaulted in my tenure by unstable prisoners who were at times compliant, thus the cautious approval of this unique government request. I hope this level of risk, which I wholly own, is noted for any future requests.

Subj: REQUEST FOR A CONTACT VISIT WITH COUNSEL ICO CSSN JERMIAH T. COPELAND

1. I respectfully request consideration of an exception to policy to authorize CSSN Jermiah T. Copeland, currently confined at Naval Consolidated Brig Chesapeake, to have a contact visit with his defense counsel. I fully acknowledge that this request is contrary to standard brig policy and recognize the importance of maintaining consistent security protocols within your facility. As such, I am only asking for an exception for this case, and not for a change to the general policy.

2. Defense counsel have repeatedly expressed concerns regarding their ability to communicate clearly with their client in the no-contact visitation room in this particular case due to some unique issues with their client. I do not concur that the current no-contact arrangement is inherently unsuitable for client visitation in general. However, I do believe that providing defense with a reasonable accommodation in this case is worth consideration and would quite likely facilitate the efficient litigation of this particular case by ensuring that the defense counsel can communicate with this client.

3. CSSN Copeland has previously been allowed two contact visits in building A-50 with his defense counsel. Both visits were completed without incident. His demonstrated ability to conduct himself appropriately during those visits provides a factual basis for considering an exception in this instance.

4. To balance defense counsel's concerns with the brig's operational security requirements, I recommend the following conditions if contact visits are approved:

a. The prisoner will remain restrained at all times during the visit. These restraints would be the same that were employed during his contact visits prior to his recent hearings; and

b. The visits would be conducted in a brig contact room where brig staff could maintain close visual observation consistent with current security protocols.

5. I believe that granting contact visits under these conditions would assuage the concerns of his defense counsel while preserving the brig's security interests. I submit this request not as a precedent-setting measure, but rather as a narrowly tailored exception justified by the unique issues the defense team is having communicating with the prisoner in this case and the prisoner's prior demonstrated compliance.

6. I appreciate your consideration of this matter. I am available to discuss further either by phone at 757-341-5663 or via email at derek.butler2.mil@us.navy.mil.

United States v. CSSN Copeland, USN

Subj: GOVERNMENT DISCLOSURE: CONVERSATION WITH CDR BRIAN FLANAGAN, USN

Ref: (a) R.C.M. 701 (MCM 2024)
(b) Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963)
(c) Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972)
(d) JAGINST 5803.1E (20 Jan 15) Rule 3.8

1. On 3 December 2025, LCDR Chris Dempsey, JAGC, USN, and LN1 Kathleen Vanetti, USN, spoke to CDR Brian Flanagan, USN, telephonically. The following disclosures are provided:

a. CDR Flanagan reported that he was contacted via email by LCDR Serfess on 21 November with a request for the contact information of the Medical Record custodian, but otherwise has not spoken to the Defense.
b. As the OIC of the brig, CDR Flanagan is authorized to exercise discretion and override the determinations of the C&A Board per the SECNAV Instruction.
c. While the seriousness of charged offenses would normally create a high enough point value for CSSN Copeland to be confined in MAX, there are a few classes that are offered that allow for points to be subtracted from the total. CCSN Copeland has attended some classes that subsequently lowered the point total and thereby his recommended classification status.
d. CDR Flanagan has been overriding the C&A board's recommendation since that reduction in point total occurred. In the matter of CSSN Copeland, CDR Flanagan believes he has lawfully used his discretion to keep him in MAX based on the seriousness of the charges, the potential length of sentence if found guilty of the charges, and the limitations of his Level I facility in providing adequate security should his classification status be reduced. CSSN Copeland engaged in some minor negative things early on, but he does not attach much weight to that.
e. CDR Flanagan explained that he has no desire to punish CSSN Copeland and has included CSSN Copeland in a step-down program that allows for extra time out of his cell.
f. In his experience, confinees facing serious charges, with the potential for long confinement sentences, are safety risks to themselves and other confinees. Ultimately, CDR Flanagan is responsible for the safety of CSSN Copeland, his staff, and the other confinees.
g. As a Level 1 Facility, CDR Flanagan feels that the brig is not staffed to properly supervise/monitor such safety concerns, as a Level 3 facility like Leavenworth would be.
h. To his knowledge, CSSN Copeland has not appealed the decision to continue his confinement in MAX.

LCDR Dempsey,

Here is the latest grade sheet. To confirm, he has not appealed any of these decisions to keep him in max custody. Even with the -2 for completing a life skills class, he still only makes it into the reduce category by 1 point, so it's as small of an override as possible.

Happy to answer any further questions.

OIC

LCDR Dempsey,

Just tried to call but got the voice mail. If you are out for the afternoon, I'm available all day tomorrow. I will be at my desk until just before 1600, we'll be handing out some awards then and I'll probably head home for the day after that.

V/R,

OIC

LCDR Dempsey,

Is this in regard to Prisoner Copeland?

I am available on 10DEC. Never done one of these; however, I would simply refer to the SECNAV-granted authority to keep a prisoner in MAX custody due to the allegations against them and the potential length of sentence if found guilty.

Subject: Defense Motion - Unlawful Pretrial Punishment

Good Morning Sir,

The Defense has requested your production for a motion alleging unlawful pretrial punishment. The motion will be heard on 10 December (specific time unknown). Are you available? I do not imagine it will take more than 30 minutes. In-person presence would be desirable, but telephonic would work as well if necessary. I am also happy to discuss the motion and what to expect when you have a moment. I am unavailable today, but could be free tomorrow or Wednesday. Thanks!

Very Respectfully,

COUNSELOR NOTES AND RECOMMENDATIONS:
SNP asked if it were possible to attend the C & A and have the guards step out while he talked. He stated he didn't want anyone to feel any type of way about anything he would say and didn't want anyone to start treating him differently. Informed SNP that shouldn't be happening and I would ask the question. SNP had no further questions or concerns. SNP has received one negative entry and one positive since last reclassification board. SNP completed one life skills class and denied the classes for the previous 3 weeks.

Counselor recommendation is reclassification to MDI and move to General Population.

Package will be forwarded to the C&A (Classification and Assignment) Board on 17 NOV 2025.

PRIVACY ACT STATEMENT

AUTHORITY: 10 U.S.C. §136: "Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness"; 10 U.S.C. Chapter 48, "Military Correctional Facilities", DOD Directive 1325.04, "Confinement of Military Prisoners and Administration of Military Correctional Programs and Facilities"; and DOD Instruction 1325.07, "Administration of Military Correctional Facilities and Clemency and Parole Authority."

PRINCIPAL PURPOSES: To collect a new prisoner's personal history to assist in the custody classification.

ROUTINE USES: Disclosure of records are generally permitted under 5 U.S.C. 522a(b) of the Privacy Act of 1974, as amended. Information may be disclosed to confinement/correctional agencies for use in the administration of correctional programs, including custody classification, employment, training and educational assignments, treatment programs and social histories. Additional routine uses are listed in the applicable System of Records Notice, A0190-47 DAPM-ACC, "Army Corrections System and Parole Board Records," NM01650-1, "Individual Confinement Records," and F031 AF SF A, "Correction and Rehabilitation Records" published at https://dpcld.defense.gov/Privacy/SORNs/.

DISCLOSURE: Voluntary. However, failure to provide all requested information may prevent the Correctional Facility staff from properly classifying prisoner's custody.

ON THE ABOVE DATE AND TIME I, MSGT GIBBONS, WHILE CONDUCTING MY DUTIES AS COMMAND EVALUATOR, WAS CONDUCTING A CELL SEARCH IN KILO 57 WHICH IS CURRENTLY OCCUPIED BY PRISONER COPELAND. DURING THE SEARCH I FOUND A BLOODY TISSUE ON THE SINK THAT'S LOCATED IN THE FRONT RIGHT SECTION OF THE CELL. AFTER COMPLETING THE SEARCH ON THE REST OF THE CELL I PHOTO GRAFTED THE AREA WHERE THE ITEM WAS FOUND AND CONFISCATED IT UTILIZING GLOVES AND A BIOHAZARD BAG. THE CDO WAS THEN NOTIFIED, AND THE ITEM WAS PROCESSED WITH MEDICAL.

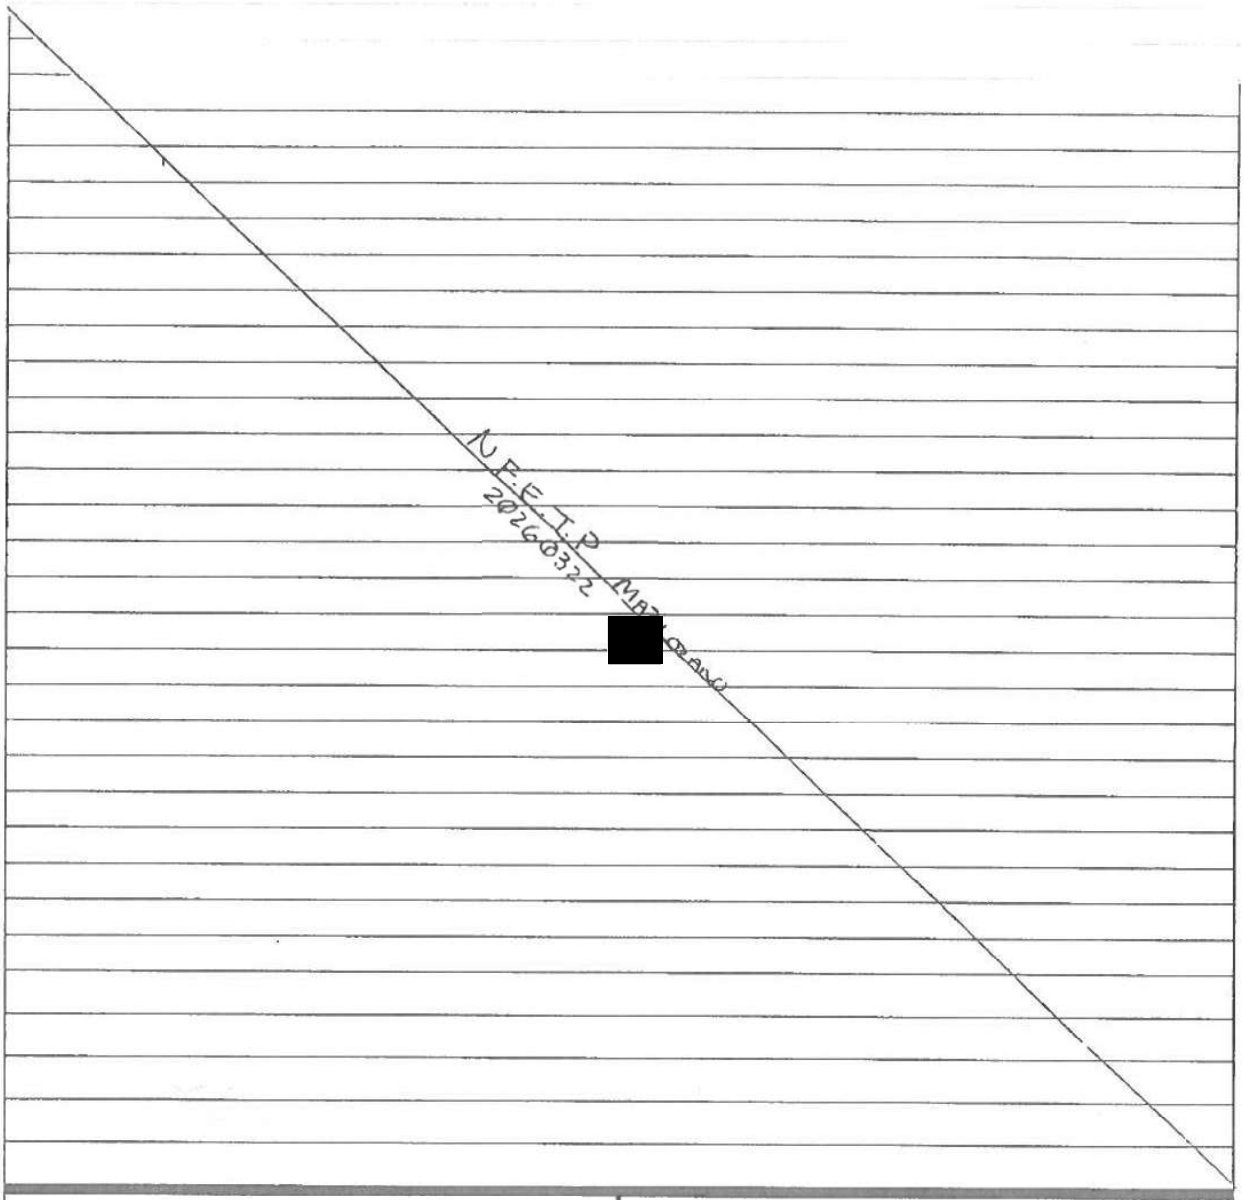
VOLUNTARY STATEMENT

1. Place: KILO-EAST



2. Date Time: 22MAR2026 1400

I, MA2 Lozano, make the following free and voluntary statement to MAC Jones, whom I know to be a command investigator for the Naval Consolidated Brig Chesapeake. I make this statement of my own free will and without any threats or promises extended to me. I fully understand that this statement concerns my knowledge of: Prisoner Copeland.

On the above date and time, I, MA2 Lozano, and MAC Winjum were notified by QM2 Russell and IC2 Mcintyre that while conducting cell inspections they found a stain that appeared to be dried blood in Prisoner Copeland's cell. We immediately notified medical, and made our way to Kilo East. Upon arriving, we spoke with Copeland to ask where the blood came from. He said "my hands." We asked him to see his hands and asked him how long the blood had been on the floor. He stated that it had been there since Friday. (Both myself and MAC Winjum took turns doing the CDO Tour in mornings and didn't see anything) We asked, why didn't he ask for medical or even for some Band-Aids, and he claimed that he asked nights for one but never got it. He then stated that he asked for toilet paper and it took him three days to get some. He didn't give any names of any guards. We told Copeland that he was going to be evaluated by medical. We then went to the Kilo East bubble and directed IC2 McIntyre and QM2 Russell to escort Copeland to the medical interview room so he can get seen by medical. MAC Winjum grabbed the camera and took pictures of his hands, cell and the amount of blood found. BM2 Guthrie, BM2 Trejo and GSM1 Zhanaydavila gathered the cleaning supplies to sanitize the cell. HM1 Evans evaluated Copeland's hands and thumb, and told Copeland that after he showered, he would wrap his thumb. Following the shower, Copelands scabs from previous picking were re-opened, and HM1 Evans bandaged the rest of his hand. Notifications were made via phone call to MA1 Banicki, MSgt Gibbons, and OIC.----------END OF STATEMENT----------

On the above date and time, I, ITI Gray was standing KE Special Quarters Supervisor and was taking prisoner Copeland out of his cell to apply restraints and take him to his command visitation. When the cell door opened prior to escorting prisoner Copeland, I observed what appeared to be tissue stained with blood inside the cell. SNP Copeland did not have any visible signs of active bleeding. Upon completion of visitation and fire drill, at approximately 1156, myself, MAC Winjum (CDO), BM2 Trejo, and HM2 Siler (Duty Corpsman) conducted a cell inspection of cell KE-79. Upon opening the door, we saw what appeared to be two separate pools of blood, one older and one newer, right next to the door frame of the cell. MAC Winjum took photos of the blood, while HM2 Siler conducted a medical interview with prisoner Copeland. Medical deemed the blood and injuries were old and required no further attention. Medical then cleaned up the blood.

LCDR Dempsey,

I'm assuming this is related to the new Friday hearing? Either way, I read through both documents and, though I may have already provided similar feedback, I made various notes throughout the motion, no issues with the response. Sorry if this is too much but figure I would give you what notes I made and you can ignore what doesn't help make the case.

MOTION

"These conditions have also inhibited CSSN Copeland's 6th Amendment right to counsel." – False, he has the same access to legal counsel as any other MAX prisoner and we have never denied his ability to meet or speak with his counsel. Additionally, we've already made several exceptions to policy (ETP) for his visitation, one of which grew from the original agreement (they had an additional specialist come down after we had agreed to the original two).

BURDEN

3. "In fact, clinicians at the brig recommended CSSN Copeland be removed from "POI" or prevention of injury status." Enclosure N is an email from me where I mentioned we were taking him off POI based on clinical recommendation.

4. "Despite zero indications of violence" – He was punching walls, also, he was removed from POI and is not currently on POI.

4. "..the brig OIC continued to speculate about 'what if' something happened.." – that is part of my job to weigh the pros/cons or risks/rewards. The SECNAV also gives the Brig Officer the authority to make those decisions based on the circumstances.

5. and 6. Per authority granted by SECNAV M-1640.1 pages 4-10 and 4-11.

7. and 8. Relevance? ("had spent 247 days in max custody" and the Charleston Change of Command)

9. Should read "He is confined to his cell at most 22 hours a day. The way they worded it means he is at most out of his cell 2 hours a day, when he is out of his cell at least 2 hours a day.

10. The MAX outdoor rec area has two sections, Copeland has used both sections. One is the cage they mention, the other is an outdoor area with a half basketball court and outdoor exercise equipment (similar to the gym just without free weights). As for the lack of outdoor rec due to weather, that is per our SOP/rules, not just for Copeland, so that is fair across the board. If it's too hot, too cold, or inclement weather, we do indoor rec.

11. This is allowed per SOP and SECNAV pg 8-36 and specifically 2-20 section 4.a.(3). Also, my understanding is Judge ordered there be a face-to-face meeting one way or the other; whether here at the brig or doing a temp release (TR) to A-50 or wherever. The Judge did not order me to facilitate it specifically; not sure they have that authority either. Once again for safety and security, I spoke with my CO and recommended we just support here since it's safer to keep him in the facility rather than outside the facility.

12. Wondering how they know this, just like how that civilian attorney knew we had made an ETP for Copeland. The atty brought it up, which led to me mentioning that ETP had been rescinded. Also, was my CO that rescinded it technically, since CDR Brisco signed the ETP and CDR Howard allowed it to stand until violated.

13. I did not say "You lawyers are all the same" or something to that effect. Nor would I say I was loud or aggressive, there were several other people on the Quarterdeck at the time. They left out the fact that this was the third time that atty lied to my staff by telling them I had authorized contact visitation for him and the other prisoner when I did not. The CDOs handled it by contacting me to verify, but after the third time I figured I needed to address the issue with him directly.

14. The atty was trying to tell me how good of a prisoner that prisoner was and no issues, I mentioned he was ACCUSED (I specifically used that verbiage) of killing and dismembering someone, which leads to him being a MAX prisoner, which means no contact visitation per the SECNAV and SOP. I also didn't say "testified before, I don't care". He threatened to take me to court over my refusal and I said it wasn't the first time I had to testify for this same issue and I'd see him there (in court).

15. Disagree, we've already made multiple ETPs for Copeland visitation, one which grew beyond what I originally agreed to and I still allowed it (they are welcome). Also, I allowed his mother extended visitation earlier in his confinement due to her having traveled all the way from WA, and exception the SECNAV also puts to the Brig Officer to decide. Regarding my "unassailable position that allegations equal criminality.." no, that is per SECNAV 2-20, 4-10 through 4-11.

16. Those confiscated legal documents were crime scene and coroner photographs that he left out in the open/plain view on his desk during a cell search. His legal documents are usually kept in a folder, inside storage box he has access to. DC eventually gave him another copy of everything and he was allowed to keep them and we explained to him how he is supposed to store those items.

17. We have the noise machines for this purpose and I'm not aware of any guards saying they need to overhear the conversation as part of their job or anything else. I've only ever heard people state they are aware of attorney client privilege.

ARGUMENT

Second paragraph. "Article 13 prohibits punishment of an accused.." – this is not punishment, he is a MAX per the guidance in the SECNAV.

"..stray from a proper function.." – doesn't stray from SECNAV guidance.

Third paragraph. He received a DR for disrespect on 10FEB and one on 04FEB for disrespect, disobedience, and staff harassment.

Fourth paragraph. Redundant and based on the assumption that being a MAX prisoner is in fact unduly harsh punishment (which they have not established as a fact). "..very definition of illegal punishment." Same response, not punishment, see SECNAV.

Fight paragraph. Redundant as above.

a. Already said above

-"..the brig OIC's perception" aka understanding of the SECNAV. Yes, I watch the news, local, national, and international. The local news talks about the case. They don't talk about other prisoners and they remain MAX based on their individual circumstances.

b. "..detriment of his 6th Amendment.." they already made this claim above, we do not hinder his right to counsel, just their insistence that we go against our lawful guidance to make exceptions for them.

-"materials were reviewed and confiscated." – the same photos mentioned above.

c. 'The brig OIC has demonstrated disdain for the defense counsel in this case.." how? I have numerous emails from them thanking me making above mentioned ETPs. Not wanting to make exceptions without good reason is not disdain, it's my job. One day if I make exceptions left and right, something will go wrong and then I'll be in the hot seat. The only DC I've had issue with was for a different prisoner and that was due to him lying to my staff.

-"..run the brig as he sees fit;" aka IAW SECNAV policy.

Footnote 18 – True, I mentioned that as other prisoners watch the local news during meal times and Copeland's case has been mentioned, to include that he was in confinement here in Chesapeake. That is just a piece of the information I have to make a decision. My thought on this was more for Copeland's safety in case anyone else there knew the victim, or just felt like harming him for whatever other reason (I believe there is precedent for this type of behavior in other confinement facilities). The majority of that decision was still based on the SECNAV guidance.

d. Again, "remains in maximum custody." Because of the SECNAV guidance.

-"has been punished before ever gets his day in court." False, this again is assuming the DC's claims are factual and he shouldn't be a MAX prisoner.

-"Article 13 prohibits exactly this type of punishment.." I would replace punishment with the word confinement.

-"Those cases have yielded months of admin credit" – I'm assuming this is in regards to Reimonenq and maybe prisoner Day. Day was in Gen Pop when I got here and stayed there until transferring. Reimonenq I can only speculate on, my understanding is the prosecution botched things up and he was kept in confinement while they tried to rebuild their case and eventually the judge gave him time served. I'm not privy to those details so can't really say.

-"CDR Flanagan's predecessor certainly knew.." I did not get a face-to-face turnover, he was gone about a month before I stepped food in VA.

Again, apologies for the length, at least they are all bullets. Please let me know if you have any questions about any of it.

V/R,

OIC

Good Afternoon Sir,

Please find supplemental filings on the confinement credit issue attached here for the case of US v. Copeland. I do not expect you will be called as a witness, but if we did, that would be telephonic. Thank you.

Very Respectfully,

Dear LCDR Serfress and LCDR Morgan,

Per your request, I am providing a summary of the evaluation I performed of your client, CSSN Copeland on May 15, 2026. These results reflect my current impressions of CSSN Copeland. The summary of the evaluation is as follows:

Client Name: CSSN Jermiah Copeland
Date of Birth: March 23, 2005

SOURCES OF INFORMATION:

- Clinical interview regarding CSSN Copeland's relevant history and administration of psychological testing on May 15, 2026 (approximately four hours, forty-five minutes)
- Verbal consultations with LCDR Serfress and LCDR Morgan, CSSN Copeland's defense counsel
- Verbal consultation with Ms. Daniela LaValva, LCSW
- Review of law enforcement reports and investigative documents related to the instant offenses
- Review of CSSN Copeland's school records
- Review of CSSN Copeland's records from the Naval Consolidated Brig Chesapeake
- Collateral telephone interview with CSSN Copeland's grandmother, Ms. Kathleen Brown on May 26, 2026 (approximately twenty minutes)
- Collateral telephone interview with CSSN Copeland's ex-girlfriend, Ms. Dezi Ramirez-Vasquez on May 26, 2026 (approximately ten minutes)
- Collateral telephone interview with CSSN Copeland's mother, Ms. Rochell Brown on May 26, 2026 (approximately fifteen minutes)

- Collateral telephone interview with CSSN Copeland's brother, Mr. Isaiah Copeland on May 27, 2026 (approximately fifteen minutes)

PSYCHOLOGICAL TESTING:
Techniques Utilized:

1. Test of Memory Malingering (TOMM)
2. Validity Indicator Profile (VIP)
3. Repeatable Battery for the Assessment of Neuropsychological Status (RBANS)
4. Delis-Kaplan Executive Function System (D-KEFS)
5. Behavior Rating Inventory of Executive Function, Second Edition, Adult Version (BRIEF-2A)

TEST RESULTS:

Response Style:

The TOMM is a memory recognition task in which the subject is shown a series of line drawings and then shown another series where one of the drawings was in the previous list and one was not. The subject is asked to identify which of two line drawings was one that had previously been presented. The test is designed to help distinguish between malingered and true memory impairments. A score significantly below that of the mean for individuals with cognitive impairment suggests the possibility of less-than-optimal effort and possibly malingering.

On the TOMM, CSSN Copeland's scores (Trial 1 = 50 out of 50; Trial 2 = 50 out of 50) indicate that he was putting forth good effort during testing.

The VIP is a measure of response validity that is intended to be administered concurrently within a battery of cognitive tests. It consists of two subtests, Nonverbal and Verbal, that are administered and scored separately. The VIP is useful for identifying when the results of cognitive or neuropsychological testing may be invalid because of an intention to perform sub-optimally or because of decreased effort, whether intentional or not. When the VIP indicates that a test taker's approach to the assessment was valid, the clinician can generally have confidence that the individual intended to perform well on the test and made a concerted effort to do so.

On the VIP, CSSN Copeland's performance on both the Nonverbal and Verbal subtests should be considered valid. The characteristics of his responses indicate that he intended to do well and he applied sustained effort. Although the VIP was not designed to generate a measure of reasoning ability, general level of comprehension, word knowledge, or reading ability, it is often possible to generate reasonable estimates of ability based on characteristics of the examinee's performance curve and adjusted score. Results of the VIP suggest that CSSN Copeland's reasoning ability is at least low average to average or higher. Results suggest his word knowledge is at least significantly below average or higher.

Cognitive Functioning:

The RBANS Update is a measure of various domains of cognitive functioning, including immediate and delayed memory, attention, language, and visuospatial/constructional skills.

CSSN Copeland scored in the Low Average range on the index measuring Immediate Memory (SS=83, 13th percentile), which included a measure of memory of basic verbal information (List Learning) and complex verbal information (Story Memory). This index measures the examinee's ability to remember information immediately after it is presented.

CSSN Copeland scored in the Average range on the Visuospatial/Constructional index (SS=96, 39th percentile), which included an assessment of his ability to copy a complex geometric design from a model (Figure Copy) and correctly identify the spatial orientation of lines in two dimensions (Line Orientation). This index measures the individual's ability to perceive spatial relations.

CSSN Copeland scored in the Borderline range on the Language index (SS=74, 4th percentile) which assessed his ability to perform confrontation naming (Picture Naming) and to demonstrate rapid verbal production based on category (Semantic Fluency). This index assesses the examinee's ability to respond verbally to either naming or retrieving learned material.

CSSN Copeland scored in the Extremely Low range on the Attention index (SS=53, 0.1st percentile), which measured his auditory attention (Digit Span) and his ability to rapidly process and respond to visual stimuli (Coding). This index assesses the examinee's capacity to remember and manipulate both visually and orally presented information in short-term memory storage.

CSSN Copeland scored in the Low Average range on the Delayed Memory index (SS=83, 13th percentile) which assessed free recall of basic verbal information (List Recall), recognition of basic verbal information (List Recognition), free recall of complex verbal information (Story Recall), and free recall of complex visual information (Figure Recall). This index assesses the examinee's anterograde memory capacity.

CSSN Copeland's Total Scale score, a measure of general cognitive functioning, fell within the Borderline range (SS = 72; 3rd percentile). His scores are lower than expected for his age and estimated IQ (Below Average to Average range), suggesting general lowering of skills particularly in the domains of language and attention.

Executive Functioning:

The Delis-Kaplan Executive Function System (D-KEFS) is a set of standardized tests used to assess higher-level cognitive abilities, which are known as executive functions. Executive functions draw upon an individual's more fundamental cognitive skills, such as attention, language, and perception to generate more complex cognitive operations. The D-KEFS measures a variety of verbal and nonverbal executive functions for children and adults (ages 8–89 years). It is comprised of nine tests that were designed to stand alone; therefore, tests can be selected for specific reasons.

The D-KEFS subtests assess various dimensions of executive function. Several of the subtests assess complex attention by requiring the subject to engage in a variety of tasks that require attention to multiple cognitive processes simultaneously, shifting set or dealing with distracting stimuli while attempting to carry out a target behavior. Other subtests tap into abstract reasoning and problem-solving abilities, which are also dimensions of executive function.

Trail Making Test: This subtest requires the person to visually scan and locate targets on the page in front of them. The conditions increase in difficulty from condition 1 to condition 4. Condition 5 is a motor skills condition only. Condition 4 is the primary executive function task, and it assesses flexibility of thinking on a visual-motor task. CSSN Copeland's performance on the Trail Making test fell in the Low Average to Average range.

Verbal Fluency Test: This subtest requires the examinee to generate words that begin with a particular letter as quickly as possible, then to generate words that belong to a designated semantic category as quickly as possible, and finally to generate words, alternating between two different semantic categories as quickly as possible. The Verbal Fluency subtest measures the examinee's ability to generate words fluently in an effortful, phonemic format, from overlearned concepts, and while simultaneously shifting between overlearned concepts. CSSN Copeland's performance on this subtest was generally in the Low Average to Average range. However, it was noteworthy that during the second 15 second time interval across the three conditions, his performance fell in the Borderline range, which suggests that maintaining verbally fluent responses is a weakness for him. CSSN Copeland also exhibited a significant number of set loss errors in the first condition; however, the errors he made were mild and not likely indicative of serious cognitive deficits.

Design Fluency Test: This subtest evaluates a person's ability to generate line designs by following simple rules as quickly as possible. There are minimal words required other than the instructions. An understanding of the instructions is determined prior to moving into the subtest condition. The subtest consists of three conditions, each one slightly different and the third one more challenging requiring the person to switch between rule sets. This subtest is a basic test of design fluency, response inhibition, and cognitive flexibility. CSSN Copeland's performance on the Design Fluency subtest was generally in the Average to Very Superior range. However, his Percent Design Accuracy score fell in the Low Average range, which suggests he may have some relative difficulty with initiation of problem solving and in establishing and maintaining the cognitive set of the task, when compared to his other skills as measured by the Design Fluency subtest. Additionally, CSSN Copeland's contrast score, which compares his performance on condition 3 to his combined performance on conditions 1 and 2, fell in the Borderline range and suggests he has a relative personal deficit in cognitive shifting.

Color-Word Interference Test: This subtest requires the person to name color blocks, read color words, and use inhibition and cognitive flexibility to complete the 3rd and 4th conditions. The foundation is a simple task but as the conditions progress, the tasks become more difficult. This subtest measures the examinee's ability to inhibit an overlearned verbal response to generate a conflicting response, thus assessing inhibition and cognitive flexibility. CSSN Copeland's performance on this subtest was in the Low Average to High Average range.

Free Sorting Test: This subtest requires the examinee to sort six mixed-up cards that display both stimulus words and various perceptual features into two groups containing three cards per group, according to as many different categorization rules or concepts as possible. The examinee is then asked to describe the concepts used to generate each sort. This subtest assesses a person's ability to initiate problem-solving behavior in both verbal and nonverbal modalities. CSSN Copeland's performance on this measure fell in the Average range.

Twenty Questions Test: For this subtest, the examinee is shown a page with several items pictured on it. The examiner has selected one of the items, and using "yes or no" questions, the examinee attempts to guess the selected item with as few questions as possible. This subtest assesses the ability to perceive various categories and subcategories, to formulate abstract questions, and to incorporate feedback to formulate more efficient questions. CSSN Copeland's scores fell in the Low Average to Average range.

Word Context Test: For this subtest, the individual attempts to discover the meaning of a made-up word based on its use in five clue sentences, using as few clue sentences as possible. The examinee is asked to continue reporting the correct response to the remaining clue sentences of the item. This subtest evaluates executive functions in the verbal modality and assesses skills such as deductive reasoning, integration of multiple bits of information, hypothesis testing, and flexibility of thinking. CSSN Copeland's performance on this measure was in the Average range.

Tower Test: This subtest requires the examinee to move disks of varying sizes across three pegs to build a designated tower in the fewest number of moves possible, while complying with specific rules related to how to move the disks. The Tower Test assesses spatial planning, rule learning, inhibition of impulsive and perseverative responding, and the ability to establish and maintain the instructional set. CSSN Copeland's scores on this subtest were in the Average to High Average range.

Proverbs Test: This subtest is designed to evaluate a person's ability to recognize the meaning of sayings or proverbs both with a free response and with multiple choice responses. The examinee is presented with common proverbs and uncommon proverbs. This subtest measures fundamental verbal skills and the ability to integrate the meanings of individual words into coherent, abstract principles or concepts. CSSN Copeland's performance for free inquiry fell in the low average range. He struggled to understand and explain the more abstract proverbs, and his score in that area was in the Borderline range. CSSN Copeland's responses tended to be concrete rather than abstract responses indicating an understanding of the underlying meaning of the proverb. His abstraction only score fell in the Impaired range.

The BRIEF-2A is a standardized rating scale designed to provide a window into everyday behaviors associated with specific domains of executive functioning in adults ages eighteen years and older. Ratings of everyday executive functions, or self-regulation, are good predictors of an individual's functioning in many areas, including academic, vocational, social, behavioral, and emotional.

The BRIEF-2A profile based on CSSN Copeland's responses shows that he provided responses to all the test items. Validity scales show that his responding was reasonably consistent across the course of the test and he did not rate himself in an overly negative or atypical manner. Therefore, the results can be interpreted with confidence.

The results of the BRIEF-2A suggest the presence of mild self-regulatory problems in two domains. The first area of concern is inhibitory control and impulsivity, which is the ability to resist impulses and the ability to stop one's own behavior at the appropriate time. CSSN Copeland likely has difficulty resisting impulses and considering consequences before acting. He may be perceived as being less in control of himself than his peers, interrupting others frequently, saying inappropriate things, and/or being restless or unable to sit still for appropriate lengths of time. Others may express concerns about his verbal and social intrusiveness or lack of personal safety.

The other area of concern is self-monitor, which refers to awareness of the impact of one's own behavior on other people and outcomes. CSSN Copeland likely has difficulty monitoring his behavior in social settings and may show limited awareness of his behavior and the impact it has on his social interactions with others. The following areas on the BRIEF-2A were not rated as areas of concern for CSSN Copeland.

1. Shift: ability to move freely from one situation, activity, or aspect of a problem to another as the circumstances demand.
2. Emotional control: ability to modulate or regulate emotional responses.
3. Initiate: ability to begin a task or activity and to independently generate ideas, responses, or problem-solving strategies.
4. Working memory: capacity to hold information in the mind for the purpose of completing a task, encoding information, or generating goals, plans, and sequential steps to achieve goals.
5. Plan/organize: ability to manage current and future-oriented task demands.
6. Task-monitor: ability to keep track of one's own problem-solving successes and failures and to identify and correct mistakes.
7. Organization of materials: measures orderliness of work, living, and storage spaces.

SUMMARY OF TEST RESULTS:

CSSN Copeland's performance on the TOMM and VIP suggested he was putting forth optimal effort during the testing session, and the results of the additional testing that was administered can be interpreted with confidence. The results of the VIP also indicate his reasoning ability is at least low average to average or higher, and his word knowledge is at least significantly below average or higher. Overall, results of testing indicate that CSSN Copeland's language abilities, specifically maintaining verbally fluent responses and verbal abstraction are a weakness for him. He also has weaknesses in the areas of attention, inhibitory control and impulsivity, and awareness of the impact of his behavior on others and on outcomes.

This concludes my evaluation of CSSN Copeland. The opinions expressed in this report are subject to modification if additional data becomes available. I reserve the right to express additional opinions that I believe are consistent with the data from this evaluation if I decide it is appropriate or if I am called upon to do so. If I can be of any further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

Arrange and bind the record of trial with allied papers in the sequence indicated below. The court reporter is responsible for certifying the record of trial prior to transmittal for appellate review, in accordance with R.C.M. 1112 and JAG/CNLSCINST 5813.1G.

1. Pages 1 (Cover page) and 2 (Chronology Sheet) of DD Form 490 (enclosure 7).

2. Court reporter certification of Record of Trial (enclosure 8).

3. Military Judge verification of Record of Trial (enclosure 8).

4. DD Form 490 (pages 3-6 and any continuation pages if needed) (enclosure 7).

5. Completed Post-Trial Checklist from JAG/CNLSCINST 5814.1G (enclosure 2).

6. Completed Convening Authority's Action Checklist (enclosure 4).

7. Post-Trial Documents.

a. Certificates/Proof of Service of the Certified Record of Trial to the accused and victim, if applicable (enclosure 7).

b. Convening Authority's Action and Entry of Judgment (enclosure 6).

c. Any requests for copies of the court-martial record pursuant to R.C.M. 1106 or 1106A (attach written requests, and any certificates/proof of service, but do not attach the victim's post-trial rights advisement or DD Form 2704).

d. Matters submitted by the accused and/or victim under R.C.M. 1106 or 1106A, or any written waiver of the right to submit such matters. Include all responses to requests here as well.

e. Any deferment request and the action on it (including any request to waive automatic forfeitures under Article 58b).

f. Conditions of suspension and proof of service on probationer under R.C.M. 1107, if any.

g. All clemency recommendations by members or military judge, if any.

h. Statement of Trial Results (enclosure 1).

i. Crime Reporting Information.

j. Accused's request for appellate defense counsel, or waiver/withdrawal of appellate review under R.C.M. 1115, if applicable.

k. All transfer orders, confinement orders, and excess leave orders.

l. Briefs of counsel submitted after trial, if any.

8. Preliminary Hearing.

a. DD Form 457, Preliminary Hearing Officer's Report, pursuant to Article 32, if such hearing was conducted, followed by any other allied papers that accompanied the charges when referred for trial (including any matters submitted under R.C.M. 405(l), unless included elsewhere in the record of trial).*

b. Waiver of Article 32 Hearing (if applicable).

9. Pre-Trial Allied Papers.

a. Convening Order and all amending convening orders.

b. DD Form 458, Charge Sheet (unless included at the point of arraignment in the transcript).

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

c. Congressional inquiries and replies, if any.

d. Advice of staff judge advocate, when prepared pursuant to Article 34 or otherwise.

10. Record of Proceedings.

a. Substantially verbatim recording of court-martial proceedings. Segregate open and closed sessions of the court-martial in accordance with R.C.M. 1113 and the following guidance:*

b. Ensure that each closed session of the court-martial is recorded on a separate DVD marked CLOSED SESSION, placed in its own envelope marked CLOSED SESSION, and sealed.

c. Label all DVD(s) and envelopes with the information on page 1 of this template.

d. Mark all DVDs and envelopes with "1 of X." as necessary (for example, the second DVD of six DVDs and its envelope should be marked, 2 of 6). All DVDs of open sessions may be in one envelope.

e. Mark all DVDs with their beginning and ending timestamps. The timestamps for closed sessions should match those shown on the Index.

f. Verbatim transcript or summarized report prepared in accordance with JAGINST 5814.1G. Include the following:

I. A certificate of correction, if any (including any supplemental certification for additional proceedings).

II. Court reporter and transcriptionist certification of verbatim transcript.

g. Records of former proceedings (Article 30a) and/or trials, (e.g., electronic/digital record of former proceeding, including audio recording and any scanned documentation/transcripts, CD/DVD format).*

11. Prosecution exhibits admitted in evidence.

12. Defense Exhibits admitted in evidence.

13. Appellate Exhibits including but not limited to, proposed instructions, written offers of proof or preliminary evidence (real or documentary), briefs of counsel submitted at trial, request to be tried by military judge alone (if any), the accused election of members under R.C.M. 903 (if any), any statement by convening authority required under R.C.M. 503(a)(2), and the election for sentencing by members in lieu of sentencing by military judge under R.C.M. 1002(b).*

14. Redaction. The following information shall be redacted in accordance with JAGMAN 1059 from the record of trial prior to releasing it to any accused or victim (including any transcript made pursuant to R.C.M. 1114 and attached to the record of trial) unless the information establishes an element of an offense, or is otherwise required:

a. Any recordings of closed sessions, any transcripts of closed sessions, and any sealed exhibits.

b. Names of minor victims, and names of minor witnesses. If an identifier is used, use only the initials.

c. Social Security Numbers.

d. Financial account information.

e. Home addresses.

f. Telephone numbers.

g. Personal e-mail addresses.

h. Dates of birth.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

i. Any other information that could be used to identify a specific person other than the accused.

*If the report of preliminary hearing or record of trial contains exhibits, proceedings, or other materials ordered sealed by the preliminary hearing officer or military judge, counsel for the Government, the court reporter, or trial counsel shall cause such materials to be sealed to prevent unauthorized examination or disclosure, pursuant to R.C.M. 1113. Sealed material shall be properly marked, individually placed in separate envelopes with a copy of the preliminary hearing officer or military judge sealing order affixed to it, and inserted at the appropriate place in the record of trial. Do not duplicate sealed material to include it in any copy of the record of trial. Instead, insert a copy of the sealing order in lieu of any sealed material, in any copies of the record of trial.

DIVIDERS ARE NOT NECESSARY TO SEPARATE EACH SECTION. IF USED, THEY CAN BE PAPER RATHER THAN CARD STOCK. IF A PARTICULAR COMPONENT IS NOT APPLICABLE IN THE RECORD OF TRIAL, SUCH AS AN ARTICLE 32 HEARING, EXHIBITS NOT ADMITTED, POST-TRIAL PROCEEDINGS AND VACATION HEARINGS, DO NOT INSERT A DIVIDER OR PLACEHOLDER.

FRONT AND BACK COVER MUST BE ON BLUE CARDS STOCK AND LABELED WITH GUM LABELS.

Binding. Each volume of a record of trial should be no more than 1.5 inches thick and bound at the top with metal or plastic fasteners. DO NOT interlace or "piggy-back" prong fasteners to create an oversized volume. DO NOT place hole punches where it covers up the evidence or language in the transcript. When it becomes necessary to assemble the record of trial in more than one volume, the volumes will be numbered consecutively, on the front cover, as illustrated below:

Volume 1 of 4 (Pages 1-250)
Volume 2 of 4 (Pages 251-400)
Volume 3 of 4 (Pages 401-652)
Volume 4 of 4 (Pages 653-901 and Exhibits)

Make the first volume of a multi-volume record an inch thick or smaller to allow for inclusion of post-trial documents. Limit subsequent volumes to 1.5 inches, unless dividing them requires assembling an additional volume smaller than a half inch.

Label the upper right-hand corner or the Preparation and Certification of Record of Trial Form (enclosure (8)) to reflect which copy it is, i.e., "ORIGINAL," "ACCUSED," "REVIEW" etc.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN / E-3 USN	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION TO DISMISS (FAILURE TO STATE AN OFFENSE) 5 DEC 2025

RESPONSE

1. Pursuant to Rule for Court-Martial (RCM) 907(b)(2)(E), the Defense's motion to dismiss the sole Specification of Charge VII for failure to state an offense should be denied. The challenged Specification includes all necessary elements and provides adequate notice.

BURDEN

2. The Defense bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence and the burden of persuasion as the moving party.[1]

FACTS

3. The sole Specification of Charge VII alleges as follows:

> In that Culinary Specialist Seaman Jermiah T. Copeland, U.S. Navy, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95), on active duty, did at or near Norfolk, Virginia, on or about 29 May 2025, with premeditation, murder CS3 A.R., U.S. Navy, by means of an act of the Accused.[2]

4. On 15 October 2025, the Defense requested a bill of particulars for this Specification.[3] The Government responded on 5 November 2025.[4]

5. In that bill of particulars, the Government explained that it "is not required to prove a specific act caused CS3 A.R's death."[5] But the Government did outline that it intended to "present evidence that CS3 A.R.'s death was consistent with strangulation by the Accused," including evidence as separately detailed and noticed under M.R.E. 404(b).[6]

6. The remains of CS3 A.R. were extremely decayed upon recovery after the Accused left her body in the woods for several days.[7] A conclusive manner of murder has not been identified.[8] However, as outlined in the Government's response to the Defense's motion in limine under M.R.E. 404(b), the pathological, forensic, and other evidence indicate together that the Accused strangled CS3 A.R. to death on 29 May 2025.[9]

LAW

7. "A specification is sufficient if it alleges every element of the charged offense expressly or by necessary implication."[10] A defective Specification should only be dismissed when it is "so defective that it substantially misled the accused" and the interest of justice requires that trial "proceed on any remaining charges and specifications without undue delay."[11]

8. To prove a violation of premeditated murder under Article 118, UCMJ, the Government must show:

a. That a certain named or described person is dead;

b. That the death resulted from the act or omission of the accused;

c. That the killing was unlawful; and

d. That, at the time of the killing, the accused had a premeditated design to kill.[12]

9. To ensure the constitutional rights of an accused are protected, a Specification "must: (1) allege, either expressly or by necessary implication, every element of the offense intended to be charged and 'sufficiently apprise the accused of what he must be prepared to meet'; and (2) protect him against double jeopardy."[13]

10. "[I]t is for Congress to define criminal offenses and their constituent parts."[14] As such, "failure to follow a model specification is not determinative of whether a specification states an offense."[15]

11. A specification does not need to detail specific facts beyond that required by statute, but if the Government chooses to do so it is "bound to abide by" that narrow scope.[16] Indeed, as long as each element is included in the specification and an accused is protected from double jeopardy, "a specification need not 'allege in detail the factual proof that will be relied upon to support the charges.'"[17] "[M]ore detailed information, 'if essential to the defense, can be obtained by a motion for a bill of particulars or through pretrial discovery.'"[18] When an act is charged, "[t]he Government [i]s not required to allege in the specification the evidence it would offer to prove [the accused] committed that act."[19]

12. Specific to intentional murder, in United States v. Elmore, the Navy-Marine Corps Court of Military Review found the evidence to be legally sufficient in a case where the specification of intentional murder did not allege a specific act and there was limited forensic evidence.[20] In Elmore, the specification alleged that the murder was done by an "unknown act of unlawful force or violence."[21] While failure to state an offense was not specifically before the court, the court explained that as long as the Government proves corpus delicti,[22] the finding could be both legally and factually sufficient, even in the case of a specification "for premeditated murder in a case where there is no body or only traces of a body."[23] It went on to explain that corpus delecti is proven by "two elements: that the alleged victim is dead and that the death was the result of some criminal agency."[24] Indeed, the Court found that charging no specific act but arguing a specific manner of murder at trial (stabbing in this case) rendered a finding that was sufficiently supported by the evidence.[25]

10. The Coast Guard Court of Criminal Appeals (CGCCA)'s decision in United States v. Richard provides the rare exception to when it is necessary to provide more than the statute requires in a specification to ensure adequate notice.[26] In Richard, the CGCCA held that more specific notice in a specification may be required when "the aperture of potential acts or omissions" is substantial based on the facts of the case.[27] In a prosecution for involuntary manslaughter, the court found that charging only a manner of death (neither an act or omission) in this specific case was insufficient notice for the accused to adequately defend herself.[28] The court explained that "merely reciting an element without alleging central facts or circumstances can still deprive an accused of constitutionally required notice."[29] The court applied this reasoning to the specification of involuntary manslaughter and found the specification gave inadequate notice by not stating a specific act or omission.[30] The court held "it can scarcely be disputed that what an accused actually did or failed to do that resulted in the death or another is at the core of any prosecution" for an allegation of that type.[31] But of substantial interest here, the court explicitly distinguished this holding from an allegation of "intentional murder" because "the aperture of potential acts or omissions significantly" increases for an allegation of involuntary manslaughter vice murder.[32]

11. The court in Richard then ruled the lack of notice for involuntary manslaughter was not harmless and warranted dismissal.[33] The court specifically found that dismissal was warranted because there was no bill of particulars, the discovery pointed to a number of possible acts or omissions that led to the victims death, and the Government explicitly refused to "confine itself to any particular act(s) or omission(s)" at trial, presenting evidence for a number of methods that the victim may have been killed.[34]

12. In contrast, in United States v. Ray, the CGCCA outlined precisely why its holding in Richard is the exception.[35] In Ray, the defense argued that the specification at issue failed to state an offense under Richard because it failed "to allege a specific act or acts constituting 'sexually intimate behavior.'"[36] In distinguishing the "peculiar" facts of Richard, the CGCCA found that because "engaging in sexually intimate behavior 'alleges an act'" the specification was sufficient.[37] Specifically, the court held that despite this language potentially "encompass[ing] a broad array of conduct" it described the accused as "actively doing something" and that was sufficient.[38] The CGCCA held that "[t]he Government was not required to allege in the specification the evidence it would offer to prove he committed that act. It was entitled to present evidence of all of Appellant's sexually charged comments and actions on 18 March 2022 to demonstrate that he engaged in sexually intimate behavior."[39]

ARGUMENT

13. The sole Specification of Charge VII states an offense and protects the Accused against double jeopardy. The elements of the offense have been included in the Specification—this is not contested. And that is all that is required. The sample specification is not the statute. As explained in Ray, "[t]he Government [i]s not required to allege in the specification the evidence it would offer to prove he committed that act."[40] To the contrary, the Government is "entitled to present evidence of all of" the Accused's actions to demonstrate that he intentionally murdered CS3 A.R.[41]

14. And while the Government is not required to narrow the scope of the language of the Specification beyond that required by statute, it did so here. The Government specified the murder was from an "act" of the Accused, not either of "an act or omission."

15. Any additional concerns about adequate notice have been remedied by both discovery and a bill of particulars. There is little room for dispute that the evidence indicates the Accused murdered CS3 A.R. through some act on 29 May 2025. Unfortunately, as highlighted by the Defense, CS3 A.R.'s decomposed remains were unable to provide a conclusive manner of death and there is no direct evidence of such. But the process of elimination when paired with forensic and eyewitness evidence is illuminating here. There is no evidence of blunt force trauma, stabbing, shooting, overdose, suicide, or death by natural causes. This leaves a limited number of possible acts, including strangulation—a potential conclusion supported by both pathologists in this case.[42] And while the Government intends to admit all evidence of potential acts at trial, we intend to argue that the Accused strangled CS3 A.R. to death as outlined in our bill of particulars.

16. The limited number of possible acts in this case makes any potential notice issues quite distinguishable from the "peculiar" facts of Richard and more like Ray.[43] Unlike the substantial number of different acts or omissions that could have supported the involuntary manslaughter allegation at issue in Richard that were exacerbated by the Government's tactics and wide-ranging discovery, there are only a small amount of factually similar acts in this case. Richard 41 Id. (citing Sharpe, 438 F.3d at 1263 n.3).

42. The Defense's reference to an electronically transcribed voice memo from Dr. Rodic is erroneous. He has provided that strangulation was "possible or probable" based on his autopsy. Encl. 4 at 29.
43. Ray, 85 M.J. at 636.

hypothesized that in an intentional murder case with a more limited amount of potential acts, there would likely not be a notice violation when a specific act is not in the specification. And in Ray, the CGCCA explicitly found that even if a specification's language alleges an "act" that "encompasses a broad array of conduct" that does not mean a specification fails to state an offense.[44] Moreover, any potential concerns about the language of a specification outlined in Richard or Ray have been remedied by the provided bill of particulars in this case that outlines exactly the act the Government intends to argue: murder by strangulation.

17. And there is precedent for this approach in an intentional murder case. As applied in the no-body homicide case discussed above, Elmore, charging that an "act" of the accused caused an intentional murder does not render a guilty finding legally insufficient. Indeed, the selected language here is even more precise than that in Elmore. The Government seeks to do what was done in Elmore by charging an act of the Accused and arguing a theory of what that act was at trial.

18. To require anything different of the Government in this case gives an incentive to hide or destroy a murder victim's remains and any evidence about the manner of death, as prosecution without a body or with only limited forensic evidence would be impossible due to insufficient notice in later charges. This benefit surely cannot be intended, particularly in a case such as this where the Government is endeavoring to meet the Accused's demands for a speedy trial while the investigation remains ongoing.

19. Other than strangulation, the Defense does not point to any other factually dissimilar method of death they feel they are not on notice to defend against either through discovery or the bill of particulars. That is because under the facts of this case, the Specification provides sufficient notice to the Accused. The Government has unnecessarily narrowed the murder down to an "act," not an omission. And the evidence, particularly as outlined in the Government's bill of particulars, most directly supports only one act of murder: strangulation. The Accused is on more than sufficient notice to meet this Specification.

REQUESTED RELIEF

20. The Government respectfully requests that the Court deny the Defense's motion to dismiss the sole Specification of Charge VII for failure to state an offense.

Ref: (a) R.C.M. 906(b)(6), discussion
(b) Art. 30(b), UCMJ
(c) R.C.M. 307(c)(3)
(d) Glasser v. United States, 315 U.S. 60 (1942)

1. "The purposes of a bill of particulars are to inform the accused of the nature of the charge with sufficient precision to enable the accused to prepare for trial, to avoid or minimize the danger of surprise at the time of trial, and to enable the accused to plead the acquittal or conviction in bar of another prosecution for the same offense when the specification itself is too vague and indefinite for such purposes." Reference (a).

2. In the sole specification of charge VII, the Government charged CSSN Copeland with premeditated murder by means of "an act of the the Accused." The defense requests notice the actual "act" by which the govenrment alleges that CSSN Copeland caused CS3 A.R.'s death.

3. This request is made so that the accused may be precisely informed as to the nature of the charges. References (b) and (c) recognize that the pleading procedures currently utilized in the military provide only a succinct recitation of the manner and means alleged to have perpetrated the crime. Accordingly, this specification is inadequate in providing the accused with the essential facts constituting the offenses. Reference (d) recognizes the basic right of the accused to be aware, in some specificity, of the facts the government will attempt to prove.

4. I request a response within 10 days. If no response is received within that period, I will consider it a denial of this request. If you have any questions or concerns, please contact me at amanda.m.serfess.mil@us.navy.mil or 850-452-5572 with questions.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN / E-3 USN	BILL OF PARTICULARS 5 NOV 2025

1. The Government provides the following bill of particulars pursuant to R.C.M. 906(b)(6) with respect to the charges against CSSN Jermiah T. Copeland, USN, as requested by the Defense on 15 October 2025.

2. The purpose of this bill of particulars is to inform the accused of the nature of the charges with sufficient precision to enable the Accused to prepare for trial and to avoid or minimize the danger of surprise at the time of trial.

3. To prove a violation of premeditated murder under Article 118, UCMJ, the Government must show:

a. That a certain named or described person is dead;

b. That the death resulted from the act or omission of the accused;

c. That the killing was unlawful; and

d. That, at the time of the killing, the accused had a premeditated design to kill.

4. The Government is not required to prove a specific act caused CS3 A.R's death. Instead, the Government must only prove that an act of the Accused caused the death.[1] While the Government will argue that position at trial, as provided in our 5 November 2025 404(b) notice, the Government will present evidence that CS3 A.R.'s death was consistent with strangulation by the Accused.

1. See United States v. Elmore, 31 M.J. 678, 683 (N-M. Ct. M. R. 1990) (explaining that when evaluating the sufficiency of a murder conviction that in a case involving no body or only traces of a body, the Government need not prove the act that caused the death but rather need only prove corpus delecti); United States v. Richard, 84 M.J. 586, 591 (C.G.C.C.A. 2022) (articulating the distinguishable notice required in pleading for involuntary manslaughter vice intentional murder).

5. A bill of particulars does not restrict the Government's proof at trial. Pursuant to RCM 906(b)(6), this bill of particulars may be amended at any time, subject to such conditions as justice permits.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN / E-3 USN	NOTICE UNDER M.R.E. 404(b) AND 413 5 NOV 25

1. Pursuant to Military Rule of Evidence 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish common scheme, motive, and intent for the sole Specification of Charge II (Strangulation), Specification 1 of Charge V (Domestic Violence – Strangulation), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder) as well as lack of accident for the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder):

a. The Accused's history of strangulation as it relates to his actions toward ABHAN C.R. in the sole Specification of Charge II and CSSN S.R. in Specification 1 of Charge V, as well as the evidence consistent with the Accused's strangulation of CS3 A.R. in the sole Specification of Charge VII discussed in detail below.

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. Both the strangulation of ABHAN C.R. and the strangulation of CSSN S.R. were reported separately by each victim and neither had knowledge of the other. Both described being strangled by the Accused. The evidence supports that the Accused strangled CS3 A.R. as well. The medical examiner determined that CS3 A.R.'s death was consistent with strangulation. The medical examiner also ruled out blunt force trauma, stabbing, or shooting as potential causes of death and there were no findings to suggest suicide, overdose, or death by natural causes. CS3 A.R. made a panicked call for help at 0214 to ET3 Daniel Rich, USN, on 29 May 2025 while she was with the Accused. The Accused took the phone and asked ET3 Rich how far away he was. CS3 A.R. was never heard from by her loved ones again. Between 01:52:58-2:30:23, the Accused's heart rate rapidly increased and stayed between 125-128 bpm, spiking again at 130 bpm at 03:07:06. The Accused's suitemate reported hearing what he believed to be karaoke in the common room around that time, but did not investigate. The blood found at the scene was limited to the closet area where the Accused stored the body, suggesting no blood-producing injury occurred and eyewitnesses did not observe any obvious wounds on CS3 A.R.'s body just hours after she was murdered. In fact, they believed she was asleep. As discussed in paragraph 3.c.(1) below, the Accused also had a strong motive to murder CS3 A.R. at the time he did so.

c. The Accused's history of strangulation is offered to establish common scheme, motive, and intent for the sole Specification of Charge II (Strangulation), Specification 1 of Charge V

(Domestic Violence – Strangulation), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder) as well as lack of accident for the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder):

(1) Reasoning in support of common scheme for the sole Specification of Charge II, Specification 1 of Charge V, and the sole Specification of Charge VII.

i. The Accused has a demonstrated history of using strangulation to exert control over women to get them to comply. The Accused strangled ABHAN C.R. when she resisted his sexual advances. In that case, the Accused used strangulation to exert control over ABHAN C.R. and obtain his desired sexual gratification. The Accused similarly strangled CSSN S.R., his intimate partner, when she confronted him about his infidelity. The Accused did so again to gain control of his victim, in this case to stop her from arguing with him. As evidenced by these two occasions, the Accused is quick to use strangulation to assert control over a situation to get what he wants.

ii. The Accused applied this common scheme and again exerted control over CS3 A.R. by strangling her, just as he did with ABHAN C.R. and CSSN S.R. In the case of CS3 A.R., the Accused decided to strangle her to control her and prevent her from reporting misconduct to either ET3 Rich or the Accused's suitemates, as discussed in paragraph 2(c)(1) below.

iii. The Accused's strangulation of CS3 A.R. was approximately one month after his strangulation of CSSN S.R. All three strangulation events occurred within a year of each other and reflect a common scheme of controlling women to get them to comply.

(2) Reasoning in support of motive for the sole Specification of Charge II, Specification 1 of Charge V, and the sole Specification of Charge VII. As noted in 1.c.(1) above, the Accused sought control over both ABHAN C.R. and CSSN S.R. The Accused's strangulation of CS3 A.R. was motivated by the same desire for control.

(3) Reasoning in support of intent for the sole Specification of Charge II, Specification 1 of Charge V, and the sole Specification of Charge VII. As noted in 1.c.(1) above, the Accused used strangulation as a method to assert control over his victims. Specific to CS3 A.R., the Accused intended to control CS3 A.R. by strangling her to death, for the reasons discussed in paragraph 2.c.(1) below.

(4) Reasoning in support of lack of accident for the sole Specification of Charge VII. This evidence of the Accused's common scheme of strangulation of female victims will also be offered to show that CS3 A.R.'s death was not an accident. While there is no evidence to suggest CS3 A.R. died of natural causes, committed suicide, or otherwise unintentionally overdosed, this evidence of strangulation establishes her death was not an accident but an intentional action of the Accused. Moreover, the Accused demonstrated with ABHAN C.R. and CSSN S.R. that he could strangle someone and stop short of killing them. That the Accused was capable of this demonstrates he did not unintentionally strangle CS3 A.R. for too long and accidentally murder her.

2. Pursuant to Military Rule of Evidence 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish knowledge and motive for the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder):

a. On 25 May 2025, Y.J. was in the Accused's barracks room. Two friends in the common area heard her telling the Accused to "stop" penetrating her vagina and entered the room to stop the Accused from continuing.

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. These events were reported by Y.J. and are corroborated by the witnesses who responded to her request for the Accused to "stop."

c. That others heard a victim ask the Accused to "stop" from another room within the Accused's barracks room is offered to establish knowledge and motive for the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder):

(1) Reasoning in support of knowledge and motive for the sole Specification of Charge VII. The above-described interaction with Y.J. occurred only 4 days prior to the night CS3 A.R. was murdered and both events took place in the same barracks room. For the reasons detailed in paragraph 3.c.(1) below, the Accused had a motive to murder CS3 A.R. This event with Y.J. was fresh on his mind and the Accused knew that his suitemates would be able to hear CS3 A.R. cry for help. The Accused also knew that his suitemates may be able to hear him murder CS3 A.R. if he chose a loud mechanism for doing so. As a result, the Accused was motivated to murder CS3 A.R. before his suitemates responded and he did so by strangulation because he knew it would be quiet.

3. Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish motive, intent, and lack of accident for the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder) as well as consciousness of guilt for Specification 3 of Charge I (Sexual Assault) and both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting):

a. In July of 2024, the Accused was accused of sexual misconduct by ABHAN A.R. and was aware he was under investigation by NCIS for that accusation. He stated that ABHAN A.R. "put a case on him." In November of 2024, the Accused was accused by CSSN S.S. of a separate sexual assault and other offenses. The Accused reported that CSSN S.S. "put a charge" on him and that he "caught a case." He told her that his life was ruined. Nearly immediately after this accusation, he became inconsolable, threatened to kill himself, and repeatedly attempted to genuinely kill himself by walking in front of approximately three trains before being recovered by ship security and brought back to the ship.

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. The Accused's actions after being confronted by CSSN S.S. were observed by eyewitnesses and members of the ship had to recover him and return him to the ship to stop his attempted self-harm. The Accused statements to CSSN S.S. about his desire to kill himself are recorded in text messages.

c. The Accused's reaction to an allegation of sexual assault is offered to establish motive, intent, and lack of accident with respect to the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder):

(1) Reasoning in support of motive for the sole Specification of Charge VII.

i. When CSSN S.S. made accusations against the Accused in November 2024, the Accused immediately demonstrated he was willing to take extreme and violent measures by attempting to kill himself.

ii. CS3 A.R. made a panicked call to ET3 Rich for help at 0214; a call the Accused denies occurred despite call records to the contrary. It is evident from that call that the Accused had done something to CS3 A.R. to cause distress. The Accused murdered CS3 A.R. shortly after that call.

iii. That call was prompted by an unwanted sexual advance and the Accused murdered her to prevent her from making a report. After CS3 A.R. went missing, the Accused self-servingly told investigators and his roommate that nothing sexual occurred that night between the two of them. Comparatively, the Accused advised another Sailor, CS2 Rezan Taylor, USN, that CS3 A.R. and he were making out, but that he had turned her down after she wanted to go further and this upset her. Both of these statements conflict with the accounts of the Accused's roommates, who described the Accused and CS3 A.R. as partially naked on top of each other on the floor of the common area later on the morning of 29 May. Consistent with their nudity and illuminated by the Accused's self-serving false and half-true statements (a common scheme detailed below) to CS2 Taylor, his roommate, and investigators, sexual conduct occurred between the Accused and CS3 A.R. Given the nature of CS3 A.R.'s plea for help, that sexual conduct was unwanted.

v. Motivated to prevent another report being made against him, the Accused made a decision to murder CS3 A.R. after his unwelcome advance. On the call, the Accused asked ET3 Rich how far away he was to determine how long he had to prevent another case against him from being reported. CS3 A.R. was never heard from again despite significant search efforts from interested parties immediately following the call.

vi. Just as he had an extreme and violent response to a second reported allegation against him from CSSN S.S., here he formed the premeditated intent to murder CS3 A.R. before she could make a third report, as discussed in paragraph 1.b. While the Government cannot say specifically what that unwanted sexual advance was, the Accused's lies about that evening combined with CS3 A.R.'s cry for help and their state of undress that morning indicate that something inappropriate occurred and provided a motive for him to commit premeditated murder.

(2) Reasoning in support of intent for the sole Specification of Charge VII. As noted in 2.c.(1) above, the Accused formed the premeditated intent to murder CS3 A.R. because he did not believe he could overcome a third reported allegation. He was willing to kill himself after CSSN S.S.'s allegation, underscoring the extreme intent he is capable of. Anything less than murder would have been insufficient as it would have left her as a witness against him.

(3) Reasoning in support of lack of accident for the sole Specification of Charge VII. As noted in 2.c.(1) above, this evidence of the Accused's extreme desire to avoid an allegation even if by suicide establishes that CS3 A.R.'s death was not an accident, but the result of an intentional action of the Accused.

(4) Reasoning in support of consciousness of guilt for the for Specification 3 of Charge I and both Specifications of Charge III. The Accused's instant and extreme response by attempting suicide after he was accused of this charged misconduct by CSSN S.S. demonstrates a consciousness of guilt as to his actions towards her.

4. Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish common scheme and consciousness of guilt for Specifications 1-3 of Charge I (Sexual Contact and Sexual Assault), the sole Specification of Charge II (Strangulation), both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting), Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder) as well as intent for both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement):

a. The Government believes the below evidence is res gestae, but offers it here in an abundance of caution. Evidence of the Accused's history of telling half-truths to mislead investigators. The Accused has described himself as a "king manipulator" and acknowledged an intent to "get [his] story straight" and applies that manipulating behavior to the criminal investigations pending against him. This is not merely lying. Over the course of five separate investigations and several more interviews with investigators, the Accused has demonstrated a calculated pattern of (1) admitting only uncontroverted facts, (2) shifting when he realizes he is challenged with credible evidence or investigative steps, (3) fabricating favorable events where possible, and (4) never admitting to the most serious misconduct for which there is only one witness (the victim).

(1) During two separate investigations into pre-service misconduct, the Accused made misleading statements as follows:

i. In May 2022, when the Accused was in high school, a fellow student accused him of unlawfully recording a sexual encounter between them with his phone. Investigators obtained a warrant for the Accused's phone after he admitted to recording it, but the Accused advised his mother had taken his phone away preventing him from giving it to investigators. The Accused's mother advised that she told the Accused to put his phone on her dresser, but found out he had only put the case for his phone there instead. The Accused then advised he had misplaced the phone. The phone was never recovered. This evidence meets categories (1) and (2).

ii. In June 2022, L.L. alleged that the Accused was at her home and they were sitting on the couch together. The Accused touched her vulva with his hand without her consent, despite her continually moving his hand away and telling him "no." He also pressured her to hug and kissed her without her consent. The Accused gave a half-true statement to investigators, agreeing that he was with L.L. on the couch but denied touching her inappropriately and denied kissing L.L. without consent, only that he attempted to kiss her. The Accused also told investigators that L.L. had sent him nude photographs and messages asking to be "fucked," but when asked the Accused advised he did not have those messages. This evidence meets categories (1)-(4).

(2) The accused made misleading statements during investigations into ABHAN C.R. and CSSN S.S. as follows:

i. The Accused made half-true statements about strangling ABHAN C.R. and his sexual interest in her. ABHAN C.R. told investigators that after talking with the Accused, the Accused strangled her, touched her intimate areas, and attempted to kiss her. The Accused downplayed the sexual nature of his interaction with ABHAN C.R. and that he strangled her, only admitting that he lightly choked her. Specifically, when asked by NCIS about this misconduct, he told investigators:

A. That they were "flirting," but he also denied being romantically or sexually interested in her. This evidence meets category (1).

B. When asked if he strangled ABHAN C.R., he stated "oh okay yeah I have but it wasn't like a weird way," and stated he put one hand around her neck without applying any pressure after she pinched his arm. The Accused also admitted that he told ABHAN C.R. that he heard she liked to be choked. Nonetheless, the Accused denied any sexual touching or attempted sexual touching took place. This evidence meets categories (1), (3), and (4).

ii. The Accused made half-true statements by admitting to recording and broadcasting a sexual encounter with CSSN S.S. but conveniently lied about the whereabouts of his phone and later "lost" the recording of that encounter when he got a "new" phone. CSSN S.S. alleged she was sexually assaulted while incapable of consenting and that the Accused recorded and broadcast the sexual assault to others without her consent. The Accused admitted to sex with CSSN S.S. but said it was consensual, said that the interaction seemed "too good to be true," told investigators he did not know if CSSN S.S. was aware he was recording, and admitted to showing others the recording. When asked about his phone, the Accused lied to investigators about its whereabouts. Specifically, he told NCIS another Sailor had the phone, but that Sailor denied ever having it and investigators were unable to locate it after searching. When the Accused acquired a "new" phone, he recovered digital evidence for investigators, but no longer had the video of his sexual encounter with CSSN S.S. This evidence meets categories (1)-(4).

iii. The Accused also denied any misconduct when initially confronted by CSSN S.S. (who had no memory of the event) and told CSSN S.S. that they did not have sex, despite later admitting they did once it became clear that others were reporting they had seen the video. This evidence meets categories (2) and (3).

(3) After an investigation into CS3 A.R.'s disappearance, the Accused made several half-true statements to mislead during the early days of CS3 A.R.'s disappearance and follow-on investigation. Most notably:

i. On 29 May 2025:

A. The Accused told FCC Bradley Parker, USN, that early on the morning of her disappearance, CS3 A.R. was having personal issues and was seeking help, so he picked her up and brought her to his barracks room to discuss them. But this is not why or how they were together. CS3 A.R. came to the Accused's barracks room to make tacos and hang out on the evening of 28 May 2025. CS3 A.R. only made a call for help at 0214 on 29 May 2025 to ET3 Rich, discussed above, and no one else. FCC Parker was aware CS3 A.R. was seeking help that night because he had spoken to ET3 Rich. The Accused advised him that CS3 A.R. had called several people and he was the first to get to her. The Accused turned CS3 A.R.'s call for help to ET3 Rich into a narrative to make himself look better and more trusted while he concealed her dead body on his bed. This evidence meets categories (1), (3), and (4).

B. According to FCC Parker, the Accused was acting like he had just woken up and took a significant amount of time to answer the door, further indicating he had been sleeping. But the Accused had been awake since at least 0728, as demonstrated by his record of watching pornography nearly constantly from 0728-1150 that morning. Instead, he was concealing CS3 A.R.'s body and concocting a narrative. Relatedly, the Accused told FCC Parker his phone died and his alarm did not go off which is why he was not at work. But his phone was on and charged. This evidence meets categories (1), (3), and (4).

C. The Accused told FCC Parker he had a ride to work to get him to leave. He did not and he did not check in to work until 1 June 2025. This evidence meets category (3).

ii. On 1 June 2025:

A. The Accused told investigators that while CS3 A.R. was at his barracks room on 29 May 2025, PSSN Irbin Gordillocruz, USN, a suitemate of the Accused, came into the common area to ask if CS3 A.R. was okay as she was upset.

But PSSN Gordillocruz denied this occurred. He states he arrived to the unit around 0400 but the lights were off and he did not see anyone in the dark common area. This evidence meets categories (1) and (3).

B. The Accused maintained his lie that FCC Parker woke him and CS3 A.R. up on 29 May 2025 when he came to the room around 0900. CS3 A.R. was already dead and the Accused was already awake, as noted above. This evidence meets categories (1), (3), and (4).

C. The Accused told investigators he borrowed his roommate's car and dropped CS3 A.R. back at her barracks around 1000 on 29 May 2025. The Accused provided later that CS3 A.R. left of her own accord. None of the Accused's roommates allowed him to borrow a vehicle at that time. And, perhaps most notably, CS3 A.R. was already dead. There is no evidence to suggest she left the barracks room while alive. This evidence meets categories (1) and (3).

iii. On 2 June 2025:

A. During this interview of the Accused, an iPhone was found during a contemporaneous search in his barracks room. The Accused told investigators the phone did not work, but investigative efforts later determined that it did work and this had been a lie. This evidence meets category (3).

B. As discussed above, the Accused provided his encounter with CS3 A.R. was not a sexual encounter, but CS3 A.R. was described as partially naked by the Accused's roommates and he told CS3 Taylor that CS3 A.R. and he had begun making out in his bed and she wanted to go further sexually, but the Accused stopped it. As detailed above, this is not true. This evidence meets category (3) and (4).

C. The Accused told investigators that CS3 A.R. did not make a call for help or to be picked up. But she called ET3 Rich in a panic at 0214 asking to be picked up and the Accused took the phone to speak with him. This evidence meets category (3).

D. The Accused told investigators CS3 A.R. spent a significant amount of time on the phone with an ex-boyfriend from Texas, but there is no evidence to suggest that occurred. This evidence meets category (3).

E. The Accused re-iterated his lie about PSSN Gordillocruz checking on CS3 A.R. to ensure she was okay. This evidence meets category (3).

F. The Accused stated he slept in his bed with CS3 A.R. and denied being naked on the floor of the common area. But they were found on the common area floor by all three roommates in a state of undress before being seen in the Accused's bed by FCC Parker later that morning. This evidence meets category (3).

G. The Accused stated his unauthorized absence (UA) status was a big misunderstanding and he did not know he was UA because he was not scheduled to work. But FCC Parker repeatedly told him to check in over the weekend. This evidence meets category (3).

H. The Accused denied telling investigators he had dropped CS3 A.R. off at her barracks room on 29 May 2025, in contrast with her previous statement. This evidence meets category (3) and (4).

I. The Accused denied knowing where CS3 A.R. was. This evidences meets categories (3) and (4).

iii. On 6 June 2025:

A. The Accused re-iterated several of his 2 June lies, including that CS3 A.R. called an ex-boyfriend from Texas, that nothing sexual occurred, that FCC Parker woke him up, and that he did not know CS3 A.R. was. This evidence meets categories (3) and (4).

B. The Accused also acknowledged he did not drop CS3 A.R. off as stated previously. This evidence meets category (2).

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. These statements were made by the Accused to investigators or other witnesses and are often corroborated by other investigative actions.

c. The Accused's history of telling half-truths as a "king manipulator" is offered to establish common scheme and consciousness of guilt for Specifications 1-3 of Charge I (Sexual Contact and Sexual Assault), the sole Specification of Charge II (Strangulation), both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting), Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Premeditated Murder) as well as intent for both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement):

(1) Reasoning in support of common scheme for Specifications 1-3 of Charge I, the sole Specification of Charge II, both Specifications of Charge III, Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV, both Specifications of Charge VI, and the sole Specification of Charge VII. The Accused's common scheme of providing half-true information in a calculated manner demonstrates a pattern with the goal of misleading investigators after he "get[s his] story straight." The sheer number of half-truths across various investigations demonstrates he is a deliberate liar—a "king manipulator"—and he uses this scheme of different types of lies as noted above to delay and obfuscate investigations. This is a very particular method of lying. That he consistently gives enough information to admit to an event without inculpating himself of the most serious misconduct, fabricates accounts where he believes he will not be challenged, and misleads investigators as to the state of the evidence demonstrates a willful scheme to mislead that becomes more probative the more it is replicated. That these lies often contain some level of the truth makes his lies about what happened between himself and CS3 A.R. particularly illuminating, as he is the only witness still alive. And because this is a common scheme, these lies are more easily distilled down to what actually occurred, as described in paragraph 2.c.(1).ii, such as the fact that the Accused made the unwanted sexual advance on CS3 A.R. and not the other way around as he described to CS2 Taylor.

(2) Reasoning in support of consciousness of guilt for Specifications 1-3 of Charge I, the sole Specification of Charge II, both Specifications of Charge III, Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV, both Specifications of Charge VI, and the sole Specification of Charge VII. For the reasons outlined in paragraph 3.c.(1) above, the Accused's history of half-truths demonstrates an intentional pattern of misleading investigators to exculpate himself, demonstrating a consciousness of guilt for his misconduct.

(3) Reasoning in support of intent for both Specifications of Charge VI. The Accused's repeated history of half-truths to mislead investigators and others demonstrates that his false statements to investigators in these Specifications are intentional.

5. Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish common scheme and lack of accident for Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice) and consciousness of guilt for Specification 3 of Charge I (Sexual Assault), both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting), all Specifications of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Murder):

a. The Accused has a history of hiding his phone from investigators when under criminal investigation.

i. In May 2022, when the Accused was in high school, a fellow student accused the Accused of unlawfully recording a sexual encounter between them with his phone. Investigators obtained a warrant for the Accused's phone, but the Accused advised his mother had taken his phone away, preventing him from giving it to them. The Accused's mother advised that she told the Accused to put his phone on her dresser, but found out he had only put the case for his phone there instead. The Accused then advised he had misplaced his phone. His phone was never recovered.

ii. In November 2024, after CSSN S.S. accused the Accused of misconduct, he hid his cell phone from investigators and lied and said he had given it to a friend before saying it was lost. When he later provided digital evidence to investigators, he advised he had gotten a "new" phone and no longer had the video in question.

iii. On 2 June 2025, when questioned about the disappearance of CS3 A.R., the Accused advised that the cell phone found in his barracks room would not turn on. However, investigative steps later determined that the phone was operational at the time. When investigators sought to seize that phone on 9 June 2025, the phone was missing from the Accused's belongings and never recovered.

iv. The Accused has also conducted online research on what a phone search can return, including queries such as: (1) "can police fet [ph.] infirmation [ph.] from reset phone;" (2) "ncis co cosign my phone;" and (2) "what do police do when they seuze [ph.] your phone;" (4) "ncis took my phone;" and (5) "can ncis take your phone off allegations."

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. These facts are supported by the accounts of criminal investigators and the Accused's own statements, as well as a digital extraction of one of the Accused's phones.

c. This evidence of the Accused hiding his phone when placed under investigation is offered to establish common scheme for Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice) and consciousness of guilt for Specification 3 of Charge I (Sexual Assault), both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting), all Specifications of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Murder):

(1) Reasoning in support of common scheme and lack of accident for Specifications 1 and 3 of Charge IV. The Accused has demonstrated a common scheme of lying and hiding his phone when under investigation for an offense that he perceives may result in his phone being seized. He did this with the pre-service allegations against him in May 2022, he did it again with the allegations of CSSN S.S. in November of 2024, and he did it most recently when being investigated for crimes related to the disappearance of CS3 A.R. This evidence also supports that him misplacing his phone is not an accident, but an intentional effort to obstruct justice.

(2) Reasoning in support of consciousness of guilt for Specification 3 of Charge I, both Specifications of Charge III, all Specifications of Charge IV, both Specifications of Charge VI the sole Specification of Charge VII. The Accused hides his phone intuitively because it contains incriminating information on it. The Accused's online search history supports that belief. That he lied and hid his phone repeatedly from investigators indicates a consciousness of guilt for all offenses related to both CSSN S.S. and CS3 A.R. Moreover, his Google search history supports that he did so with the specific intent to limit an investigation into misconduct.

6. Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish common scheme, knowledge, and intent for both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting):

a. The Accused recorded and broadcast a sexual encounter with a female victim in high school in May of 2022 without her consent.

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. These facts are supported by the accounts of witnesses and the Accused's own statements.

c. This evidence of the Accused recording and broadcasting sexual encounters is offered to establish common scheme, knowledge, and intent for both Specifications of Charge III (Indecent Recording and Broadcasting):

(1) Reasoning in support of common scheme, knowledge, and intent for both Specifications of Charge III. The Accused has demonstrated a common scheme of recording and broadcasting sexual encounters without consent, just as he did with CSSN S.S. This evidence also supports that the Accused knew when he recorded and broadcast his encounter with CSSN S.S. that this conduct was wrongful absent her consent and that doing so without her consent was intentional.

7. Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish motive and intent for Specification 1 of Charge V (Domestic Violence – Strangulation):

a. The Accused makes an "evil" grin when assaulting women.

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. This account is from a victim of the Accused's pre-service misconduct, L.L. She alleges that while he touched her vulva without consent, he had an "evil" grin.

c. This "evil" grin by the Accused is offered to prove motive, intent, and identity with respect to Specification 1 of Charge V.

(1) Reasoning in support of motive and intent for Specification 1 of Charge V. CSSN S.R. described the Accused as smiling while he strangled her. This description mirrors the "evil" grin described by L.L., identifying the Accused as the perpetrator and establishing further that the Accused enjoys and intends nonconsensual touching of women.

8. Pursuant to M.R.E. 404(b), the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following evidence to establish consciousness of guilt for Specification 2 of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Murder):

a. The Government believes the below evidence outlining various actions of the Accused related to CS3 A.R.'s murder are res gestae, but offer them here in an abundance of caution. The Government provides notice of the following evidence:

(1) The Accused hid in various barracks lounges from 29 May 2025-1 June 2025 after he murdered CS3 A.R. When security from the ship came to find him on 1 June 2025, he hid in the bathroom on the fifth floor of his barracks. The Accused's roommate also stated that the Accused was leaving very early and returning very late over that weekend, which was highly unusual for him.

(2) During the period of 29 May 2025 to 1 June 2025, the Accused was in an unauthorized absence status and was repeatedly notified that he needed to check-in, but he ignored those requests. Indeed, despite dozens of inquiries as to his whereabouts from both his ship and his friends that the Accused viewed on his phone, the Accused generally did not answer his phone or respond to text messages from 29 May 2025 until 1 June 2025.

(3) The Accused encouraged his roommate to leave the room, which was an unusual request.

(4) The Accused disposed of CS3 A.R.'s body in a wooded area on 2 June 2025. The Accused turned his phone on Airplane mode after he decided where to place the body and turned it off of Airplane mode when he was done placing her in the woods. Specifically, he placed his phone on Airplane mode at 04:48:08 on 2 June 2025 when he drove to a pinned location (where the body was found) and turned it off at 05:16:13 when he left the site.

(5) At 1311 the day he murdered CS3 A.R., the Accused searched for a trip to "Bermuda." In the days following his murder of CS3 A.R., the Accused searched online for "virginia airport" on 3 and 10 June 2025 and "norfolk airport" on 3 June 2025.

(6) As discussed in detail above, during the investigation into CS3 A.R.'s disappearance, the Accused lied about various things, including: (1) that he dropped CS3 A.R. off at her barracks on 29 May 2025, (2) that he did not know where CS3 A.R. was, (3) that the iPhone found in his room on 3 June 2025 did not work, (4) that CS3 A.R. did not call anyone for a ride from his barracks room on 29 May 2025, (5) that CS3 A.R. was on the phone with her ex-boyfriend from Texas on 29 May 2025, (6) that CS3 A.R. had wanted to go further sexually when they were together on 29 May 2025, but he declined, and (7) that he slept with CS3 A.R. in his bed that night and not on the floor.

(7) The Accused told his roommate nothing sexual occurred between himself and CS3 A.R. on 29 May 2025, in contrast to what he told CS3 Taylor and despite them being in a state of undress together on the floor of the common area that morning.

(8) The Accused hid and/or destroyed his second iPhone prior to going to the brig on 9 June 2025, as discussed above.

(9) The Accused turned off location services on his phone on 29 May 2025, including Life360 which had been on constantly for approximately one year and shared with another person.

(10) The Accused called and texted CS3 A.R. on 1 June 2025 asking where she was and notifying her of her UA status despite knowing she was deceased and her body was in his closet.

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that these other acts occurred. It is either from data extracted from the Accused's phone, from the Accused's own statements, or from statements of eyewitnesses.

c. These actions by the Accused in the hours and days following the murder of CS3 A.R. are offered to show consciousness of guilt for Specification 2 of Charge IV (Obstruction of Justice), both Specifications of Charge VI (False Official Statement), and the sole Specification of Charge VII (Murder):

(1) Reasoning in support of consciousness of guilt for Specification 2 of Charge IV, both Specifications of Charge VI, and the sole Specification of Charge VII. These actions include an intent to flee, an attempt to mislead, and an attempt to hide from investigators and others. They were taken close in time to the disappearance of CS3 A.R. and are those taken by someone with a guilty conscience.

9. Pursuant to M.R.E. 413, the Government provides notice that it seeks to introduce the following propensity evidence as relevant to the charged sexual misconduct in Specifications 1, 2, and 4 of Charge I (Abusive and Aggravated Sexual Contact and Sexual Assault).

a. In June 2022, the Accused touched L.L.'s vulva and kissed her without consent despite her repeatedly removing his hand and telling him "stop" and "no."

b. The above-cited evidence provides good faith that this other sexual misconduct occurred. This account is from a victim of the Accused's pre-service misconduct, L.L.

c. This propensity evidence is offered as relevant to Specifications 1 and 2 of Charge I. Specifically, the Accused's actions towards ABHAN C.R. in these charged offenses nearly mirror the Accused undeterred approach to sexual gratification with L.L. In both cases, the Accused ignored the victim's request to stop and his hands being repeatedly removed and continued with his unwanted sexual contact.

d. This propensity evidence is also offered as relevant to Specification 4 of Charge I. Specifically, the Accused refused to take no for an answer from Y.J., just as he did with L.L. In both cases, he continued with his sexual goals despite that objection.

SEROUS CAVITIES: No adhesions or fluid accumulation. The diaphragm is intact. The organs are in normal anatomic position.

NECK ORGANS: Layered dissection reveals unremarkable soft tissue of the anterior neck. The larynx and hyoid are intact. The thyroid gland has a normal size and shape.

HEART: 77 g. The coronary arteries arise normally and have a right dominant posterior circulation. There is no significant atherosclerosis. The valves are normally formed. The foramen ovale is closed. The great vessels are unremarkable and free of obvious injury.

AORTA: The aorta and its major branches are normally distributed, with no significant atherosclerosis.

LUNGS: Left 155 g, right 181 g. The pleural surfaces are unremarkable and cover red-purple, mildly edematous pulmonary parenchyma.

LIVER: 299 g. The liver capsule is smooth and glistening, covering red-purple congested parenchyma.

GALLBLADDER: No bile. No stones were identified.

SPLEEN: 80 g. The splenic capsule is smooth, glistening, and intact. There is unremarkable underlying red-purple parenchyma.

LYMPH NODES: No lymphadenopathy is appreciated.

PANCREAS: Unremarkable.

ADRENALS: Examination limited due to decomposition changes; no evident lesions present.

GI TRACT: T[redacted]

KIDNEYS: Left 155 g, right 181 g. Smooth cortical surfaces. Well-circumscribed cortico-medullary junctions. No dilatation of the collecting system or ureters.

BLADDER: Contains no urine. Unremarkable mucosa and wall.

GENITALIA: Unremarkable uterus, fallopian tubes, and ovaries.

BRAIN AND MENINGES: 784 g. Complete loss of normal architecture. The brain is a brow/gray soft tissue.

SKULL: Intact.

MUSCULOSKELETAL: Aside from the postmortem changes, the bony framework, supporting musculature, and soft tissues are grossly unremarkable. The cervical spinal column is removed, visualized, and it is intact.

MICROSCOPIC DESCRIPTION:
Liver (Slide 2): Interpretation is limited due to postmortem artifact. No evidence of inflammation, steatosis, or necrosis.

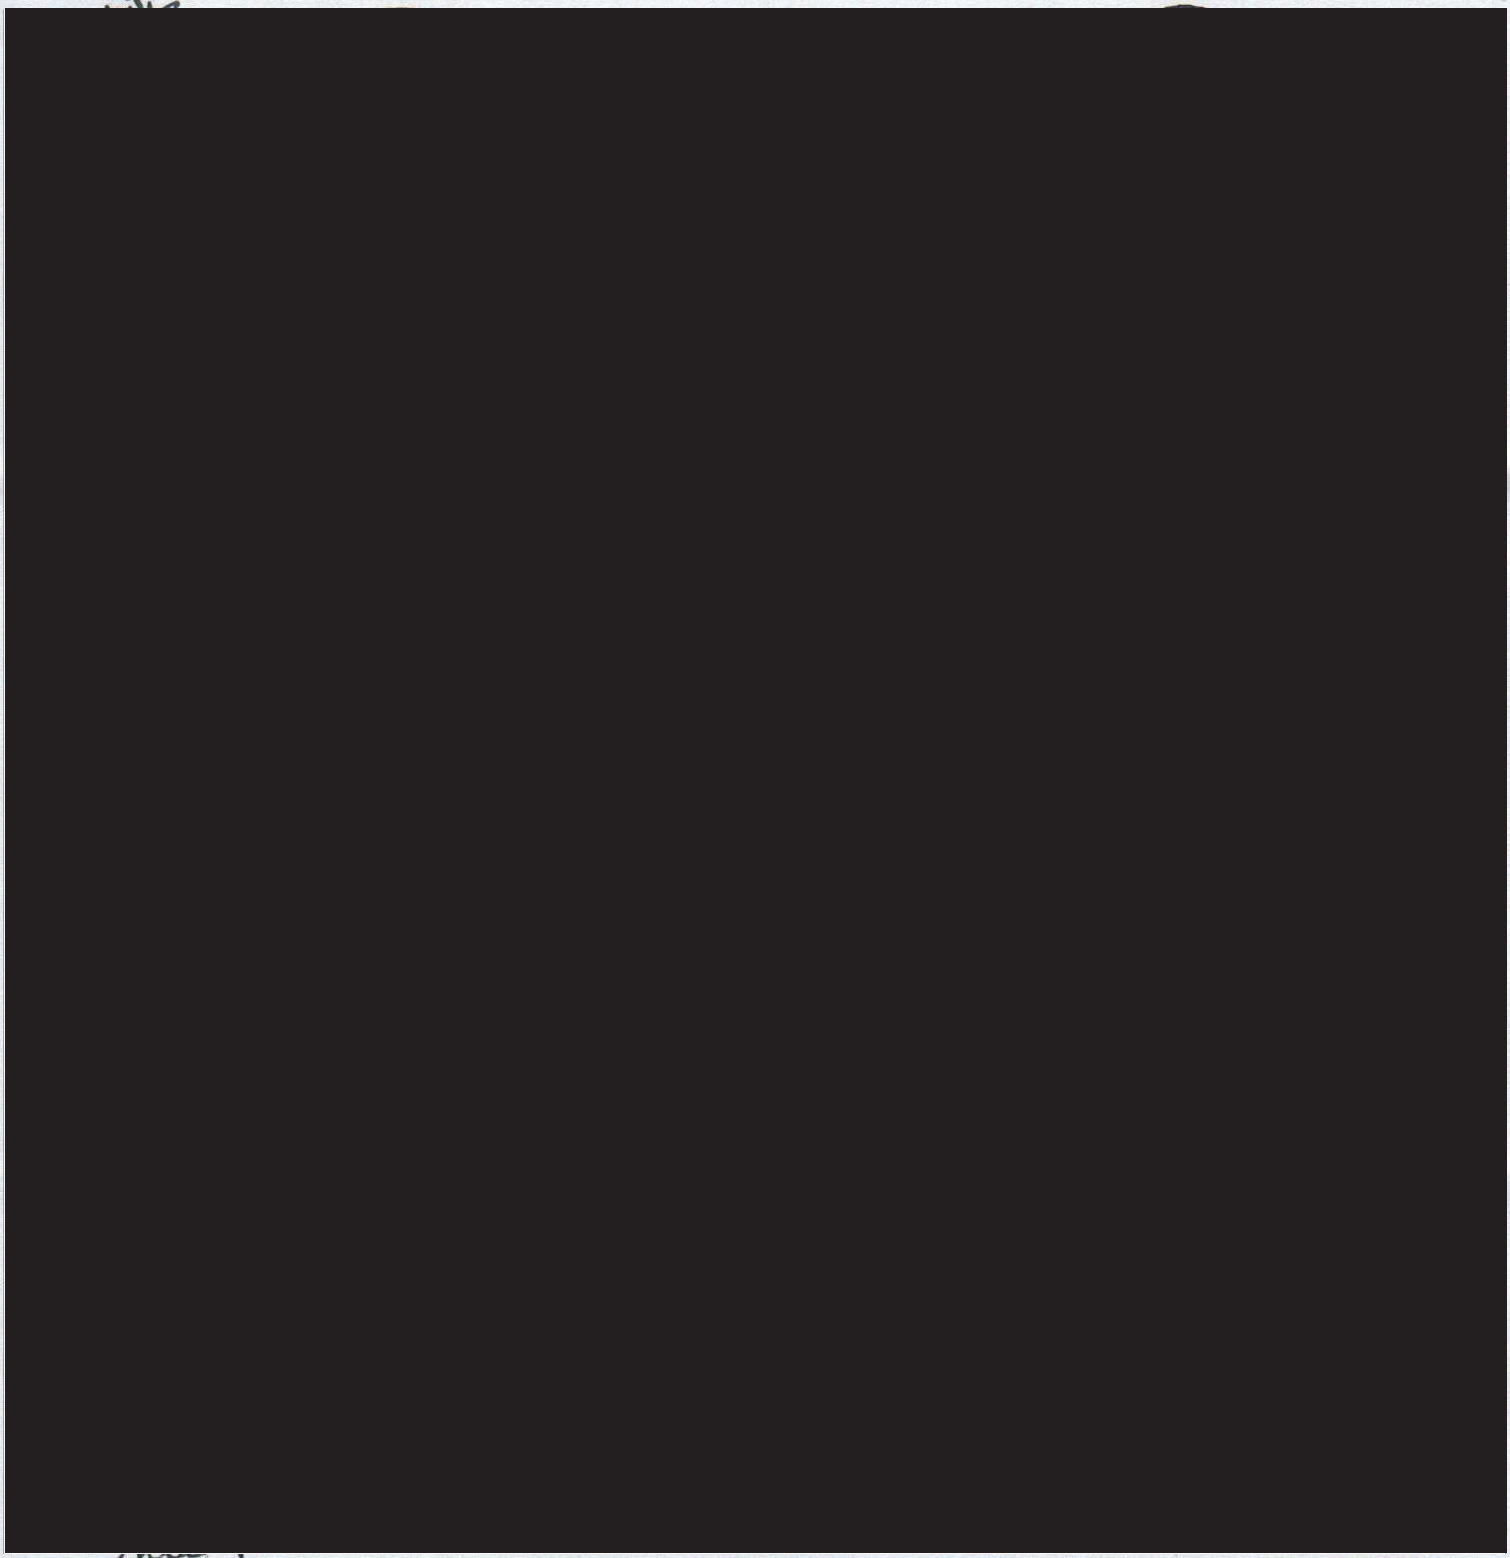
Kidney (Slide 2): Interpretation is limited due to postmortem artifact. Well-distributed tubules and glomeruli with no histopathological abnormalities.

Lungs (Slide 1): Interpretation is limited due to postmortem artifact. Edema and no other significant histopathological changes were observed.

TOXICOLOGY:
Samples were submitted for toxicological analysis. See Certificate of Analysis.
Waiting for another toxicology analysis. Still pending.

DNA AND FINGERPRINTS:
Samples of blood and fingerprints were taken and retained.

POSTMORTEM PHOTOGRAPHY:
Postmortem photographs were taken and retained.



EVIDENCE:
Suitcase, personal effects, DNA card x2, patch from inside the suitcase, PERK kit (219M00468), round disk from inside the suitcase, possible string from inside the suitcase, paper from inside the suitcase, fingernails, CD with exam photos to law enforcement. Second CD with exam photos to law enforcement (Norfolk PD).

On 29 July 2025, CAPT Derek Butler, JAGC, USN, CDR Lauren Mayo, JAGC, USN, and LT Christopher Dempsey, JAGC, USN, interviewed Dr. Lameira, in the presence of LN1 Kathleen Vanetti, USN, Mr. Rob Robinson, Norfolk ME, and Dr. Wendy Gunther, Assistant Chief Medical Examiner. The following is a summary of the interaction and is not intended to be verbatim:

Dr. Lameira reported that due to the level of decomposition of, and post-mortem insect activity on, the body of V/A.R., no definitive cause of death could be discerned. Dr. Lameira was able to rule out stomping, stabbing, shooting, and a drug overdose as possible causes of death. She specified that the toxicology test only tested for specific drugs, but the lab was likely able to have additional testing done for specific prescriptions being taken by V/A.R upon request. Additionally, the toxicology report showed a BAC of .083 at the time of death.

Dr. Lameira noted that there was not enough remaining soft tissue on the body to indicate or rule out asphyxia as a cause of death. The only noted broken bones were ribs #2-5, which would not be consistent with attempts at CPR. There was not enough tissue left in the neck area to indicate whether there was any blood pooling in that area. The fallopian tubes and uterus were unremarkable with no indications of a pregnancy. There were no indications of any chronic conditions that would lead to a natural death and Dr. Lameira opined it would be unlikely for someone V/A.R.'s age to suffer a natural death.

It was explained that the alcohol ethenyl level, generally considered the BAC, could have been elevated by insect activity that creates yeast. No results had come back on the buccal and anal swabs that were conducted during the autopsy, and vaginal swabs were not conducted due to the lack of soft tissue resulting from decomposition and insect activity. Dr. Lameira explained that insect activity and decomposition generally begin in body openings (eyes, ears, mouth, nose, etc.) and areas where skin is pressed together (buttocks, below breasts, arms crossed, etc.). She opined that the folded position of the body in the duffel bag created the skin-to-skin pressure points on the chest that became areas of accelerated decomposition, in comparison to the other areas of the torso.

When asked, Dr. Lameira stated that there was not enough soft tissue on the body to determine whether there were any injuries to the body that would have been bleeding before death. Dr. Lameira explained that up to a liter of "purge" can be expelled post-mortem through the nose and mouth and appears red in color. "Purge" was explained as the fluid in the lungs and surrounding tissue that leaks out of the nose and mouth post-mortem, and can become further dislodged from the body if the body is moved.

When asked, Dr. Lameira stated that rigor mortis sets in within about 12 hours after death and opined that the body was likely placed into the duffel bag prior to the onset of rigor mortis. Dr. Lameira concured with Dr. Gunter that it was not unusual for people to mistake dead bodies for living people.

Well, it's going to take the lab quite a while to do the escitalopram, particularly since Dr. Lameira pointed out to me that we don't have blood, just liver and muscle. I'm not sure the expensive, fast lab (NMS) will even do naproxen on liver and muscle; I think they only work on blood. So you're looking at 60 days if you want to wait for the escitalopram.

If you don't, then there is a much shorter timeline; I'll leave it up to Dr. Lameira to estimate it for you.

We can definitely ask for escitalopram, and if we have to we can send out for naproxen, but we can't do Cefpodoxime, the antibiotic.

I kind of think naproxen isn't indicated; if it's going to kill you, it does it by internal bleeding, and that wasn't part of the findings, right, Dr. Lameira?

How about if we ask our lab for escitalopram, and if it's positive, we don't do naproxen? If it's negative, the expense of outside lab can do naproxen within a couple of weeks.

Dr. Gunther

Thank you so much for taking the time to meet with us on Tuesday. I apologize for the delay in getting back to you, but it took some time for us to track down the specific prescriptions we'd like to have the sample tested for (if that has not already been done). They are:

- Escitalopram/Lexapro
- Cefpodoxime
- Naproxen

Protocol Implementation: December 2024

An autopsy was performed on the body of V/A.R. on the 28th day of June, 2025.

CONSENT FOR AUTOPSY

Consented and reviewed by Dr. Nemanja RODIC. Consenter was, Esmeralda CASTLE. The relationship of the individual, providing consent for autopsy, to the decedent is mother. Type of autopsy was complete, including brain.

PRIOR POSTMORTEM PROCEDURES

Following macroscopic examination there was NO EVIDENCE of organ donation. Following macroscopic examination there was EVIDENCE of prior autopsy.

EXTERNAL EXAMINATION

The body was that of a well-developed & well-nourished female. The body weighed about 120 pounds, was 4 feet 5 inches in height, and appeared compatible with the reported age of PII years [calculated body mass index 20.6(1)]. There were no personal effects identified. The body was cold. The body was in state of late decomposition marked by skin discoloration, desquamation, and skeletonization. Rigor and lividity designation deferred. The scalp hair was black. The eye examination deferred. The nose examination deferred. The lips examination deferred. Some upper and lower teeth were present with good dental hygiene. Dentures were not present. The skin was free of any significant abrasions, bruises, lacerations, lymphadenopathy, or burns. Examination of the neck revealed no evidence of injury. No injury of the ribs or sternum was evident externally; negative for deformity and increased anterior-posterior diameter. The abdomen was grossly unremarkable. The extremities were grossly unremarkable. Leg circumference 10 cm from medial malleolus were, 20 cm on the right, and 20 cm on the left. Negative for pitting edema. The fingernails examination deferred. Negative for palpable lymph nodes. Negative for joint deformity, abnormal mobility, and non-therapeutic punctures or needles track marks. The external genitalia were those of a normal adult female. The posterior torso was without note; negative for sacral decubitus ulcer. Negative for tenting of skin. Negative for sunken eyes.

EVIDENCE OF THERAPY:

ID band with decedent name and case number (T-246-25 T2025-00840) were identified on patient body bag and bilateral lower extremities. Negative for nasogastric tube, central venous line, intravenous line, PEG tube, endotracheal tube, and Foley catheter.

INTERNAL EXAMINATION

BODY CAVITIES:

The body was re-opened by the usual Y-shaped thoraco-abdominal incision and the chest plate was removed. No adhesions nor abnormal collections of fluid were present in any of the body cavities. The subcutaneous fat layer of the abdominal wall was less than 1" thick. There were no abnormalities of the omentum and mesenteries. There was no internal evidence of blunt force or penetrating injury to the thoraco-abdominal region.

CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

The head was normocephalic. External examination revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for dry surface of the galea. The dura showed no lesions. The leptomeninges showed no lesions. The cerebral hemispheres were symmetrical and showed no lesions. The brain base showed no lesions. The cerebellum showed no lesions. The brainstem showed no lesions. The superior spinal cord showed no lesions. The eyes were not submitted for microscopic examination.

NECK:

Examination of the soft tissues of the neck, including strap muscles, thyroid gland and large vessels revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for trauma of the gingiva, lips, or oral mucosa.

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM:

The epicardial fat was mild. The coronary ostia were normally positioned. The foramen ovale was closed. The coronary arteries arose normally, followed the usual distribution and were free of grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis of the right coronary artery, left common/main coronary artery, left anterior descending artery, and circumflex artery. The chambers, valves, leaflets, and chordae tendinae exhibited the usual size-position relationship and were unremarkable. The myocardium was red-brown, firm and unremarkable; the atrial and ventricular septa were intact; negative for infarcts/lesions of the myocardium. The endocardium was smooth and thin; negative endocardial hemorrhages and endocardial discoloration. The aorta was fairly elastic and of even caliber throughout with its major branches distributed normally, followed the usual course and were widely patent. Negative for significant abdominal/thoracic aorta atherosclerosis. Negative for tortuosity or widening of the thoracic segment. Negative for dilation of the lower abdominal segment. Negative for aortic aneurysm. The venae cavae and their major tributaries returned to the heart in the usual distribution and were free of thrombi. No focal endocardial, valvular, and myocardial lesions were seen.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM:

Scant secretions were found in the lower bronchial and upper respiratory passages. The mucosa has pink-tan postmortem discoloration. The upper airway was clear of debris and foreign material; the mucosal surfaces were smooth, yellow-tan and unremarkable. The pleural surfaces were smooth, glistening, well-expanded, and unremarkable bilaterally. Lungs were atelectatic and subcrepitant. The pulmonary parenchyma was red-purple in color, congested, and edematous. There was dependent congestion and postmortem softening. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions/scarring. The pulmonary arteries were normally developed The bronchi were patent with no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The lungs were cut fresh.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM:

The hepatic capsule was smooth, glistening and intact, covering dark red-brown parenchyma with minimal congestion. Serial sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The extrahepatic biliary tree was patent, without evidence of calculi. The gallbladder was present and showed thin wall, velvety mucosa, and no calculi. The portal vein, hepatic arteries, and hepatic veins were patent.

ALIMENTARY TRACT:

The mucosa was pink-tan with normal mucosal folds. No tablets or capsules could be discerned in the stomach or the stomach contents. No residual medications were identified. The external and in situ appearance of the small intestine and colon were grossly and palpably unremarkable. The small intestine and colon were opened along the anti-mesenteric border to reveal soft liquid fecal material in the small bowel and soft semi-formed, thick green stool in the colon. The small bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The vermiform appendix was grossly and palpably unremarkable. The large bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan peri-circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The distal large bowel contents were stool. The superior mesenteric artery was free of grossly identifiable and palpable atherosclerosis. The pancreas occupied a normal position, had a normal pink-tan lobulated parenchyma, and the ducts were patent, not ectatic. No parenchymal calcifications; negative for necrosis or trauma.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM:

The red-brown surface of renal capsules were rough and uneven to touch. The ureters were patent. The renal arteries showed no grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis. The cortices were sharply delineated from the medullary pyramids, which were red-purple to tan and unremarkable. The calyces, pelves and ureters were unremarkable. The urinary bladder contained minimal urine; the mucosa was gray-tan and grossly unremarkable.

LYMPHORETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM:

The spleen had a smooth, intact capsule covering red-purple, moderately firm parenchyma; the lymphoid follicles were unremarkable. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The regional lymph nodes appeared normal. The bone marrow was dark red. The lymph nodes were not enlarged. The thymus was not identified.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM:

The thyroid was symmetrical in appearance and sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The breast tissue was sectioned in the usual manner and contained small amount of white fibrous tissue; negative for significant abnormality.

MUSCULOSKELETAL SYSTEM:

The diaphragm was intact. Skeletal muscles were red-brown and firm. The calvarium was intact. The vertebral columns showed normal curvature. The ribs were negative for fractures. The vertebral bodies were negative for fractures. No bone or joint abnormalities were noted.

AUTOPSY PROCEDURES AND ANCILLARY TESTING

The approach to autopsy dissection was M. Letulle's Technique (en bloc from tongue to rectum). There were not special dissections performed. Tissue retained in stock jars until signout. Additional samples taken as follows, homogenized viscera. Ancillary testing, toxicology.

MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM: Sections showed cardiac parenchyma and stroma free of significant interstitial-type fibrosis and nuclear & cytoplasmic hypertrophy, acute & chronic inflammation, hemorrhage, and necrosis. Sections of coronary arteries were free of significant cholesterol clefts and dystrophic calcifications within narrowed vascular walls. Sections of aorta were free of significant cholesterol clefts deposits. Negative for malignant cells.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM: Bilateral sections of pulmonary parenchyma and stroma notable were free of significant congestion, variably sized & increased alveolar spaces, acute inflammation, chronic inflammation, fibrosis, hemorrhage, and hemosiderin-laden macrophages. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Sections of hilar lymph nodes showed benign primary follicles. Sections of larynx were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM: Sections showed hepatic parenchyma and stroma free of significant acute & chronic inflammation, macrosteatosis, glycogenated nuclei, and fibrosis. Negative for malignant cells.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM: Sections showed bilateral renal parenchyma and stroma notable for medial hypertrophy of medium sized vessels and interstitial/subcapsular lymphocytic inflammation, but free of significant basement membrane thickening, hyaline change, thyroidization, and interstitial fibrosis. Section of urinary bladder were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Sections of genitourinary tract were histologically unremarkable. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Negative for malignant cells.

ALIMENTARY TRACT: Sections showed histologically unremarkable pancreatobilliary and tubular gastrointestinal tract. Negative for malignant cells.

RETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma, free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

INTEGUMENTARY SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for malignant cells.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for adrenal hemorrhage. Negative for malignant cells.

MEDICAL RECORDS REVIEW

Accompanying medical information collected from pre-autopsy verbal report by _Esmeralda CASTLE, the mother of the decedent, was notable for following medical findings:

Past Medical History: negative for suicidal attempts; equivocal for prior past suicidal ideation (10/2024);

Surgical Procedures: none;

Medical Laboratory: antemortem COVID-19 negative test.

Additional Notes: Clinical symptoms/signs, not in acute distress (5/28/2025-5/29/2025), asymptomatic (interim). The decedent did not receive blood transfusions or lived in Europe prior to death. The decedent was vaccinated against COVID-19 prior to death. The decedent had been consuming alcoholic beverages (wine and liquor)/tobacco (vaped) prior to death. The decedent had not been consuming illegal habit-forming drugs prior to death. The decedent did not have history of cancer prior to death. External and macroscopic images taken for posterity. Examination limited by autolysis and tissue preservation. Preliminary diagnosis called to and confirmed by Esmeralda CASTLE on 7/3/2025 at 1615. See accompanying Axis 3327991 report. Final diagnosis called to and confirmed by family friend on 8/1/2025 at 1615.

OPINION:

Based collectively on my autopsy findings herein as well as my review of the accompanying submitted medical information, in the case of this PII-year-old female, V/ A. R., the manner of death is deferred (1,4-6,&9). I reserve the right to amend my opinion(s) upon the receipt of additional material (7).

Comment: "The following statement applies to tests, i.e. to dye(s), chemical solution stains, and Class I IHC reagents and kits. Dye(s), chemical solution stains are defined in the Code of Federal Regulations as "mixtures of synthetic or natural dyes or nondye chemicals in solutions used in staining cells and tissues for diagnostic histopathology, cytopathology, or hematology" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1850). This definition encompasses many of the common materials found in a conventional histopathology laboratory, such as routine hematoxylin and eosin stains, as well as special stains like trichrome, iron, and Grocott-Gömöri's methenamine silver, among others, and are considered Class I devices subject to general controls. Class I IHC reagents and kits are defined as those that "provide the pathologist with adjunctive diagnostic information that may be incorporated into the pathologist's report, but that is not ordinarily reported to the clinician as an independent finding," noting that "these IHC's are used after the primary diagnosis of tumor (neoplasm) has been made by conventional histopathology using nonimmunologic histochemical stains, such as hematoxylin and eosin" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). The 1998 final rule further describes these as "adjunctive tests [to conventional histopathologic diagnostic examination] and presenting a low risk to public health."37 An example of a Class I IHC specifically mentioned in the IHC reagents and kit regulation is keratin (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). Many other Class I IHC reagents and kits can be found by searching for the "NJT" product code on the FDA establishment registration and device listing database.47 These IVDs are exempt from premarket notification/510(k) submission, although they are still subject to FDA general controls and QS/CGMP requirements. Most IHC stains used by anatomic pathologists are considered diagnostic markers and therefore are categorized as Class I by the FDA. The tests herein have not been cleared or approved for the specific use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. FDA does not require this test to go through premarket FDA review. These tests are used for clinical purposes. It should not be regarded as investigational or for research. This laboratory is certified under the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendments 1988 (CLIA) as qualified to perform high complexity clinical laboratory testing. All stains and tests are performed with general controls, i.e. positive and negative control reactions as necessary, and all controls show appropriate reactivity. However, stains and tests have not been validated on decalcified tissues. Results should be interpreted with caution given the likelihood of false negativity on decalcified specimens. Certain tests utilize Class I Analyte-Specific Reagents (ASR); these tests are developed, and their performance characteristics determined by this laboratory. ASRs used in this laboratory have been established and verified for accuracy and precision.(8)"

But again Please remember that what I like to do in order for the due diligence we observe is that after the military final autopsy document becomes available ask miss missus cancelled to submit it to our secure Dropbox shared folder and then send us an e-mail at sometime in the two-minute whenever the report is available maybe like 10 weeks from now or 16 weeks from now whenever OK and then I will review that and then either then or correct the report as needed OK so the so microscopic examination of multiple sections on this case showed no evidence of any blunt force trauma so that's something I think was important to rule in or out the toxicology studies were pertinently positive and there was a significant level of ethanol or alcohol there was detected and I think that is a significant finding now this upon microscopic examination on the organ systems there's no other changes either on microscope events or inflammation infection or cancer of any kind so I think the major other cause of that has been have been formally ruled out so this substance is detected in the bodily fluid I think is significant in the quantity and quality of it and I think that's something that informs the cause of death in this case um so in other words you know from our end we don't see any evidence of foul play as far as UM trauma to the remains and I think this is again let me just I'm careful what kind of language I'm using here I think this is suggestive of an accidental ingestion OK now um again what I'd like to do in order for all of the due diligence be observed is that once the the military is available I will review that material and then appropriately if I identify any additional diagnostic features that can help better classify the findings will attend the mandatory OK do you do you have any questions for me from your end yes so a couple questions um does the the findings or are there any other pending tests that that need to be deducted or awaiting results that will impact your final report the due diligence worked that I wanted to perform from our end is available is completed and but when and if the final autopsy documents from the first examination becomes available I'll be very happy to review that and again because you may be sometime in the future like a month two months maybe even six months depending on how complex this is on there and um whatever that is I just asked you and the family yeah we we did I I wanted to check we did open the Dropbox folder OK their e-mail maybe I should actually add you let me just add you on on that e-mail as well because you are you know the point of contact here and and then once you do that because it may be again sometime in the future just please drop me an e-mail OK and say something like hey doctor Aldrich dismiss cancel or miss poor yeah you're missus amber esmeralda I'm ibra so esmeralda is is miss castle and then my name is Debra I'm her colleague from law school yes her friend got it OK so let me see here then please just send me an e-mail that way I can see that it's in the archive that's the only problem with the Dropbox automatically not familiar it's there and then within about a week or two I will schedule us for follow up or attended or amend their correct report as needed OK the second question that I had was are any of the tests are able to indicate or any of the anything that you were able to see and able to show whether there was any strangulation or any type of of anything of that nature I took very meticulous examination both externally of the remains and systematic microscopic examination to rule out even some small or difficult to detect ecchymosis or petechiae or other force or signs of one force trauma and I look very carefully there there's none so I and considered it formally ruled that out OK so sometimes by external examination you cannot see the you know the evidence of trauma but but this way that I performed it there's just simply no way of missing it because I'm looking at singular cells at that level right and if there's any kind of level of of change in I'm I'm I'm able to see it now there is that there has been formally considered and ruled out so I will add you to the to do a Dropbox share folder and let's then be communication whenever the report becomes available OK and once that report comes out we'll as well as I'll call her as me I'm sorry we'll miss castle get a copy of of your findings or will or will she get a copy of this additional report after I just feel like she's going to ask him no I'm gonna explain this to thank you so we're going to release our report automatically this is our standard operating procedure we're gonna release our reported automatically to to to her to Monday morning OK and then electronically and then they will mail her a hard copy those are typically dashed that same went Friday OK perfect and then once we reviewed the additional material we will follow the same sequence OK we'll release the report basically as if it's a new report one thing we have you know that's confirmed so that's fine but to confirm the address should we mail her report to [redacted] yes that's it OK wonderful thank you so much and lesbian communication then the first report OK thank you so much thank you bye bye

On 22 October 2025, LT Christopher Dempsey, JAGC, USN interviewed Dr. Nemanja Rodic in the presence of LN2 Jocelyn M Gomez, USN. The following is a summary of the interaction and is not intended to be verbatim:

Dr. Rodic stated that when his office received the body to conduct an autopsy, the remains were contained in a clear bag. Inside of that bag was a pool of colored fluid with a strong odor. It was Dr. Rodic's opinion that this fluid was an alcohol-based preservative or other embalming fluid that contained a dilute of alcohol deformaline. Dr. Rodic was not sure exactly how the military or mortuary service would have packaged or preserved the remains prior to his examination or what chemicals specifically were used.

Dr. Rodic explained that this fluid was undoubtedly what caused the high level of alcohol found in the remains of the deceased. The results were too high to be clinically relevant, indicating that the fluid is what caused the high result.

Dr. Rodic did not see an indication of blunt force trauma or sharp force trauma on the remains, although the autopsy was not extremely thorough. Dr. Rodic also explained that the remains were also decomposed.

When asked if the findings were consistent with asphyxiation, Dr. Rodic explained it was possible or probable. He explained that natural causes were a dubious suggestion given the age and purported fitness of the deceased. He believed it was likely one of three mechanisms of death: (1) asphyxiation; (2) blunt force trauma for which any evidence had decomposed; or (3) termination of life due to ingestion of alcohol. Dr. Rodic clarified that he had no significant evidence to suggest intoxication from alcohol was the cause of death because the numbers he had recorded were incorrectly inflated by the fluid in the bag. As such, without additional evidence he could not say if that was a probable cause of death.

Mr. Dempsey,

It is my real that I did not consider designating strangulation as possible/probable mechanics/mode of death in this case. It is my recall that I deferred from designating manner of death herein, because my examination was limited by prior autopsy, prior embalming, lack of any documents in writing for review, and marked tissue degeneration/loss prior to the autopsy. For example, some parts of both acral and truncal soft tissue and bones were absent at the time of my examination.

With respect,
Dr. Rodic

Subject: Follow-Up Questions - US v. Copeland
Good Afternoon Dr. Rodic,

The victim's family provided us with a rough transcript of a phone call you had with them back when you reported your findings (attached). I do not have a recording, just this transcript. This has raised a couple of questions I attribute to poor automated transcription. I know we spoke previously and addressed these, but I want to run them to ground just to be sure:

1. Were the findings consistent with strangulation as a potential cause of death?

2. At one point, the transcript says that "foul play" related to "trauma" can be ruled out. Is that correct? If so, what do you mean by that?

Thank you! I am also happy to discuss on the phone if preferred. Please just let me know a time that works for you.

Very Respectfully,

Christopher B. Dempsey

CENTRAL JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

UNITED STATES v. COPELAND, JERMIAH CSSN/E-3 U.S. NAVY	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION FOR APPROPRIATE RELIEF (CHANGE VENUE) 5 December 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 906(b)(11), the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny the 26 November 2025 Defense Motion for Appropriate Relief (Change Motion) to change the venue of trial in the case of United States v. CSSN Jermiah Copeland.

BURDEN

The Defense, as the moving party, bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence.[1]

FACTS

1. CSSN Copeland is charged with four specifications of violation of Article 120, Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), one specification of violation of Article 128, UCMJ, two specifications of violation of Article 120c, UCMJ, three specifications of violation of Article 131b, UCMJ, two specifications of violation of Article 128b, UCMJ, two specifications of violation of Article 107, UCMJ, and one specification of violation of Article 118, UCMJ. Of the 15 alleged specifications, three are alleged to have occurred on board the USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN 75), three is alleged to have occurred at or near Oslo, Norway, and eight are alleged to have occurred at or near Norfolk, Virginia.[2]

2. CSSN Copeland is attached to USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95),[3] home-ported in Norfolk, Virginia.

3. The Government has provided notice that it expects to call 53 witness of whom 44 are located in or around Norfolk, Virginia or are attached to units located in or around Norfolk, Virginia.[4] The Defense has requested production of 34 witnesses, of whom 29 are located in or around Norfolk, Virginia.[5] requested production of other witnesses at this time. No expected witnesses are located in Jacksonville, Florida or Mayport, Florida.

4. As of June 2024, the Hampton Roads metropolitan area is estimated to contain a population of 1,787,169.[6]

5. Naval Station Norfolk is the largest naval station in the world with the largest concentration of U.S. Navy forces.[7]

6. Of the 154 identified articles and social media posts mentioning CSSN Copeland, 78 were published in June 2025, 18 were published in July 2025, 11 were published in August 2025, 35 were published in September 2025, and 12 were published in October 2025.[8]

7. CSSN Copeland was ordered into confinement on June 9, 2025.[9]

8. Charges were preferred on August 22, 2025.[10]

9. An Article 32 hearing was held in this case on 18 September 2025.

10. Trial is scheduled in this case for June 2026.[11]

LAW

Under the Rules for Court Martial, the place of trial may be changed when necessary to prevent prejudice to the rights of the accused or for the convenience of the Government if the rights of the accused are not prejudiced thereby.[12] "A change of place of trial may be necessary when there exists in the place where the court-martial is pending so great a prejudice against the accused that the accused cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial there."[13]

In United States v. Curtis, the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces affirmed that "where there is a reasonable likelihood that prejudicial news prior to trial will prevent a fair trial, the judge should continue the case until the threat abates, or transfer it to another county."[14] However, "pretrial publicity standing alone, no matter how widespread, is not a sufficient reason for a change of venue…unless it is shown that such publicity has permeated the panel members."[15] Curtis identifies two types of prejudice that might impact the right to a fair trial: presumed prejudice and actual prejudice.[16] A showing of actual prejudice is "usually necessary before a change of venue is granted."[17] However, "evidence of inflammatory, prejudicial pretrial publicity that so pervades or saturates the community as to render virtually impossible a fair trial by an impartial jury drawn from that community" represents an exception to the general rule requiring a show of actual prejudice. [18] In most instances a motion for a change of venue takes place after the voir dire.[19]

To establish presumed prejudice, Defense must show that pretrial publicity (1) is prejudicial, (2) is inflammatory, and (3) has saturated the community.[20] To establish saturation, "there must be evidence of the amount of pretrial publicity and the number of individuals exposed to it."[21]

To establish actual prejudice, Defense must show that members of the court-martial panel have such fixed opinions that they cannot judge impartially the guilt of the accused.[22] *"*Without such a showing, evidence that the members had knowledge of highly significant information or other incriminating matters is insufficient."[23] A member "is not disqualified just because he has been exposed to pretrial publicity or even has formulated an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of an accused on the basis of his exposure"[24] unless the member "cannot set aside the initial impressions."[25]

In applying these tests in United States v. Gray, C.A.A.F. distinguished the presumed prejudice found in Rideau v. Louisiana, 373 U.S. 723 (1963) where "the defendant's uncounseled pretrial confession was broadcast three times on television before his trial" and did not find presumed prejudice where "the articles appear to be no more than routine reports of heinous crimes, investigation of these crimes, the arrest of appellant, and the preliminary steps taken to bring appellant to trial in both state and military courts" and the articles did not appear to be "unduely sensationalistic."[26]

Similarly, in United States v. Simpson, C.A.A.F. found no actual or presumed prejudice where Defense had introduced an extensive collection of news clippings, transcripts of television programs, videotapes, and transcripts of interviews, taking up five volumes of the trial record.[27] The court below had characterized the material as reflecting a "nationwide media blitz" and a "media feeding frenzy" in describing the quantity and frequency of media interest, but noted that many of the items were duplicate stories and that, in comparison to civilian criminal investigations, was very sparse on details.[28] The Court found no presumed prejudice because extensive media interest did not demonstrate that the community was "saturated with inflammatory prejudicial material" and noted that few of the articles directly referred to the accused.[29] The Court further found no actual prejudice based on extensive individual voir dire that revealed members had encountered very little information about the trial.[30]

Finally, in Skilling v. United States, the Supreme Court highlighted several factors in finding no presumed prejudice from pretrial publicity.[31] First, the Court considered the "size and characteristics" of the community in which the crime occurred.[32] Second, the Court considered the lack of publication of a "confession or other blatantly prejudicial information of the type readers or viewers could not reasonably be expected to shut from sight."[33] Third, the Court considered the time between the media attention and trial.[34] The Court found no presumed prejudice despite the "sheer number of victims" of Enron, finding that extensive screening questionnaire and followup voir dire were effective.[35] Finally, the Court found that even a co-defendant's well-publicized guilty plea was mitigated by a delay of two weeks.[36]

ARGUMENT

1. Defense has not met its burden to establish presumed prejudice due to pretrial publicity.

In order to establish presumed prejudice, the Defense must show that pretrial publicity is prejudicial, inflammatory, and that the prejudicial, inflammatory publicity has saturated the community.[37] Defense has failed to establish any of these elements.

First, as in Skilling, Defense has not established there has been any confession or prejudicial information published in media sources.[38] In even the exemplar post highlighted by Defense in Enclosure J,[39] the linked article contains information that could be seen as favorable to the defense (that the cause and manner of death is "undetermined") and only mentions CSSN Copeland as being "in pretrial confinement in connection to [A.R.]'s death."[40]

Neither has Defense shown any of the media attention or publicity as spreading any inflammatory information. A review of the articles listed in Enclosure K of the Defense motion, reveals news articles relaying basic procedural information, such as the schedule of a hearing, or names on a charge sheet, with little information of CSSN Copeland specifically. The articles are also written in a neutral tone, without editorialization. Rather than establishing evidence of inflammatory media attention, Defense instead relies on comments from unknown individuals as an example of inflammatory publicity.[41] These comments are not media sources, there is no evidence of their reach to potential members, and these comments appear to have minimal interaction (with no "likes" and few responses). Further, not only is there no evidence that these few comments are representative of a community, but also, because the comments were posted on a public Facebook page, there is no evidence that these commenters are even located near Norfolk, Virginia.

The third element required to establish presumed prejudice is that prejudicial, inflammatory material, not simply publicity in general, must have saturated the community.[42] Assuming arguendo that every article listed by Defense was inflammatory and prejudicial, this is hardly the "nation-wide media blitz" or "media feeding frenzy" that the Simpson court considered.[43] As in Skilling, Norfolk, Virginia is a large metropolitan area with over 1.7 million residents. The articles highlighted by Defense were overwhelmingly (136 of 154) published by Norfolk area media such as 13 News, Wavy 10, and Channel 3, not military-specific news channels. There is no evidence that potential members have been saturated with inflammatory material. With one of the few metrics of saturation that Defense offered, and the only one connected to Norfolk specifically, Defense provided that Naval Station Norfolk's Facebook post received 3,600 interactions from its 125,000 followers. [44] This is approximately a 2.8% interaction rate.

Finally, any level of saturation that might exist will also be mitigated by time. A survey of the identified articles also reveals that media attention peaked in June 2025, with more than half the articles published in that month. A small bump of renewed media publication occurred in September surrounding the Article 32 hearing with very limited media attention since. Trial is set for June 2026. In Skilling, the Court found that pretrial publicity did not violate the right to a fair and impartial jury when a trial was delayed by two weeks after a co-defendant made a well-publicized guilty plea.[45] Here trial is set for nearly a year out from the peak of media attention.

2. Voir dire three months prior to trial is unnecessary and would increase the likelihood of delay.

First, defense has shown no exceptional circumstances to deviate from the typical practice of raising a motion to change venue until after voir dire.[46] Pretrial confinement is not a rare or exceptional circumstance. Additionally, maintaining voir dire close to the trial date ensures that selected members are available for trial. Selecting members three months prior increases the likelihood of losing members to illness or unavailability beyond their control. Further, members selected three months in advance cannot be questioned during voir dire on their ability to pay attention to a case free from potential distractions because they cannot project three months out what those distractions might be. Rather than ensuring trial proceeds without delay, selecting members three months ahead of trial increases the likelihood of delay.

3. Trial should be held at Naval Station Norfolk.

Even if a potential member stationed in Norfolk has been exposed to pretrial publicity, that member "is not disqualified just because he has been exposed"[47] A potential member could even have formulated an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of an accused on the basis of the exposure so long as they can set aside their initial impressions.[48] Voir dire will allow any potential member to be examined for actual prejudice and serves to protect CSSN Copeland's right to a fair and impartial jury without the need to assume members of the Norfolk community are presumed prejudice.

The majority of charged misconduct took place in Norfolk, Virgina. The overwhelming majority of witnesses are located in Norfolk, Virginia or attached to units homeported in Norfolk, Virginia. The accused's command is homeported in Norfolk, Virginia. The accused is in confinement in Chesapeake, Virginia, in the area of Norfolk, Virgina. Maintaining the place of trial at Naval Station Norfolk, Norfolk, Virginia is to the convenience of the Government and would not prejudice the rights of the accused.

NEW CENSUS DATA: POPULATION GROWTH REBOUNDS

Last month the U.S. Census Bureau released annual (intercensal) population estimates for 2023. The Hampton Roads metro area's population rose to 1,787,169, an increase of 1,779 residents from the previous year. The latest estimates indicate a positive shift toward pre-pandemic population trends for both the region and the nation as deaths slowed and net migration increased, a sign the pandemic's impact is diminishing. However, some lingering effects of the pandemic continue to shape demographic trends as population growth rates remain well below pre-pandemic levels, illustrating the ongoing nature of the recovery.

As shown in Figure 1, population growth in 2023 increased from the prior year in the United States, Virginia and Hampton Roads. Nationally, the total population increased 0.5% in 2023, a continued rebound from the record low rate of 0.1% recorded in 2021. Since the U.S. Census Bureau estimates the population as of July 1st, 2021 marks the first full year of the pandemic's impact on population growth. In Virginia, population growth edged up from a pandemic low of 0.2% in 2021 to 0.4% in 2023. In Hampton Roads the total population increased 0.1% in 2023, a rebound from a pandemic low in 2022 when the population declined by 0.01%.

While the 2023 estimates show improvement, population growth rates remain below pre-pandemic levels for all three areas. For context, from 2010 to 2019, the population increased at an average annual rate of 0.6% in the United States, 0.7% in Virginia, and 0.3% in Hampton Roads.

Population change in a region can be attributed to three components: the natural change (births minus deaths), net domestic migration (migration between the region and other parts of the country), and net international migration (migration between the region and outside the U.S.). As shown in Figure 2, in 2022, net international migration became the largest contributor to population growth in the region, as deaths and net domestic out-migration increased. The rebound in 2023 was mainly driven by fewer deaths, increasing the natural change in the population, and a decline in net domestic out-migration

Data source: U.S. Census Bureau Population Estimates Program (PEP). Hampton Roads reflects the Virginia Beach-Chesapeake-Norfolk, VA-NC MSA.

The new census data suggests a gradual return to pre-pandemic population growth trends, though the recovery remains on-going.

 Please note the estimates presented here reflect a potential undercount of the region's population estimates from 2020 forward due to a misreporting of military personnel in the 2020 census count. The HRPDC is currently assisting in a challenge of these census estimates, proceed with caution when analyzing the metro area and local population totals until this issue is resolved.*

FPC REPORTING TOUR

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30

NORFOLK, VA

APRIL 30, 2025

Naval Station Norfolk is a United States Navy base in Norfolk, Virginia, that is the headquarters and home port of the U.S. Navy's Fleet Forces Command (FFC). It is the world's largest naval station, with the largest concentration of U.S. Navy forces through 75 ships alongside 14 piers and with 134 aircraft and 11 aircraft hangars at the adjacently operated Chambers Field.

This one-day tour to Norfolk, Virginia, provided foreign journalists insight into the United States Navy and U.S. efforts to collaborate with allies and train for joint operations. Journalists were able to tour naval ships, capture b-roll footage, explore a guided-missile destroyer (DDG), directly engage with crew, and gain insights into squadron operations.

NORFOLK, Va. (WAVY) – The cause and manner of death for A.R., the Naval sailor who was found dead June 9 after being reported missing May 29, has been reported as "undetermined" according to the Medical Examiner's Office.

Another Naval sailor, Jermiah Copeland, is in pretrial confinement in connection to A.R.'s death.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. CSSN JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3, USN	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION TO COMPEL (Expert Consultants) Memory & Human Reaction Sadistic Sexual Behavior Mitigation Pathologist 5 December 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 703, the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny Defense's Motion to compel that the convening authority authorize funding for Dr. Reagan Wetherill, a forensic psychologist.

FACTS

Dr. Wetherill – Memory & Human Reaction

1. Between 22 October 2025 and 28 October 2025, Defense submitted 9 requests for expert assistance. Three of those requests were for three different forensic psychologists – Dr. Nameeta Saini, Dr. Reagan Wetherill, and Dr. Jamie Dickson.[1]

2. The Defense requested to fund Dr. Reagan Wetherill's employment as a defense consultant in the field of forensic psychology, "specifically [for] the psychology surrounding a person's fight or flight response and the effect of alcohol on memory."[2]

3. On 5 November 2025, the Government negatively endorsed Defense's request for funding for both Dr. Wetherill and Dr. Dickson citing a lack of necessity.

Dr. Dickson – Sadistic Sexual Behavior

4. On 24 July 2024, ABHAN C.R. was strangled by the Accused on the fantail of the USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN 75).[3]

[2] Encl 2
[3] Encl 4

5. On or about 23 July 2024, two TRUMAN Sailors, ABHAN C.R. and CSSN Copeland exchanged contact information and shortly thereafter CSSN Copeland asked ABHAN C.R. if she wanted to hang out on the mess decks after work.[4]

6. ABHAN C.R. met the Accused on the mess deck in the late evening hours of 23 July 2024, but the Accused changed plans and led ABHAN C.R. to the fantail of the ship.[5]

7. While on the fantail, the two carried on a causal conversation until the Accused turned the conversation to ABHAN C.R.'s boyfriend and her romantic life. He suggested to ABHAN C.R. that she should engage in sexual activity with him to upset her boyfriend. ABHAN C.R. declined.[6]

8. Prior to the strangulation, the Accused asked ABHAN C.R. if she liked to be choked. She denied that she liked to be choked and asked him who told him that. The Accused responded, "nobody."[7]

9. The medical examiner who conducted CS3 A.R.'s autopsy could not eliminate strangulation as a possible cause of death.[8]

10. On 22 October 2025, Defense requested a forensic psychologist, Dr. Jamie Dickson, to consult in sadistic sexual behavior.[9]

11. On 5 November 2025, the Government negatively endorsed Defense's request for an expert in sadistic sexual behavior.

Ms. LaVala- Mitigation

12. On 22 October 2025, Defense requested an expert consultant in mitigation.[10]

13. On 5 November 2025, the Government negatively endorsed Defense's request for funding for an expert consultant in mitigation citing a lack of necessity.

Dr. Banerjee - Pathology

14. On 22 October 2025, Defense requested an expert consultant in pathology.[11]

15. The expert's hourly rate is $850/hour. The estimated total for services in this case is $250,000.[12]

16. One 5 November 2025, the Government alerted Defense their request violated service regulations.

17. JAGMAN 0146(l) authorizes compensation for experts in line with compensation paid to experts by U.S. Attorneys. The presumptive rate for a medical doctor is between $275 and $400/hour.[13]

18. The Government made several attempts but has been unable to find an active-duty pathologist able to assist.

19. The Government obtained a list of qualified civilian pathologists and forwarded that list to Defense in order to help facilitate an adequate substitute expert consultant.[14]

20. Until the filing of this motion, the Government was unaware Defense objected to interviewing a substitute pathologist.

BURDEN OF PROOF

The Defense, as the moving party, bears the burden of persuasion and the burden of proof on any factual issue, the resolution of which is necessary to decide the motion, by a preponderance of the evidence. R.C.M. 905(c)(1)-(2).

LAW

Rule for Court-Martial (R.C.M.) 703(d)(2) provides when the "employment of a Defense expert consultant is considered necessary" the Defense may request government funding for that expert "in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary concerned." When raised before the military judge, "[t]he military judge shall determine . . . in the case of an expert consultant, whether the assistance is necessary for an adequate Defense."[15]

JAGMAN 0146(l) states," (1) The convening authority will authorize the employment of an expert consultant or witness and will fix the limit of compensation to be paid such expert based on the normal compensation paid by U.S. Attorneys for attendance of a witness of such standing in U.S. courts in the area involved. Information concerning such normal compensation may be obtained from the nearest GCMCA having a judge advocate assigned in other than an additional duty, temporary duty, or temporary additional duty capacity."

Indeed, the requirement that the government provide for expert consultation stems from the Due Process demand that an accused be given the "basic tools" necessary to present a Defense.[16] The right to expert assistance is triggered upon a demonstration of both necessity, and that denial of expert assistance would "result in a fundamentally unfair trial."[17]

"An accused is entitled to expert assistance provided by the Government if he can demonstrate necessity."[18] But the mere possibility of assistance is not sufficient to prevail on the request.[19] Instead, the accused has the burden of establishing "that a reasonable probability exists that (1) an expert would be of assistance to the Defense and (2) that denial of expert assistance would result in a fundamentally unfair trial."[20] "In order to satisfy the first prong of this test… [t]he Defense must show (1) why the expert is necessary; (2) what the expert would accomplish for the accused; and (3) why Defense counsel is unable to gather and present the evidence that the expert would be able to develop."[21]

"An accused is not, however, entitled to a specific expert of his own choosing."[22]

ARGUMENT

I. Dr. Wetherill – Alcohol and Memory and Human Response

A. Defense fails to explain how Dr. Wetherill would be of assistance because Defense has not demonstrated necessity when a Forensic Psychologist has already been appointed to the Defense Team.

The defense requests Government funding for three separate forensic psychologists—one to conduct a recidivism analysis for sentencing, one to opine on "fight or flight" and the effects of alcohol on memory, and one to address "sadistic sexual behavior." – all unrelated matters, the Accused's risk of recidivism, fight or flight response and the effect on alcohol and memory – both as they pertain to CSSN S.S. and sadistic sexual behavior as it allegedly pertains to ABHAN C.R. The defense provides no clear explanation for why one qualified forensic psychologist cannot competently consult on each of these matters. Because the burden rests squarely with the defense to show that the requested expert assistance is necessary for each expert under R.C.M. 703(d), and they have failed to do so, the request for Dr. Wetherill must be denied.

Forensic psychologists routinely provide consultation across multiple domains, including risk assessment, trauma and stress responses, alcohol-related memory effects, and sexual-behavior evaluations. Dr. Sani's curriculum vital describes a myriad of different services she can provide which are not limited only to recidivism analysis[23].

The defense identifies no clinical limitation, no statutory barrier, and no evidentiary rule that prohibits a single expert from addressing these topics. Instead, the defense asserts that multiple experts are required because, in their view, if one expert interviews the accused and later testifies on any other matter, the attorney client privilege and work product doctrine that protects a non-testifying expert consultant will be pierced, and the Government could obtain and introduce the accused's statements. This argument misstates the law.

[22] Short, at 373.
[23] Encl 1.

Defense consulting experts are protected by both the attorney–client privilege and the attorney work-product doctrine. The Government has no right to discover statements made by the accused to a consulting expert. Privilege is implicated only if the defense affirmatively chooses to call that expert as a witness, and even then, any waiver is limited in scope to the basis of the expert's testimony. There is no rule that simply because an expert interviewed the accused, any testimony by that expert on a wholly unrelated subject opens the door to admission of the accused's statements. The defense's asserted "privilege or work product concern" is unfounded. R.C.M 703 does not entitle the defense to multiple experts merely to facilitate a strategic preference.

Because the Defense has not shown that three experts are necessary, because one appropriately qualified forensic psychologist can consult on all the requested topics, and because the defense's privilege/work product theory as applied to this case is incorrect, the request for Dr. Wetherill, a second forensic psychologist, should be denied.

B. Denial of Defense's Request to Fund Dr. Wetherill Will Not Result in a Fundamentally Unfair Trial

Defense cannot show necessity because they already possess a qualified forensic psychology expert capable of addressing these exact topics. The Defense's existing expert has the training, credentials, and professional expertise to analyze human stress responses, trauma physiology, perception under threat, and the cognitive impact of alcohol. These subjects fall squarely within the skill set of any licensed forensic psychologist.

R.C.M. 703(d) requires the defense to demonstrate why an expert is necessary—not merely helpful, convenient, or strategically advantageous. The defense has not identified any limitation in their current expert's training, experience, or subject-matter competency that would prevent that expert from offering opinions on these issues. Because the defense already has an expert with the requisite expertise, the request for an additional forensic psychologist is redundant and unnecessary.

Moreover, the presence of a currently appointed forensic psychology expert defeats any claim that denial of a second expert would result in a fundamentally unfair trial. The Defense already has full access to the very expertise they claim is essential. They can prepare their case, consult on witness behavior, analyze memory issues, and—if they choose—present expert testimony to the members. Due process does not entitle the defense to duplicate experts for strategic impact or to bolster presentation optics by hiring multiple experts in the same area.

Accordingly, because the Defense already possesses an expert fully capable of addressing the topics of stress responses and alcohol's effect on memory, they cannot meet their burden to show necessity under R.C.M. 703(d). Denial of an additional forensic psychologist will not compromise the fairness or integrity of the proceedings.

II. Dr. Jamie Dickson – Sadistic Sexual Behavior

There is no evidentiary basis for sexual-behavior expertise. Any attempt to attribute a predilection for "sexual choking" to the victim is unsupported. Furthermore, it is inadmissible without proper MRE 412 notice (which Defense has chosen not to provide). However, even with an evidentiary basis and proper notice, this is not a topic that requires expert assistance. Lastly, Defense already has a qualified forensic psychologist who can consult on these topics. For these reasons, the request for an expert in sadistic sexual behavior must be denied.

A. The Defense Has Not Demonstrated Necessity for an Expert in "Sadistic Sexual Behavior"

Defense requests an expert in "sadistic sexual behavior" to develop unspecified "theories" and "potentially testify" at trial. This request is speculative, unsupported by the evidence, and fails to satisfy any of the requirements of R.C.M. 703(d). Defense has not shown why such an expert is necessary, what admissible evidence the expert would address, or why their already-appointed forensic psychologist cannot perform any required consultation.

B. Defense's Theory That the ABHAN C.R. "Liked to Be Choked" Is Unsupported, Inadmissible, and Based Solely on the Accused's Self-Serving Statement

Defense asserts it needs a "sadistic sexual behavior" expert because the Accused asked the victim if she "liked to be choked" and then strangled her. The notion that the victim, ABHAN C.R., engaged in a sadistic sexual behavior is wholly unsupported by the evidence. There is no indication—from witness statements, forensic evidence, prior history, or any other admissible source—that this victim had a sexual interest in choking. Defense appears to agree – otherwise the victim's alleged sexual behavior would have been included in Defense's M.R.E. 412 Notice. It was not. The only "evidence" offered is the accused's own sinister statement, made contemporaneously with the assault. This is not a foundation for expert funding. Additionally, if factual evidence exists to support the claim that ABHAN had a sexual interest in choking, the Defense can gather that evidence and present it without the help of an expert. Expert assistance is simply not required to present that evidence.

C. Even If the Accused Wrongly Believed ABHAN C.R. Enjoyed Strangulation, there is no necessity for a Defense expert.

Even assuming arguendo that a person can consent to strangulation,(a point the Government very much contests)[24] the Defense has failed to establish how an expert is necessary. If the Court were to find that consent is a defense, then evidence of a mistaken belief of consent to support a mistake of fact instruction can be presented through witnesses. An expert is not necessary to present that evidence.

Consent is not a defense to strangulation[25]. Therefore, a mistaken belief as to consent is not relevant as a mistake of fact as to consent would also not be a defense. An expert cannot convert a defendant's subjective, but objectively unreasonable assumption into a legally viable [24] A person "cannot consent to an act likely to produce grievous bodily harm or death." United States v. Outhier, 45 M.J. 236 (C.A.A.F. 1996)(citations omitted). The Government would certainly argue that strangulation is likely to produce grievous bodily harm or death, and thus that consent is not a defense.

[25] Id.

justification. The necessity requirement is not met when the proposed expert merely supports an inadmissible, irrelevant, or legally invalid theory.

D. As to the CS3 A.R., There Is No Evidence of Sexual Strangulation or Sexual Kink to Justify Any Expert Assistance

Defense asserts that a "sadistic sexual behavior" expert is necessary because the Government's theory is that CS3 A.R. was also strangled. The Government's theory is based on autopsy findings consistent with strangulation. No evidence exists that CS3 C.R. held a predisposition for sexual kink associated with strangulation. An expert cannot be justified where there is no factual predicate. R.C.M. 703(d) requires necessity grounded in the actual evidence of the case, not in generalized speculation or unsupported theories.

E. Defense Already Has a Forensic Psychologist Capable of Consulting on These Topics

Assuming arguendo, an expert on sexual sadism or sexualized choking were relevant—which it is not—the defense already possesses a forensic psychologist who is fully capable of consulting on these very issues. Forensic psychologists, as a matter of training and practice, routinely address sexual behavior, paraphilic disorders, sadistic patterns, and the relationship between violence and sexualized conduct. Defense has not explained why their current expert is unable to consult or testify on these matters. Under R.C.M. 703(d), the defense must explain why existing resources cannot address the need. They have made no such showing.

III. Ms. LaVer – Sentencing Mitigation

Because the defense has not demonstrated necessity under R.C.M. 703(d), has not shown what an expert would accomplish, has not explained why their exceptionally experienced team cannot gather the same information, the request must be denied.

A. The Defense Has Not Demonstrated that A Mitigation Expert is Necessary

This case was not referred capital. The defense's reliance on United States v. Kreutzer[26], is misplaced. Kreutzer involved a mass shooting, seventeen wounded victims, a deceased officer, and a capital referral. The ACCA held expert mitigation assistance was necessary because (1) the accused faced the death penalty, and (2) there was significant evidence of mental illness, competency concerns, and potential lack of mental responsibility.

Those conditions are wholly absent here. Defense has not alleged any issue – like the issues present in Kreutzer – that makes this case one that requires assistance of a mitigation specialist. Unlike in Kreutzer, Defense does not argue the Accused suffers from any mental disease or defect, nor have the requested a R.C.M. 706 evaluation.

B. Defense Has Not Shown Why Its Existing Team Cannot Develop Sentencing Evidence Without Additional Experts

[26] 59 M.J. 773 (A. Ct. Crim. App. 2004)

(1) The Defense Team Consists of Three Senior Military Justice Litigators

Under R.C.M. 703(d), the defense must show why counsel cannot gather or present the evidence themselves. Here, defense merely provides a blanket statement that they cannot and fail to acknowledge the experience level of defense counsel. The accused is represented by three highly experienced defense counsel, including the Deputy Director of the Defense Counsel Assistance Program (DCAP). Each of these counsel have litigated serious cases involving clients facing decades of confinement. They offer no explanation as to why their years of experience, interviewing witnesses and developing sentencing cases is inadequate.

(2) The Defense Team Also Consists of a Highly Regarded Defense Litigation Support Specialist

In addition to three senior counsel, the Defense has a Defense Litigation Support Specialist (DLSS), Ms. Jeanine Badanes[27], assigned to the case. She is a skilled, if not the most skilled, DLSS professional in the Navy, is a licensed attorney, and has extensive experience conducting investigations, interviewing witnesses, obtaining records, and compiling detailed background information.

Her capabilities directly overlap with the mitigation functions the defense now seeks to assign to a funded expert. The presence of such a highly qualified DLSS demonstrates that the defense already possesses the ability to develop precisely the same mitigation evidence they claim cannot be presented without expert funding.

(3) The Defense Has Not Shown What an Expert Would Accomplish That Their Existing Team Cannot

The defense provides no explanation of what specific, specialized tasks an expert would perform that fall outside the abilities of (1) three senior defense attorneys, and (2) a highly experienced DLSS. R.C.M. 703(d) requires this showing. Without it, the request fails.

B. Denial of a Mitigation Expert Will Not Render the Trial Fundamentally Unfair

There is no reasonable probability that denying this expert will result in a fundamentally unfair trial. The defense has not identified any unique factors in this non-capital case that make it different from the myriads of other serious felony level cases each of the counsel has handled previously. The existing defense team is more than capable of preparing and presenting an adequate sentencing case with the personnel already assigned. The Due Process Clause guarantees the "basic tools," not unlimited resources.

IV. Dr. Banerjee - Pathology

[27] See Enclosure K to Def MFAR Change Venue, "I, Jeanine Badanes, have been employed as a Defense Litigation Support Specialist (Defense Investigator) with Defense Service Office Southeast in Norfolk, Virginia, since October 2015.Prior to my current position, I worked as a litigation attorney for 19 years and practiced both civil and criminal law, in State and Federal Courts, most recently as a State prosecutor. Over the past ten (10) years as the defense investigator."

Defense Is Not Entitled to the Expert of Their Choosing—Particularly When They Refuse to Follow the JAGMAN or Engage With the Government to find an Adequate Substitute.

The Defense is not entitled to a specific expert, nor are they entitled to disregard service regulations when requesting expert assistance. Here, the requested pathologist charges a rate that exceeds the maximum compensation authorized by the JAGMAN. The Defense has been aware of this defect in their request since 5 November 2025. The applicable rate for a medical doctor paid by U.S. Attorneys is between $175 and $400 an hour.[28] Yet instead of engaging in any self-help to vet a compliant expert by contacting any of the several qualified pathologists the Government located for them, the Defense has chosen to do nothing to rectify their defective request and asks this Court to ignore service regulations and appoint an expert of their choosing.

The Government is actively engaged in finding Defense an adequate substitute, however, Defense appears to have declined to contact the multiple substitutes provided by the Government; continues to ignore the JAGMAN's explicit instructions on how to determine authorized compensation or even ask the Government for further information on compensation; and then insist that the Court compel the Government to fund the expert who's fee violates service regulations, anyway. The Defense has not even shown that they have engaged with their requested expert about working within existing compensation structure.

The Defense proposed an expert outside of the regulations and has not engaged with suggested substitutes provided by the Government. The Defense should have to engage with these other experts before requesting this Court to order an expert outside of the existing compensation regulations.

Accordingly, the Defense request for this particular pathologist must be denied.

(2) Fee Schedule of Dr. Nameeta Sahni, Psy.D.

1. Pursuant to references (a) through (h), CSSN Jermiah Copeland, through counsel, requests the appointment of a confidential forensic psychologist specializing in psychosexual evaluation, sex offender rehabilitation, and recidivism to assist in his defense. Specifically, CSSN Copeland requests that you appoint Dr. Sahni as a representative of the defense so that any communications between her, CSSN Copeland, and defense counsel will be privileged pursuant to reference (d) and other applicable federal laws and regulations.

2. Background:

CSSN Copeland is charged with four specifications of violations of Article 120 (sexual assault), a violation of Article 128 (assault consummated by a battery), two specifications of violations of Article 120c (indecent recording/broadcasting), three specifications of violations of Article 131b (obstruction of justice), two specifications of violations of Article 128b (domestic violence), two specifications of violations of Article 107 (false official statement), and a violation of Article 118 (premeditated murder). If CSSN Copeland is convicted of premeditated murder, he is facing a minimum sentence of life with the possibility of parole and a maximum punishment of life without the possibility of parole.

Dr. Sahni is a licensed and well-credentialed forensic psychologist with over 20 years of experience. Over the course of her career, she has interviewed and evaluated offenders and in many cases made recommendations about their future risk to society.

3. Supporting Law:

The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guarantees court-martial defendants a right to the effective assistance of counsel.[1] This includes "the right to present a defense by means of confrontation, cross-examination and going forward with a presentation of [his or her] own evidence." Military due process entitles a service member to the assistance of an expert when necessary for the preparation of an adequate defense."[2]

More specifically, the government must provide expert assistance for the defense when there exists: "a reasonable probability that (1) an expert would be of assistance to the defense and (2) that denial of expert assistance would result in a fundamentally unfair trial."[3]

The first prong is established when the accused demonstrates the following: "(1) why the expert assistance is needed; (2) what the expert assistance would accomplish for the accused; and (3) why the defense counsel [is] unable to gather and present the evidence that the expert assistance would be able to develop."[4]

Even if a defense expert consultant does not become an expert witness, such a consultant may still assist the defense in evaluating, identifying and developing evidence.[5]

4. Reasoning:

a. Expert assistance in the field of psychosexual evaluation and recidivism risk assessment is needed to explore and develop that CSSN Copeland is a low risk to commit crimes in the future.

If convicted, CSSN Copeland has the right to present evidence in extenuation and mitigation to the sentencing authority. This evidence could include an expert opinion that CSSN Copeland is a low risk to society generally. Any such evidence would be a solid basis to adjudicate a lower sentence than CSSN Copeland might otherwise receive without this evidence.

b. Expert assistance in the field of psychosexual evaluation and recidivism risk assessment is the only way for CSSN Copeland to develop and ultimately present the critical evidence described above. This expert assistance requested creates the scientifically-valid basis for testimony that CSSN Copeland is a low risk to commit future offenses.

Dr. Sahni will complete a full recidivism risk analysis. This includes administering several psychological exams, as well as conducting collateral interviews and a review of pertinent evidentiary material. The results of Dr. Sahni's evaluation will be analyzed and explained (possibly via an extensive written report) to allow defense counsel to ascertain if and how to use Dr. Sahni's findings. Depending on the outcome of the psychological testing, Dr. Sahni will also be able to testify as to CSSN Copeland's low risk of committing other offenses.

[4] Id.
[5] United States v. Warner, 62 M.J. 114, 118 (C.A.A.F. 2005).

c. Defense counsel cannot conduct psychological tests nor ultimately testify to the results in court.

Forensic psychological testing of CSSN Copeland will require a qualified and licensed psychologist trained and experienced in conducting these professional evaluations. Lawyers cannot ethically or practically conduct such tests on their own. Additionally, if the defense decides to use the results of the testing described above, only a qualified expert like Dr. Sahni is competent to testify to the findings at trial. There is no way to develop the necessary psychological evidence demonstrating a low risk of recidivism without the expert assistance requested.

d. Denial of the requested expert assistance would deprive CSSN Copeland of his right to fully explore relevant and compelling evidence in extenuation and mitigation should he need to present a pre-sentencing case. This would result in a fundamentally unfair trial.

CSSN Copeland has the constitutional right to present a defense. This includes presenting and challenging evidence at presentencing proceedings.[6] If there is credible, scientifically sound evidence that CSSN Copeland is a low-risk to society, he must be permitted to explore if and how to present that evidence to the sentencing authority. This evidence would most certainly bear strongly on the issue of any potential sentence, should CSSN Copeland be convicted. CSSN Copeland cannot investigate, develop, or present this important defense without access to the requested expert assistance. Therefore, denying his request ultimately denies him the right to put on his case.

5. Proposed Expert Consultant and Fees:

The defense has estimated the following fees:

Expense	Rate	Total
30 hours pretrial consultation	$450/hour	$13,500.00
Evaluation of CSSN Copeland	$4,500.00	$4,500.00
Presence at trial – 21 days	$4,500.00/day	$94,500.00
Dr. Sahni's travel expenses in accordance with the JTR	TBD	TBD

Therefore, the defense requests a total authorization of approximately $112,500.00, not including travel expenses, to be reimbursed in accordance with the Joint Travel Regulations, for the services described above.

The defense further requests that the expert consultant be viewed as a member of the defense team such that all communications between the expert consultant and the accused and his counsel will be viewed as confidential. The defense further requests that the government not have any conversations or other interaction with the requested expert consultant in relation to this case except for any administrative communications in securing their assistance for the defense. The defense understands this limitation may be removed if the defense eventually desires to have the expert testify in the case.

[6] Garries, 22 M.J. 288 (citing Ake, 470 U.S. 58).

Subj: EXPERT CONSULTANT REQUEST IN THE CASE OF UNITED STATES V. CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN – FIGHT OR FLIGHT

Ref: (a) U.S. CONST. amend. VI
(b) Article 46, Uniform Code of Military Justice
(c) Rule for Courts-Martial 703, M.C.M. (2019 ed.)
(d) Military Rule of Evidence 502, M.C.M. (2019 ed.)
(e) Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68 (1985)
(f) United States v. Freeman, 65 M.J. 451 (C.A.A.F. 2008)
(g) United States v. Gonzalez, 39 M.J. 459 (C.A.A.F. 1994)
(h) United States v. Allen, 31 M.J. 572 (N.M.C.C.A. 1990)

Encl: (1) CV of Dr. Reagan Wetherill
(2) Fee Schedule of Dr. Reagan Wetherill

1. Pursuant to references (a) through (h), the defense counsel for CSSN Copeland respectfully requests government funding for an expert consultant in the field of forensic psychology, specifically the psychology surrounding a person's fight or flight response and the effect of alcohol consumption on memory. Specifically, CSSN Copeland requests that you appoint Dr. Wetherill as a representative of the defense so that any communications between her, CSSN Copeland, and defense counsel will be privileged pursuant to reference (d) and other applicable federal laws and regulations.

2. CSSN Copeland is charged with four specifications of violations of Article 120 (sexual assault), a violation of Article 128 (assault consummated by a battery), two specifications of violations of Article 120c (indecent recording/broadcasting), three specifications of violations of Article 131b (obstruction of justice), two specifications of violations of Article 128b (domestic violence), two specifications of violations of Article 107 (false official statement), and a violation of Article 118 (premeditated murder). If CSSN Copeland is convicted of premeditated murder, he is facing a minimum sentence of life with the possibility of parole and a maximum punishment of life without the possibility of parole.

3. A military accused is entitled to expert assistance in the form of expert consultation "to aid in the preparation of his Defense upon a demonstration of necessity…and that denial of an expert would result in a fundamentality unfair trial." United States v. Bresnahan, 62 M.J. 137, 143 (C.A.A.F. 2005); R.C.M. 703(d). Under Article 46, UCMJ, the Defense may request expert consultants to assist the Defense in "evaluating, identifying, and developing evidence," as well as to "test and challenge the Government's case." United States v. Warner, 62 M.J. 114, 118 (C.A.A.F 2005). The right to present evidence guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, Article 46, UCMJ, and R.C.M. 703 "necessarily includes the right to prepare." United States v. Allen, 31

M.J. 572, 623 (N-M.CM.R. 1990). Consequently, a military member is entitle[d]…to the assistance of an expert when necessary to the preparation of an adequate defense." Id. (quoting United States v. Garries, 22 M.J. 288, 290 (C.M.A. 1986). The right to an "adequate defense" includes "preparation for cross-examination" of Government witnesses well "as presentation of an expert defense witness." Id. (quoting United States v. Durant, 545 F.2d 823, 827 (2d Cir. 1976)). Thus, a Defense expert's assistance as a consultant before trial and during trial may in part be justified by the consultant's ability to provide assistance in preparing the Defense for the presentation of expert testimony. Id.

4. To demonstrate "necessity" as required by R.C.M. 703, the Defense must show "more than the 'mere possibility of assistance from a requested expert' . . . " Bresnahan, 62 M.J. 137, 143 (C.A.A.F. 2005). "The accused must show that a reasonable probability exists 'both that an expert would be of assistance to the defense and that denial of expert assistance would result in a fundamentally unfair trial.'" Bresnahan, 62 M.J. 137, 143 (C.A.A.F. 2005). In order to demonstrate the first prong of that test—that a reasonable probability exists that an expert would be of assistance to the Defense—the Defense must explain: "'(1) why the expert is necessary; (2) what the expert would accomplish for the accused; and (3) why defense counsel is unable to gather and present the evidence that the expert would be able to develop.'" United States v. Hennis, 79 M.J. 370, 382-83 (C.A.A.F. 2020) (quoting United States v. Lloyd, 69 M.J. 95, 99 (C.A.A.F. 2010) (emphasis in original).

5. As delineated in enclosure (1), Dr. Wetherill is a board-certified clinical psychologist with an expertise in clinical and experimental research involving alcohol and the physiological effects on the brain and memory. The evidence in this case raises significant questions that may likely be explained by a comprehensive understanding of the body's immediate "fight or flight" response to any given situation or startling event. Moreover, the allegations involving CSSN S.S. contain the alleged victim having blackouts. Dr. Wetherill's extensive education and experience in forensic psychology makes her participation indispensable to CSSN Copeland's defense and perfecting a case on the merits. The defense is aware of no government substitute that could address the specific nature of the defense's need to the level of knowledge and expertise as Dr. Wetherill.

6. Additionally, based on how defense anticipates the evidence will be presented at trial, defense counsel effectiveness and ability to present a logical defense, through cross and direct examination, will be limited without assistance of Dr. Wetherill. The defense is not an expert in this subject matter. Defense counsel has not received any formal training in psychology. Nor does defense counsel have the necessary time or ability to develop such and expertise prior to trial. This type of evidence requires a level of knowledge the defense does not possess, and cannot gain in a few weeks or even months of study. Furthermore, defense is unable to present this evidence to members without the assistance of an expert witness.

7. Based on the fee schedule in enclosure (2), defense requests twenty (20) hours for pre-trial consultancy at a cost of $8,000.00. Additionally, the Defense requests Dr. Wetherill's presence at trial (21 days), and one day of trial preparation, for a total of 22 days ($4,000/day x 22 days) at a cost of $88,000.00. The total amount requested by defense is approximately $96,000.00, in addition to travel expenses in accordance with Joint Travel Regulations. The defense will submit an additional request if more time is needed.

8. The defense requests that this expert be assigned as a consulting member of CSSN Copeland's defense team, such that all communication between the accused, defense counsel, and the expert are privileged and confidential pursuant to Mil. R. Evid. 502. The defense further requests that the government refrain from any substantive contact with this expert. It is understood that this limitation may be removed if the defense ultimately desires to have Dr. Wetherill testify as an expert witness in this case.

9. Thank you for your careful consideration of this request. If I may provide any additional information, I am available at (757) 341-4486 or clifton.e.morgan4.mil@us.navy.mil to answer any questions about this request.

2011 – 2015	National Institute on Drug Abuse, R01DA029845, Characterizing a Cue-Vulnerable Endophenotype in Smokers, $1,221,313, T. Franklin (PI) Role: Co-Investigator
2011 – 2015	Pennsylvania Department of Health/Commonwealth Universal Research Enhancement Program, CURE Addiction Center of Excellence: Brain Mechanisms of Relapse and Recovery, $6,000,000, A. Childress/T. Franklin/D. Langleben (MPIs) Role: Co-Investigator
2003 – 2008	National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, F31AA017022, The Etiology of Fragmentary Blackouts: Memory Processes and Neural Activations, $68,492, R. Wetherill (PI) Role: Principal Investigator

MAJOR ACADEMIC AND CLINICAL TEACHING RESPONSIBILITIES

2022	Lecturer, "Neurobiology of Addiction: Influence of Biological Sex and Hormones", Addiction: Understanding how we get hooked and how we recover (HSOC 0311-301), University of Pennsylvania
2021	Lecturer, "Marijuana", Brain & Behavior Course for MS1s, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania
2021	Lecturer, "Using PET Imaging to Examine Oxidative Stress in E-cigarette Users", Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Department of Psychiatry
2019	Lecturer, "Functional Magnetic Resonance Imaging Study of Topiramate's Effects", Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Department of Psychiatry Grand Rounds
2019	Lecturer, "Cannabis, Cannabis Use Disorder, & Treatment", Brain & Behavior Course for MS1s, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania
2018	Lecturer, "Translational Models of Reward-Motivation in Smoking Behavior", Summer at Penn Neuroscience Research Academy, University of Pennsylvania
2018	Lecturer, "Cannabis and Cannabis Use Disorder", Brain & Behavior Course for MS1s, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania
2017	Lecturer and Consultant, "Alcohol, Memory, and Alcohol-Induced Blackouts: Alcohol-Facilitated Sexual Violence Implications", Office of the Sexual Violence Investigator Officer Annual Panel Member Training, University of Pennsylvania

2017	Lecturer, "Sex Differences in Nicotine Use Disorder", Center for Studies of Addiction, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania
2017	Lecturer, "Brain Mechanisms of Topiramate's Effects on Heavy Drinking", Department of Psychiatry Research Trainee Event, University of Pennsylvania
2016	Lecturer and Consultant, "Alcohol-Facilitated Sexual Violence", Office of the Sexual Violence Investigator Officer Annual Panel Member Training, University of Pennsylvania
2016	Lecturer, "Influence of Sex on Neural Processing in Nicotine Use Disorder", Center for Studies of Addiction, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Department of Psychiatry
2015	Lecturer, "Acute Effects of Alcohol on the Brain and Alcohol-Induced Blackouts", Center for Studies of Addiction, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Department of Psychiatry
2014	Lecturer, "Neural Features of Cannabis Use Disorder", Center on Studies of Addiction, Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania
2011	Proctor, "Clinical Foundations" Integrated Scientific Core Curriculum Course for MS1s, University of California, San Diego School of Medicine

INVITED TALKS

2021	"The Influence of Sex and Hormones on Reward-Related Responses and Behavior", Yale School of Medicine, New Haven, Connecticut
2021	"Alcohol Use and the Brain", Corporal Michael J. Crescenz VA Medical Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
2019	"Alcohol-Induced Blackouts: What Happened? How Did We Get Here?", Association of Title IX Administrators (ATIXA), Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
2019	"Further Exploration into the Influence of Sex and Hormones on Cigarette Smoking Cue Reactivity", College on Problems of Drug Dependence, San Antonio, Texas
2019	"Classifying and Characterizing Nicotine Use Disorder with High Accuracy Using Machine Learning and Resting-State fMRI", College on Problems of Drug Dependence, San Antonio, Texas
2018	"Sex Differences in Brain Reactivity to Smoking Cues: Consensus across Sites and Methodologies", American Psychological Association, San Francisco, California
2018	Discussant for "Sex Differences in the Nicotine Addicted Brain---Translational Implications" symposium, American Psychological Association, San Francisco, California
2018	"Alcohol-Related Blackouts: Clinical Phenomena & Potential Genetic Influences", Research Society on Alcoholism, San Diego, California
2018	"Sex Differences in Nicotine Use Disorder: Findings from Neuroimaging", Research Institute on Addictions, Buffalo, New York
2018	"Use of Neuroimaging to Explore Sex Differences in Nicotine Use Disorder", National Institutes of Health/National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, Rockville, Maryland
2017	"Sex Differences in Nicotine Use Disorder: Findings from Neuroimaging", University of Vermont, Vermont Center on Behavior and Health, Burlington, Vermont

2017	"Addiction as a Brain Disease: Sex Differences in Nicotine Use Disorder", University of Connecticut Medical Center, Department of Psychiatry Grand Rounds, Farmington, Connecticut
2017	"Alcohol, Memory, and Alcohol-Induced Blackouts: Title IX Implications", Cornell University, Ithaca, New York
2017	"The impact of sex on brain responses to smoking cues: replication in a new cohort", College on Problems of Drug Dependence, Montreal, Canada
2017	"Resting-state rCBF in Cigarette Smokers: Sated vs Withdrawal States", Society of Biological Psychiatry, San Diego, California
2017	"Influence of Sex and Ovarian Hormones on Neural Processing in Nicotine Use Disorder", Columbia University School of Medicine, New York, New York
2017	"Addiction as a Brain Disease: What Every PCP Should Know About SUDs", Keynote Address at the 10th Annual Conference on Primary Care and Child/Adolescent Psychiatry: Teens and Substance Abuse, Reading, Pennsylvania
2017	"Addiction as a Brain Disease: What Everybody Should Know About SUDs", 10th Annual Conference on Primary Care and Child/Adolescent Psychiatry: Teens and Substance Abuse, Reading, Pennsylvania
2016	"The Influence of Sex on Neural Processing in Cannabis Use Disorder", American Psychological Association, Denver, Colorado
2016	"Age of Onset of Marijuana Use and Neural Responses to Backward-masked Marijuana Cues: Shifts in Striatal Activity." National Institutes of Health Marijuana Summit, Bethesda, Maryland

Subj: EXPERT CONSULTANT REQUEST IN THE CASE OF UNITED STATES V. CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN – SEXUAL SADISTIC BEHAVIOR

Ref: (a) U.S. CONST. amend. VI
(b) Article 46, Uniform Code of Military Justice
(c) Rule for Courts-Martial 703, M.C.M. (2019 ed.)
(d) Military Rule of Evidence 502, M.C.M. (2019 ed.)
(e) Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68 (1985)
(f) United States v. Freeman, 65 M.J. 451 (C.A.A.F. 2008)
(g) United States v. Gonzalez, 39 M.J. 459 (C.A.A.F. 1994)
(h) United States v. Allen, 31 M.J. 572 (N.M.C.C.A. 1990)

Encl: (1) CV of Dr. Jamie Dickson
(2) Fee Schedule of Dr. Jamie Dickson

1. Pursuant to references (a) through (h), the defense counsel for CSSN Copeland respectfully requests government funding for an expert consultant in the field of sexual sadistic behavior in the context of strangulation and sexual kinks. Specifically, CSSN Copeland requests that you appoint Dr. Dickson as a representative of the defense so that any communications between her, CSSN Copeland, and defense counsel will be privileged pursuant to reference (d) and other applicable federal laws and regulations.

2. CSSN Copeland is charged with four specifications of violations of Article 120 (sexual assault), a violation of Article 128 (assault consummated by a battery), two specifications of violations of Article 120c (indecent recording/broadcasting), three specifications of violations of Article 131b (obstruction of justice), two specifications of violations of Article 128b (domestic violence), two specifications of violations of Article 107 (false official statement), and a violation of Article 118 (premeditated murder). If CSSN Copeland is convicted of premeditated murder, he is facing a minimum sentence of life with the possibility of parole and a maximum punishment of life without the possibility of parole.

3. A military accused is entitled to expert assistance in the form of expert consultation "to aid in the preparation of his Defense upon a demonstration of necessity…and that denial of an expert would result in a fundamentality unfair trial." United States v. Bresnahan, 62 M.J. 137, 143 (C.A.A.F. 2005); R.C.M. 703(d). Under Article 46, UCMJ, the Defense may request expert consultants to assist the Defense in "evaluating, identifying, and developing evidence," as well as to "test and challenge the Government's case." United States v. Warner, 62 M.J. 114, 118 (C.A.A.F 2005). The right to present evidence guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, Article 46, UCMJ, and R.C.M. 703 "necessarily includes the right to prepare." United States v. Allen, 31 M.J. 572, 623 (N-M.CM.R. 1990). Consequently, a military member is entitle[d]…to the assistance of an expert when necessary to the preparation of an adequate defense." Id. (quoting United States v. Garries, 22 M.J. 288, 290 (C.M.A. 1986). The right to an "adequate defense" includes "preparation for cross-examination" of Government witnesses well "as presentation of an expert defense witness." Id. (quoting United States v. Durant, 545 F.2d 823, 827 (2d Cir. 1976)). Thus, a Defense expert's assistance as a consultant before trial and during trial may in part be justified by the consultant's ability to provide assistance in preparing the Defense for the presentation of expert testimony. Id.

4. To demonstrate "necessity" as required by R.C.M. 703, the Defense must show "more than the 'mere possibility of assistance from a requested expert' . . . " Bresnahan, 62 M.J. 137, 143 (C.A.A.F. 2005). "The accused must show that a reasonable probability exists 'both that an expert would be of assistance to the defense and that denial of expert assistance would result in a fundamentally unfair trial.'" Bresnahan, 62 M.J. 137, 143 (C.A.A.F. 2005). In order to demonstrate the first prong of that test—that a reasonable probability exists that an expert would be of assistance to the Defense—the Defense must explain: "'(1) why the expert is necessary; (2) what the expert would accomplish for the accused; and (3) why defense counsel is unable to gather and present the evidence that the expert would be able to develop.'" United States v. Hennis, 79 M.J. 370, 382-83 (C.A.A.F. 2020) (quoting United States v. Lloyd, 69 M.J. 95, 99 (C.A.A.F. 2010) (emphasis in original).

5. Dr. Dickson is a licensed forensic psychologist with advanced training in sexual sadistic behavior and will assist CSSN Copeland in developing his theory and defense. The circumstances surrounding the allegations involving ABHAN C.R. indicates that she was into choking, however, in a sexual manner. If the defenses chooses to have Dr. Dickson testify, she can educate the members about this type of behavior associated with sexual acts and what is or is not outside the norm. Furthermore, the government alleges CSSN Copeland committed the premeditated murder of CS3 A.R. The defense has a constitutional right to present alternative theories to the members, and Dr. Dickson's consultancy is necessary to assist the defense with this. Dr. Dickson's extensive training in sexual sadistic behaviors makes her participation indispensable to perfecting a case on the merits.

6. The defense is not an expert in this subject matter. Defense counsel's formal training in this subject matter is extremely limited. Defense counsel also lack the time necessary or ability to develop such an expertise prior to trial. This type of evidence requires a level of knowledge the defense does not possess, and cannot gain in a few weeks or even months of study. Furthermore, defense is unable to present this evidence to members without the assistance of an expert witness.

7. Based on the fee schedule in enclosure (2), defense requests twenty (20) hours for pre-trial consultancy at a cost of $6,000.00. Additionally, the Defense requests Dr. Dickson's presence at trial (21 days), and one day of trial preparation, for a total of 22 days ($3,000/day x 22 days) at a cost of $66,000.00. The total amount requested by defense is approximately $72,000.00, in addition to travel expenses in accordance with Joint Travel Regulations. The defense will submit an additional request if more time is needed.

8. The defense requests that this expert be assigned as a consulting member of CSSN Copeland's defense team, such that all communication between the accused, defense counsel, and the expert are privileged and confidential pursuant to Mil. R. Evid. 502. The defense further requests that the government refrain from any substantive contact with this expert. It is understood that this limitation may be removed if the defense ultimately desires to have Dr. Dickson testify as an expert witness in this case.

9. Thank you for your careful consideration of this request. If I may provide any additional information, I am available at (757) 341-4486 or clifton.e.morgan4.mil@us.navy.mil to answer any questions about this request.

TRIAL CONSULTATION/EXPERT WITNESS FEE SCHEDULE

1. Pre-Trial Consultation Services: Case and document review, which may include but is not necessarily limited to evidence, any related case records, medical and psychological reports, military records and recordings and transcriptions of interviews is billed at $300.00 per hour. Case review, discussion and consultation with counsel, and telephonic testimony at pretrial motions hearings are included in pre-trial consultation and are also billed at $300.00 per hour. Pre-trial consultation generally takes a minimum of 8 hours to complete though this may be significantly greater depending on the complexity of the case. Evaluation of a defendant can take up to three working days. Defendant evaluation is also billed at $300.00 per hour. The number of hours for pre-trial consultation shall be agreed to in writing before work commences. If additional time is required, both parties shall agree in writing before the additional work commences. The fee for any work completed shall be paid even if the case does not ultimately go to trial.

2. Trial Consultation and Expert Testimony: All activities related to attendance at trial, including trial consultation, expert testimony and travel are billed at a daily rate of $3000.00.

3. Expenses:
   a. Round trip airfare is expected to be provided by the Government at standard government rates. Dr. Dickson will book her own air travel, which will be billed at 100% reimbursement of coach class fare.
   b. Driving will be billed at GSA POV rate.
   c. GSA per diem schedules are expected to be used to reimburse the contractor for the cost of lodging, either on a military installation or off base, as well as standard meal rates.
   d. The cost of a rental car, when allowed, will be reimbursed by the government. If a rental car is not provided, the cost of transportation to and from the airport as well as any other transportation costs shall be borne by the Government.

4. Payment: Payment is expected within 30 days of the trial and/or consultation services to the address listed above. If billing is to be handled through WAWF, the government is responsible to provide the contractor with all information needed to effect this process.

S/COPELAND, JERMIAH TAYLOR/SN USN
[redacted]

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF [redacted]

1. As background, on 26Jul24 NCISRU USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75) was notified by MA1 Ronald CORTESELLI, USN, CVN 75, of an unrestricted reported of sexual assault aboard the ship that occurred on 23Jul24 at approximately 0200 hours. MA1 CORTESELLI reported ABHAN [redacted] ([redacted] USN, CVN 75, reported CSSN Jermiah Taylor COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, CVN 75, grabbed her vulva, breasts, and buttocks over the clothing while applying pressure to her neck so that it was difficult for her to breathe.

2. On 06Aug24 at approximately 2030 hours, [redacted] was interviewed by Reporting Agent (RA) aboard CVN 75, while at sea in compartment 02-88-4-Q. IT2 Morgan RODRIGUEZ, USN, Uniform Victim Advocate (UVA), CVN 75, was present for the entirety of the interview.

3. The interview was audio and video recorded in its entirety utilizing the CaseCracker system. This report serves as a synopsis of the interview and does not necessarily describe the information in the order in which it was discussed. For a verbatim account, please refer to the digital recording; Enclosure (A) pertains.

4. [redacted] related she is in a relationship with CSSN Fernando CUESTABRAVO, USN, CVN 75, and was in the mess decks with him in the early morning hours of 23Jul24 when he stated he was going to sleep. [redacted] stated after CSSN CUESTABRAVO left, she began receiving SnapChat snaps from S/COPELAND, who stated he was headed to the ship and expressed he wanted to talk to her about CSSN CUESTABRAVO. [redacted] agreed, and stated S/COPELAND arrived and requested the pair go somewhere private to talk.

5. After arriving to the area of the fantail, S/COPELAND told [redacted] that CSSN CUESTABRAVO was talking to other women and asserted CSSN CUESTABRAVO was not treating [redacted] the way she should be treated. [redacted] related S/COPELAND suggested SHE engage in a relationship with him (S/COPELAND) to "get back at" CSSN CUESTABRAVO. [redacted] stated she told S/COPELAND she did not "do those types of things." [redacted] recalled discussing her relationship with S/COPELAND for a short period of time before S/COPELAND began to play a "game" with her wherein he pretended to arrest her. [redacted] stated S/COPELAND forced her hands behind her back and grabbed her vulva over the clothing.

6. [redacted] related she turned around and punched S/COPELAND in the stomach.

V/C.R. related S/COPLEAND told her he heard she liked to be choked, at which time S/COPELAND applied pressure to her neck with one hand so that it was difficult for V/C.R. to breathe. V/C.R. recalled pushing S/COPELAND's hand away from her throat but that he would immediately replace it and keep applying pressure. While applying pressure to her neck, V/C.R. recalled S/COPELAND kissed her on the lips and grabbed her breasts, buttocks, and vulva over the clothing. V/C.R. related the physical contact lasted approximately a minute before S/COPELAND stopped of his own accord. V/C.R. stated she told S/COPELAND she was going to bed and left the fantail.

7. V/C.R. recalled being unsure if she should tell CSSN CUESTABRAVO because she was worried about his reaction, but texted him about what happened. V/C.R. stated CSSN CUESTABRAVO encouraged her to report the incident. V/C.R. stated she called the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response (SAPR) phone number she found on a poster aboard the ship, and was informed to get in touch with shipboard SAPR personnel. V/C.R. stated she did not know how, so CSSN CUESTABRAVO reported the incident to Security. V/C.R. stated she had bruising on her neck that CSSN CUESTABRAVO observed, but that it was now gone.

8. V/C.R. stated she told her Chief, CSC Gregory SIMMONS, USN, CVN 75, about the incident. V/C.R. related CSSN Jalen OWENS, USN, CVN 75, told CSSN CUESTABRAVO that S/COPELAND told her (CSSN OWENS) that V/C.R. had reported him.

9. V/C.R. provided RA screen shots of the texts she sent to CSSN CUESTABRAVA via Air Drop, and signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) denoting her consent; Enclosure (B) pertains. The screen shots were subsequently placed on an NCIS Photographic Template for inclusion into the case file; Enclosure (C) pertains.

11. At the conclusion of the interview, V/C.R. was provided a DD Form 2701 Victim Witness Assistance Pamphlet (VWAP).

UNOFFICIAL TRANSCRIPT EXCERPT
ABHAN [redacted] USN INTERVIEW DATED 6 AUGUST 2024

00:09:21: [redacted] And then so after that, he was like, oh, yeah, you know, you should like, get back at him. And I was like, oh, I don't do this. I don't do stuff like that. And he's like, well, you should. And he's like, well, I'm the first person you should get back at him with and he's like me [sic]. And I was like, like for what? And I was like, I don't do stuff like that. And then after that then like a little later, like after he was talking, he started like, he got in my face, he got close to me, whatever. And then like I pushed him because I don't like people in my face, like close up to me. So I like pushed him away and he was like "push me again and push me again." And he kept coming in my face. And then like after that he grabbed me or whatever. And then like he put his hand like he asked me, he's like, "Do you like being choked?" I was like, "Who told you something like that?" And he said "Nobody." And then like after that, like he put his hand around my neck and then like I tried to get his hand off my neck and he like kept going. And like I go to the push him and he was like "keep pushing me. and I'm going to keep going harder." So then I kept squeezing it and he started like touching my areas, too.

00:10:37: Special Agent: So we don't have to use any which your comfortable with, but I'm just trying to establish...So when you say areas, you're showing me your breasts?

00:10:42: [redacted] (Indicates yes).

00:10:43: Special Agent: OK, over the clothes, under the clothes, something else?

00:10:46: [redacted] Over the clothes.

00:10:47: Special Agent: Anywhere besides your breasts?

00:10:48: [redacted] (Indicates yes)

00:10:48: Special Agent: Where?

00:10:49: [redacted] Like my front and back.

00:10:51: Special Agent: Oh, OK. So was he like touching your vulva like over the clothes and then also your buttocks as well?

00:10:56: [redacted] (Indicates yes)

00:10:58: Special Agent: OK, like running his hands over? Is he grabbing? Can you like describe that?

00:11:02 [redacted] Like, just like grabbing.

****

00:12:31: Special Agent: So you said that he had his hands around on your neck and it really hurt. Ok it sounds like he was applying a lot of pressure. Was it just one hand, Two hands?

00:12:40: [redacted] One.

00:12:41: Special Agent: One hand. OK. And were you able to breathe during that period of time?

00:12:47: [redacted] Not like a lot, like just a little.

00:12:50: Special Agent: OK, this is going to sound like a strange question, but what did your body feel like at that time?

00:12:55: V/C.R. I feel like I couldn't like - my nose hurt - like it felt like i had something in it.

On 29 July 2025, CAPT Derek Butler, JAGC, USN, CDR Lauren Mayo, JAGC, USN, and LT Christopher Dempsey, JAGC, USN, interviewed Dr. Lameira, in the presence of LN1 Kathleen Vanetti, USN, Mr. Rob Robinson, Norfolk ME, and Dr. Wendy Gunther, Assistant Chief Medical Examiner. The following is a summary of the interaction and is not intended to be verbatim:

Dr. Lameira reported that due to the level of decomposition of, and post-mortem insect activity on, the body of V/A.R., no definitive cause of death could be discerned. Dr. Lameira was able to rule out stomping, stabbing, shooting, and a drug overdose as possible causes of death. She specified that the toxicology test only tested for specific drugs, but the lab was likely able to have additional testing done for specific prescriptions being taken by V/A.R upon request. Additionally, the toxicology report showed a BAC of .083 at the time of death.

Dr. Lameira noted that there was not enough remaining soft tissue on the body to indicate or rule out asphyxia as a cause of death. The only noted broken bones were ribs #2-5, which would not be consistent with attempts at CPR. There was not enough tissue left in the neck area to indicate whether there was any blood pooling in that area. The fallopian tubes and uterus were unremarkable with no indications of a pregnancy. There were no indications of any chronic conditions that would lead to a natural death and Dr. Lameira opined it would be unlikely for someone V/A.R.'s age to suffer a natural death.

It was explained that the alcohol ethenyl level, generally considered the BAC, could have been elevated by insect activity that creates yeast. No results had come back on the buccal and anal swabs that were conducted during the autopsy, and vaginal swabs were not conducted due to the lack of soft tissue resulting from decomposition and insect activity. Dr. Lameira explained that insect activity and decomposition generally begin in body openings (eyes, ears, mouth, nose, etc.) and areas where skin is pressed together (buttocks, below breasts, arms crossed, etc.). She opined that the folded position of the body in the duffel bag created the skin-to-skin pressure points on the chest that became areas of accelerated decomposition, in comparison to the other areas of the torso.

When asked, Dr. Lameira stated that there was not enough soft tissue on the body to determine whether there were any injuries to the body that would have been bleeding before death. Dr. Lameira explained that up to a liter of "purge" can be expelled post-mortem through the nose and mouth and appears red in color. "Purge" was explained as the fluid in the lungs and surrounding tissue that leaks out of the nose and mouth post-mortem, and can become further dislodged from the body if the body is moved.

When asked, Dr. Lameira stated that rigor mortis sets in within about 12 hours after death and opined that the body was likely placed into the duffel bag prior to the onset of rigor mortis. Dr. Lameira concured with Dr. Gunter that it was not unusual for people to mistake dead bodies for living people.

Encl: (1) Curriculum Vitae of Ms. Daniela LaValva
(2) Fee Letter

1. Pursuant to references (a) through (h), CSSN Copeland, through counsel, requests the government to appoint Ms. LaValva as a mitigation expert consultant to the defense team to assist in the preparation of its case, in accordance with Uniform Code of Military Justice (U.C.M.J.), Article 46; Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 703; United States v. Ford, 51 M.J. 445 (C.A.A.F. 1999) and United States v. Toledo, 25 M.J. 270 (C.M.A. 1987).[1] CSSN Copeland further requests that Ms. LaValva be designated as a member of the defense team bound by the attorney-client privilege, in accordance with Military Rule of Evidence (M.R.E.) 502(a) and other applicable federal laws and regulations.

2. Law. Under the Sixth Amendment, CSSN Copeland has the right to the effective assistance of counsel and the right to present a defense. In order to adequately represent CSSN Copeland, he requires more than the advocacy skills of his attorney. This includes "the right to present a defense by means of confrontation, cross-examination and going forward with a presentation of its own evidence." United States v. Allen, 31 M.J. 572. The right to present evidence "necessarily includes the right to prepare." Id. As stated above, military due process consequently "entitles a service member to the assistance of an expert when necessary to the preparation of an adequate defense." Id. (quoting United States v. Garries, 22 M.J. 288 (C.M.A. 1986)). Congress guaranteed, through the UCMJ, that the parties to a court-martial "shall have equal opportunity to obtain witnesses and other evidence." Article 46, U.C.M.J. Under this scheme, service members are entitled to expert assistance when such assistance is necessary in mounting an adequate defense. Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 76-83 (1985) (holding, when necessary, due process requires appointment of a government expert). Importantly, the entitlement for an accused to expert assistance "is not limited to actual expert testimony at trial." United States v. Lee, 64 M.J. 213, 217 (C.A.A.F. 2006). The Kreutzer Court held that defense counsel who failed to conduct a sufficient investigation into the background of the accused for sentencing were ineffective, thus requiring the sentence to be set aside.

[1] In United States v. Kreutzer, 70 M.J. 444 (C.A.A.F. 2012), C.A.A.F. upheld an Army Court of Criminal Appeals decision in which a majority of the Court held that the military judge's erroneous denial of the Appellant's request for an expert in mitigation, required relief- in the form of setting aside all contested findings.

To avail himself or herself of this right, an accused—through defense counsel—must submit a request for an expert to the convening authority, supported by "a statement of reasons why the employment of the expert is necessary." R.C.M. 703(d). Both references (b) and (c) provide the structure for evaluating requests for expert consultants and witnesses.

The Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces has held that RCM 703(d) authorizes employment of experts to assist the defense at government expense when they are relevant and necessary. The Court established a three-prong test to determine the necessity of a requested expert:

1. Why is the expert needed;
2. What would the expert accomplish for the defense; and
3. Why is the defense unable to gather and present the evidence that the expert assistant would be able to develop?

3. Factual Background. CSSN Copeland is charged with four specifications of violations of Article 120 (sexual assault), a violation of Article 128 (assault consummated by a battery), two specifications of violations of Article 120c (indecent recording/broadcasting), three specifications of violations of Article 131b (obstruction of justice), two specifications of violations of Article 128b (domestic violence), two specifications of violations of Article 107 (false official statement), and a violation of Article 118 (premeditated murder). If CSSN Copeland is convicted of premeditated murder, he is facing a minimum sentence of life with the possibility of parole and a maximum punishment of life without the possibility of parole.

4. Why an Expert is needed and What the Expert would accomplish for the defense?

Ms. LaValva brings years of experience working on death penalty cases and an understanding of what factors are mitigating and where best to unearth those mitigating factors. While the defense can conduct a cursory examination of the accused and speak to his family, the defense is not positioned to conduct the required in-depth background analysis of the accused to present the most effective sentencing case possible. The allegations in the case are the most severe under the UCMJ and CSSN Copeland has a right to present an affective case in mitigation. The assistance of this expert is not hypothetical, Ms. LaValva knows where to find this information, knows how to present the information, and knows how to best assist the defense team in creating an effective and persuasive case in mitigation.

5. Why counsel cannot perform such duties. The defense counsel detailed to CSSN Copeland are experienced litigators but are not experts in mitigation. As C.A.A.F. has recognized, cases involving the possibility of substantial confinement or the death penalty require a greater emphasis on the employment and research of mitigation tools. Ms. LaValva will help focus the defense team on areas which may provide the best mitigation evidence, her knowledge and ability to provide this input comes directly from experience and training that defense counsel cannot acquire prior to trial. While the detailed counsel will diligently prepare and continue to educate themselves, CSSN Copeland requires the assistance of specially trained assistance while he faces the prospect of being confined for the remainder of his natural life. Ms. LaValva will assist the defense in ensuring more than simply "sufficient" effort has been applied to CSSN Copeland's particular case. CSSN Copeland cannot get a fair sentencing proceeding without the assistance of a mitigation specialist who can gather the evidence necessary to present to the members to ensure they have a full understanding of CSSN Copeland's rehabilitative potential and all of the mitigating circumstances surrounding the alleged offenses.

6. Cost. Enclosure (2) is Ms. LaValva's fee schedule. Her rate for professional consulting is $250.00 an hour for all work including team, client work, field investigations, record collection, and others. The defense requests thirty (30) hours of pre-trial assistance, at a total cost of $7,500.00. Further, the defense request travel at the government rate to conduct an investigation and meet with CSSN Copeland in-person.

7. The defense requests that the expert consultant be viewed as a member of the defense team such that all communications between the expert consultant and the accused and his counsel will be viewed as confidential. The defense further requests that the government not have any conversations or other interaction with the requested expert consultant in relation to this case except for any administrative communications in securing their assistance for the defense. The defense understands this limitation may be removed if the defense eventually desires to have the expert testify in the case.

8. Ms. LaValva's assistance is relevant and necessary to providing CSSN Copeland with a case in mitigation that goes beyond merely being "sufficient." Should you have any questions or require any additional information, please contact me at amanda.m.serfess.mil@us.navy.mil or 850-452-5572.

RE: Mitigation request

To Whom it may Concern,

I am writing to provide a response to the request for Metis Group, LLC, specifically Daniela LaValva, LCSW to provide services for the purposes of mitigation for your client.

Metis Group, LLC fee scale delineated below if for providing a written document. Fees related to providing testimony will be provided as needed.

Reports will require 15-20 hours of work at the rate of $250/hour. Travel time, if needed, is not included and a separate fee schedule arranged.

An invoice of services will be provided to the assigned attorney at the completion of the report.

Should a report be determined to not be needed or completed, a bill for time spent preparing for the report will be submitted to the assigned attorney.

The invoice will include hours worked with an itemized list of tasks completed.

Thank you,

Daniela LaValva

(j) Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 76-83 (1985)

Encl: (1) Dr. Banerjee CV
(2) Dr. Banerjee Fee Schedule

1. Pursuant to references (a) through (h), CSSN Jermiah Copeland, through counsel, requests the government to appoint Dr. Priya Banerjee as a forensic pathology expert consultant to the defense team to assist in the preparation of its case, in accordance with Uniform Code of Military Justice (U.C.M.J.), Article 46; Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 703; United States v. Ford, 51 M.J. 445 (C.A.A.F. 1999) and United States v. Toledo, 25 M.J. 270 (C.M.A. 1987). CSSN Copeland further requests that the forensic pathologist be designated as a member of the defense team bound by the attorney-client privilege, in accordance with Military Rule of Evidence (M.R.E.) 502(a) and other applicable federal laws and regulations.

2. Law. Under the Sixth Amendment, CSSN Copeland has the right to the effective assistance of counsel and the right to present a defense. In order to adequately represent CSSN Copeland, he requires more than the advocacy skills of his attorney. This includes "the right to present a defense by means of confrontation, cross-examination and going forward with a presentation of its own evidence." United States v. Allen, 31 M.J. 572. The right to present evidence "necessarily includes the right to prepare." Id. As stated above, military due process consequently "entitles a service member to the assistance of an expert when necessary to the preparation of an adequate defense." Id. (quoting United States v. Garries, 22 M.J. 288 (C.M.A. 1986)). Congress guaranteed, through the UCMJ, that the parties to a court-martial "shall have equal opportunity to obtain witnesses and other evidence." Article 46, U.C.M.J. Under this scheme, service members are entitled to expert assistance when such assistance is necessary in mounting an adequate defense. Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 76-83 (1985) (holding, when necessary, due process requires appointment of a government expert). Importantly, the entitlement for an accused to expert assistance "is not limited to actual expert testimony at trial." United States v.

Lee, 64 M.J. 213, 217 (C.A.A.F. 2006).

To avail himself or herself of this right, an accused—through defense counsel—must submit a request for an expert to the convening authority, supported by "a statement of reasons why the employment of the expert is necessary." R.C.M. 703(d). Both references (b) and (c) provide the structure for evaluating requests for expert consultants and witnesses.

The Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces has held that RCM 703(d) authorizes employment of experts to assist the defense at government expense when they are relevant and necessary. The Court established a three-prong test to determine the necessity of a requested expert:

1. Why is the expert needed;
2. What would the expert accomplish for the defense; and
3. Why is the defense unable to gather and present the evidence that the expert assistant would be able to develop?

3. Factual Background. CSSN Copeland is charged with the premeditated murder of CSSN A.R., among a myriad of other charges. During the ensuing investigation into the death of CSSN A.R., the Government performed medical tests and examinations on the deceased, resulting in scientific and medical reports regarding the evidence. The Government has secured the assistance of an expert, Dr. Fernanda Lemeira and will surely be using Dr. Lemeira's skill, knowledge, experience and expertise in the Government's case against CSSN Copeland. CSSN Copeland requires the assistance of Dr. Banerjee to meet and test the evidence that will be presented against him in order to ensure a full and fair trial on the merits.

4. Why an Expert is needed and What the Expert would accomplish for the defense?

At trial the Government will necessarily present medical evidence and scientific testimony as evidence against CSSN Copeland. The Defense must be afforded the opportunity prepare for, meet, and counter the Government's evidence. Dr. Banerjee will assist the Defense in analyzing evidence and reports, the techniques and procedures used, and the testimony of the Government's witnesses.

Dr. Banerjee will provide the Defense with expert opinions and assessments of the evidence that are constitutionally required to confront the Government's evidence in defense of CSSN Copeland. She has skills, education, training, and experience that the attorneys for CSSN Copeland cannot hope to attain- even through diligent effort- prior to trial. Her assistance is essential and required for a full and fair trial.

The evidence provided in discovery indicates that the cause of death for CSSN A.R. remains "undetermined." The nature of this assessment indicates that the Government will be pursuing a theory that, though cause of death is undetermined, CSSN Copeland was responsible for her death. Dr. Banerjee's training, education and experience will help the defense team probe alternate theories of death, different possible causes of death, and counter the evidence presented by the Government's experts. These are not hypothetical results of this expert's work on the case- they are actual tangible assistance directly related to the Defense's theory of the case.

Dr. Banerjee's assistance will be required and utilized throughout litigation of pretrial legal and evidentiary issues as well as during trial on the merits. Her assistance, and its necessity to the Defense team cannot be understated.

5. Why counsel cannot perform such duties. The rapid growth in forensic science techniques at trial may make cases more complex than general practitioners can handle on their own. United States v. McAllister, 55 M.J. 270, 275 (2001); United States v. Warner, 62 M.J. 114, 118 (C.A.A.F. 2005). No member of the defense is an expert in the field of forensic pathology. Although counsel have and will continue to diligently research these areas, they cannot realistically be expected to attain the level of competency required to challenge and evaluate a Government's experts or challenge and evaluate the Government's evidence. Without the ability to consult with its own expert, the Defense would not be able to adequately represent CSSN Copeland within the meaning of the Sixth Amendment or the UCMJ.

6. Adequate government substitute. The Defense is not aware of an acceptable governmental substitute that has comparable qualifications, education or experience to that of Dr. Banerjee.

7. Cost. Enclosure (2) is Dr. Banerjee's fee schedule. Her rate for professional consulting is $850 per hour and trial participation rate of $10,000 per day. We have estimated that she will need 30 hours for pre-trial consultancy at a cost of $25,500.00, and trial participation for 22 days at a cost of $220,000.00. The defense requests a total authorization of $245,500.00, not including travel expenses to be reimbursed in accordance with the Joint Travel Regulations. Dr. Banerjee is currently available for the scheduled trial dates and is already enrolled within the federal payment system.

8. The Defense requests that the expert consultant be viewed as a member of the Defense team such that all communications between the expert consultant and the accused and his counsel will be viewed as confidential. The Defense further requests that the Government not have any conversations or other interaction with the requested expert consultant in relation to this case except for any administrative communications in securing their assistance for the Defense. The Defense understands this limitation may be removed if the defense eventually desires to have the expert testify in the case.

9. Dr. Banerjee's assistance is relevant and necessary to providing CSSN Copeland with an adequate defense to the charges. Should you have any questions or require any additional information, please contact me at `todd.m.mihill.mil@us.navy.mil` or 571-369-8409.

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. CSSN JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3, USN	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTION TO COMPEL WITNESS PRODUCTION 5 December 2025

MOTION

Pursuant to Rule for Courts-Martial (R.C.M.) 703, the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny Defense's Motion to compel production of CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN, Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez, and Dr. Nemanja Rodic.

FACTS

CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN

1. CS3 V/A.R. the decedent, was a sailor on board the USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95).[1]

2. CSSN Junrogel Miguel is currently a sailor on board USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS and was a friend to both CS3 V/A.R. and her ex-boyfriend, HT3 Michael Gillespie, USN.[2]

3. CSSN Junrogel Miguel describes his relationship with CS3 V/A.R. as close and they would socialize when he was not on restriction.[3]

4. CSSN Migel is aware that CS3 V/A.R. sought treatment for mental health and took medication prior to her death.[4]

Mr. Brian Telez, USN

5.Mr. Telez received an Instagram message from CS3 V/A.R. in May 2025.[5]

6. The Instagram message expressed her displeasure with her command.[6]

7. Dr. Rodic is a pathologist who conducted a secondary autopsy on the body of CS3 V/A.R. weeks after the Norfolk Medical Examiner conducted the official autopsy.

8. When asked if the findings of his secondary autopsy were consistent with asphyxiation, Dr. Rodic explained it was possible or probable.[7]

BURDEN OF PROOF

1. The Defense, as the moving party, bears the burden of persuasion and the burden of proof on any factual issue, the resolution of which is necessary to decide the motion, by a preponderance of the evidence. R.C.M. 905(c)(1)-(2).

LAW

R.C.M. 703(a) and Art. 46, UCMJ, provide that the parties to a court-martial "shall have equal opportunity to obtain witnesses."[8] R.C.M. 703(b)(1) provides "[e]ach party is entitled to the production of any witness whose testimony on a matter in issue on the merits or on an interlocutory question would be relevant and necessary."[9] "Evidence is relevant if: (a) it has a tendency to make a fact more or less probable than it would be without the evidence; and (b) the fact is of consequence in determining the action."[10] Evidence is "necessary" when it is not cumulative and contributes to a party's presentation of the case in some positive way on a matter in issue.[11]

ARGUMENT

I. CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN Should Not Be Produced Because His Testimony Regarding the Victim's Mental Health and Medication Is Irrelevant, Speculative, and Lacks Personal Knowledge

A. CSSN Miguel Is Not a Mental-Health Professional and Cannot Offer Opinions on Medication or Mental Health

The defense requests production of a lay witness who is "aware" that a CS3 A.R. suffered from "mental health issues" and whose proposed testimony concerns how the victim's medication needed to be monitored. This testimony is not relevant, lacks proper foundation, and does not satisfy the requirements for production under R.C.M. 703.

This individual is not a psychologist, psychiatrist, counselor, physician, pharmacist, or any other type of mental-health or medical professional. He has no clinical training or expertise that would allow him to discuss: the purpose of the victim's medication, the side effects, whether it requires "monitoring," or how it might relate to any fact at issue in this case. CS3 A.R.'s autopsy found no evidence of a prescription drug overdose.[12]

[10] R.C.M. 401
[11] Discussion, R.C.M. 703(b)(1)
[12] Encl 4

Under M.R.E. 701, a lay witness may testify only to matters within their personal perception. They may not offer opinions "based on scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge"—and medication management or effects of prescription medication is plainly specialized knowledge. Because this witness cannot satisfy M.R.E. 701 or 702, he cannot provide admissible opinion testimony on mental-health conditions or pharmaceutical monitoring.

B. The Proposed Testimony Is Irrelevant Under M.R.E. 401 and 402 and fails the M.R.E. 403 balancing test.

Understanding that CSSN Miguel lacks these qualifications, Defense nonetheless asks this Court to produce him as witness because he will somehow provide admissible evidence leading members to the Defense theory that CS3 A.R. committed suicide. Defense asks this Court to allow a junior sailor testify as to his awareness of his friend's deceased ex-girlfriend's mental health and medication history and opine as to her "episodes." Under no circumstance is the evidence admissible or relevant, but it is, however, highly inflammatory and fails the M.R.E. 403 balancing test. Without a showing of relevance, production is improper. R.C.M. 703 does not require the Government to produce witnesses who will offer inadmissible, speculative, or irrelevant testimony.

II. Mr. Brian Telez. Should Not Be Produced Because His Testimony Regarding the Victim's Mental Health Is Irrelevant and Inadmissible.

Defense asks this Court to produce Mr. Telez so he may testify about comments CS3 A.R. made to him nine days before her death on Instagram. Notwithstanding this testimony would be composed entirely of inadmissible hearsay for which no exception exists – this testimony is also irrelevant.

III. Dr. Nemanja Rodic Testimony Is Inadmissible Because Its Only Relevance is Cumulative With the Testimony of Dr. Lameira.

Dr. Rodic performed a second autopsy 18 days after CS3 A.R.'s first autopsy. Dr. Rodic's autopsy was limited as he examined the body after a prior autopsy, after embalming, without any associated documentation to write his review and after marked tissue degradation and loss prior to the first autopsy.[13] He stated he deferred his designating a manner of death because of these limitations.[14] Nonetheless, Defense argues this witness is relevant and necessary based in part on poorly captured voice to text transcription of a call between the CS3 A.R.'s mother and Dr. Rodic. Nonetheless when interviewed on 22 October 2025, Dr. Rodic stated that asphyxiation was a possible or probable cause of death.[15] His testimony is cumulative with Dr. Lameira, the Virginia Commonwealth Medical Examiner.

RELIEF REQUESTED

2. The Government respectfully requests that the Court deny the Defense's motion to compel expert assistance of production of CSSN Junrogel Miguel, USN, Mr. Brian Teelez Mendez, and Dr. Nemanja Rodic as discussed above.

ORAL ARGUMENT

3. The Government requests oral argument in response to any Defense oral argument.

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF CSSN JUNROGEL MIGUEL, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and participating Agent (PA) Lisa CARROLL conducted an interview of CSSN Junrojel MIGUEL, USN, James E. Williams (DDG 95), in regard to the above caption investigation.

2. The interview of CSSN MIGUEL was recorded using an audio/visual recording system, and a digital copy was downloaded onto a Digital Video Disc-Recordable (DVD-R). This document is a summary of the interview and not a verbatim transcription. For full details of the interview, refer to the working copy of the original DVD-R; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. CSSN Miguel stated he met CSSN V/A.R. (V/ V/A.R. , USN, DDG 95, while working in the galley. CSSN MIGUEL reported that he and V/ V/A.R. became very close friends in JAN25, to the extent V/ V/A.R. started referring to him as her brother. CSSN MIGUEL explained that he and V/ V/A.R. only socialize when he is not on restriction. When hanging out V V/A.R. would often invite CSSN MIGUEL and CSSN Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG 95, to her barracks room. CSSN MIGUEL stated V/ V/A.R. and CSSN GILLESPIE began dating in late MAY24, and their relationship ended in DEC24.

4. CSSN MIGUEL described the relationship between V/A.R. and CSSN GILLESPIE as a being like soulmates. CSSN MIGUEL noted they understood each other deeply, shared similar emotions, and were extremely compatible. CSSN MIGUEL said the relationship between CSSN GILLESPIE and V/A.R. because their personalities did not align. CSSN MIGUEL added that V/A.R. initiated the breakup to focus on herself, which CSSN GILLESPIE agreed to. CSSN MIGUEL that he often served a bridge between the two. According to CSSN MIGUEL, V/A.R. would sometimes states how she misses CSSN GILLESPIE during conversations.

5. CSSN MIGUEL described V/A.R. as a very emotional person with a traumatic past. CSSN MIGUEL recalled that in MAY24, V/A.R. went to the bar alone, became intoxicated and later mention having an "episode". When asked CSSN MIGUEL what he meant by "episodes" he clarified that V/A.R. has had mental health episodes. CSSN MIGUEL stated V/A.R. would occasionally have episodes where she seemed mentally detached or unresponsive. During these times, she would start looking around and stop replying to everyone. CSSN MIGUEL noted CSSN GILLESPIE would have to constantly talk to her to bring her back to reality. Since knowing her, CSSN MIGUEL stated he witnessed three such episodes. He confirmed that V/A.R.

takes medication but have to be closely monitored to avoid her from overdosing. CSSN MIGUEL emphasizes V/A.R. has a traumatic family history, which could explain her mental health challenges.

6. CSSN MIGUEL stated while he was on restriction, V/A.R. failed to show up for work, when he was released from restriction and retrieved his phone back, he noticed a text message from V/A.R. thanking him for his support and friendship. Once off restriction, CSSN MIGUEL reconnected with CSSN GILLESPIE and was excited to see him. CSSN GILLESPIE told CSSN MIGUEL, V/A.R. was no longer communicating with him, possibly because she was unsure about continuing a relationship with either ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95, or CSSN GILLESPIE. CSSN GILLESPIE advised CSSN MIGUEL he asked V/A.R. about returning his motorcycle helmet. CSSN MIGUEL also reported CSSN GILLESPIE advised him V/A.R. was missing. CSSN MIGUEL stated he was already aware of the information after overhearing a conversation at work. CSSN MIGUEL stated he overheard that V/A.R. had last been seen with CSSN Jeremiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, in his barracks room, as reported by command. CSSN GILLESPIE also told CSSN MIGUEL that V/A.R. had expressed a desire to leave the Navy, which CSSN MIGUEL initially took as a joke. However, CSSN MIGUEL began to feel that things he was hearing were not adding up. He concluded that if someone doesn't want to be found, as V/A.R. appeared to be, by not answering calls or texts, it is likely because they don't want to be found.

7. CSSN MIGUEL advised his last official conversation with V/A.R. was 24MAY25. At the conclusion of the interview CSSN MIGUEL signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure to obtain copies of the text messages between him and V/A.R. Enclosure (B) pertains. CSSN MIGUEL provided RA with five (5) screenshot photos of text messages between him and CSSN V/A.R. all of which were placed on a CD-R; Enclosure (C) pertains. Five (5) photos were placed on a photo template; Enclosure (D) pertains.

8. There is nothing further to report.

On 22 October 2025, LT Christopher Dempsey, JAGC, USN interviewed Dr. Nemanja Rodic in the presence of LN2 Jocelyn M Gomez, USN. The following is a summary of the interaction and is not intended to be verbatim:

Dr. Rodic stated that when his office received the body to conduct an autopsy, the remains were contained in a clear bag. Inside of that bag was a pool of colored fluid with a strong odor. It was Dr. Rodic's opinion that this fluid was an alcohol-based preservative or other embalming fluid that contained a dilute of alcohol deformaline. Dr. Rodic was not sure exactly how the military or mortuary service would have packaged or preserved the remains prior to his examination or what chemicals specifically were used.

Dr. Rodic explained that this fluid was undoubtedly what caused the high level of alcohol found in the remains of the deceased. The results were too high to be clinically relevant, indicating that the fluid is what caused the high result.

Dr. Rodic did not see an indication of blunt force trauma or sharp force trauma on the remains, although the autopsy was not extremely thorough. Dr. Rodic also explained that the remains were also decomposed.

When asked if the findings were consistent with asphyxiation, Dr. Rodic explained it was possible or probable. He explained that natural causes were a dubious suggestion given the age and purported fitness of the deceased. He believed it was likely one of three mechanisms of death: (1) asphyxiation; (2) blunt force trauma for which any evidence had decomposed; or (3) termination of life due to ingestion of alcohol. Dr. Rodic clarified that he had no significant evidence to suggest intoxication from alcohol was the cause of death because the numbers he had recorded were incorrectly inflated by the fluid in the bag. As such, without additional evidence he could not say if that was a probable cause of death.

Mr. Dempsey,

It is my real that I did not consider designating strangulation as possible/probable mechanics/mode of death in this case. It is my recall that I deferred from designating manner of death herein, because my examination was limited by prior autopsy, prior embalming, lack of any documents in writing for review, and marked tissue degeneration/loss prior to the autopsy. For example, some parts of both acral and truncal soft tissue and bones were absent at the time of my examination.

With respect,
Dr. Rodic

Subject: Follow-Up Questions - US v. Copeland
Good Afternoon Dr. Rodic,

The victim's family provided us with a rough transcript of a phone call you had with them back when you reported your findings (attached). I do not have a recording, just this transcript. This has raised a couple of questions I attribute to poor automated transcription. I know we spoke previously and addressed these, but I want to run them to ground just to be sure:

1. Were the findings consistent with strangulation as a potential cause of death?

2. At one point, the transcript says that "foul play" related to "trauma" can be ruled out. Is that correct? If so, what do you mean by that?

Thank you! I am also happy to discuss on the phone if preferred. Please just let me know a time that works for you.

Very Respectfully,

New Protocol, Reporting Protocol for the Examination of Gross Autopsy of Adult Decedents
Autopsy.Adult_1.0.0.0.REL_CAPCP
Protocol Implementation: December 2024

An autopsy was performed on the body of V/A.R. on the 28th day of June, 2025.

CONSENT FOR AUTOPSY

Consented and reviewed by Dr. Nemanja RODIC. Consenter was, Esmeralda CASTLE. The relationship of the individual, providing consent for autopsy, to the decedent is mother. Type of autopsy was complete, including brain.

PRIOR POSTMORTEM PROCEDURES

Following macroscopic examination there was NO EVIDENCE of organ donation. Following macroscopic examination there was EVIDENCE of prior autopsy.

EXTERNAL EXAMINATION

The body was that of a well-developed & well-nourished female. The body weighed about 120 pounds, was 4 feet 5 inches in height, and appeared compatible with the reported age of 21 years [calculated body mass index 20.6(1)]. There were no personal effects identified. The body was cold. The body was in state of late decomposition marked by skin discoloration, desquamation, and skeletonization. Rigor and lividity designation deferred. The scalp hair was black. The eye examination deferred. The nose examination deferred. The lips examination deferred. Some upper and lower teeth were present with good dental hygiene. Dentures were not present. The skin was free of any significant abrasions, bruises, lacerations, lymphadenopathy, or burns. Examination of the neck revealed no evidence of injury. No injury of the ribs or sternum was evident externally; negative for deformity and increased anterior-posterior diameter. The abdomen was grossly unremarkable. The extremities were grossly unremarkable. Leg circumference 10 cm from medial malleolus were, 20 cm on the right, and 20 cm on the left. Negative for pitting edema. The fingernails examination deferred. Negative for palpable lymph nodes. Negative for joint deformity, abnormal mobility, and non-therapeutic punctures or needles track marks. The external genitalia were those of a normal adult female. The posterior torso was without note; negative for sacral decubitus ulcer. Negative for tenting of skin. Negative for sunken eyes.

EVIDENCE OF THERAPY:

ID band with decedent name and case number (T-246-25 T2025-00840) were identified on patient body bag and bilateral lower extremities. Negative for nasogastric tube, central venous line, intravenous line, PEG tube, endotracheal tube, and Foley catheter.

INTERNAL EXAMINATION

BODY CAVITIES:

The body was re-opened by the usual Y-shaped thoraco-abdominal incision and the chest plate was removed. No adhesions nor abnormal collections of fluid were present in any of the body cavities. The subcutaneous fat layer of the abdominal wall was less than 1" thick. There were no abnormalities of the omentum and mesenteries. There was no internal evidence of blunt force or penetrating injury to the thoraco-abdominal region.

CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

The head was normocephalic. External examination revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for dry surface of the galea. The dura showed no lesions. The leptomeninges showed no lesions. The cerebral hemispheres were symmetrical and showed no lesions. The brain base showed no lesions. The cerebellum showed no lesions. The brainstem showed no lesions. The superior spinal cord showed no lesions. The eyes were not submitted for microscopic examination.

NECK:

Examination of the soft tissues of the neck, including strap muscles, thyroid gland and large vessels revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. Negative for trauma of the gingiva, lips, or oral mucosa.

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM:

The epicardial fat was mild. The coronary ostia were normally positioned. The foramen ovale was closed. The coronary arteries arose normally, followed the usual distribution and were free of grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis of the right coronary artery, left common/main coronary artery, left anterior descending artery, and circumflex artery. The chambers, valves, leaflets, and chordae tendinae exhibited the usual size-position relationship and were unremarkable. The myocardium was red-brown, firm and unremarkable; the atrial and ventricular septa were intact; negative for infarcts/lesions of the myocardium. The endocardium was smooth and thin; negative endocardial hemorrhages and endocardial discoloration. The aorta was fairly elastic and of even caliber throughout with its major branches distributed normally, followed the usual course and were widely patent. Negative for significant abdominal/thoracic aorta atherosclerosis. Negative for tortuosity or widening of the thoracic segment. Negative for dilation of the lower abdominal segment. Negative for aortic aneurysm. The venae cavae and their major tributaries returned to the heart in the usual distribution and were free of thrombi. No focal endocardial, valvular, and myocardial lesions were seen.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM:

Scant secretions were found in the lower bronchial and upper respiratory passages. The mucosa has pink-tan postmortem discoloration. The upper airway was clear of debris and foreign material; the mucosal surfaces were smooth, yellow-tan and unremarkable. The pleural surfaces were smooth, glistening, well-expanded, and unremarkable bilaterally. Lungs were atelectatic and subcrepitant. The pulmonary parenchyma was red-purple in color, congested, and edematous. There was dependent congestion and postmortem softening. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions/scarring. The pulmonary arteries were normally developed The bronchi were patent with no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The lungs were cut fresh.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM:

The hepatic capsule was smooth, glistening and intact, covering dark red-brown parenchyma with minimal congestion. Serial sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The extrahepatic biliary tree was patent, without evidence of calculi. The gallbladder was present and showed thin wall, velvety mucosa, and no calculi. The portal vein, hepatic arteries, and hepatic veins were patent.

ALIMENTARY TRACT:

The mucosa was pink-tan with normal mucosal folds. No tablets or capsules could be discerned in the stomach or the stomach contents. No residual medications were identified. The external and in situ appearance of the small intestine and colon were grossly and palpably unremarkable. The small intestine and colon were opened along the anti-mesenteric border to reveal soft liquid fecal material in the small bowel and soft semi-formed, thick green stool in the colon. The small bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The vermiform appendix was grossly and palpably unremarkable. The large bowel showed usual caliber, tan pink shiny serosa, and tan peri-circumferential mucosa; negative for grossly identifiable and palpable lesions. The distal large bowel contents were stool. The superior mesenteric artery was free of grossly identifiable and palpable atherosclerosis. The pancreas occupied a normal position, had a normal pink-tan lobulated parenchyma, and the ducts were patent, not ectatic. No parenchymal calcifications; negative for necrosis or trauma.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM:

The red-brown surface of renal capsules were rough and uneven to touch. The ureters were patent. The renal arteries showed no grossly identifiable or palpable atherosclerosis. The cortices were sharply delineated from the medullary pyramids, which were red-purple to tan and unremarkable. The calyces, pelves and ureters were unremarkable. The urinary bladder contained minimal urine; the mucosa was gray-tan and grossly unremarkable.

LYMPHORETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM:

The spleen had a smooth, intact capsule covering red-purple, moderately firm parenchyma; the lymphoid follicles were unremarkable. Serial sectioning was negative for grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The regional lymph nodes appeared normal. The bone marrow was dark red. The lymph nodes were not enlarged. The thymus was not identified.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM:

The thyroid was symmetrical in appearance and sectioning revealed no grossly identifiable or palpable lesions. The breast tissue was sectioned in the usual manner and contained small amount of white fibrous tissue; negative for significant abnormality.

MUSCULOSKELETAL SYSTEM:

The diaphragm was intact. Skeletal muscles were red-brown and firm. The calvarium was intact. The vertebral columns showed normal curvature. The ribs were negative for fractures. The vertebral bodies were negative for fractures. No bone or joint abnormalities were noted.

AUTOPSY PROCEDURES AND ANCILLARY TESTING

The approach to autopsy dissection was M. Letulle's Technique (en bloc from tongue to rectum). There were not special dissections performed. Tissue retained in stock jars until signout. Additional samples taken as follows, homogenized viscera. Ancillary testing, toxicology.

HISTOLOGIC SECTIONS (2&3):

HISTOLOGIC SECTIONS (2&3)

Trimmed from larger formalin-fixed blocks:

A. Head cutis ventral, multiple fragments;
B. Head cutis dorsa, multiple fragments;
C. Neck cutis ventral, multiple fragments;
D. Neck cutis dorsa, multiple fragments;
E. Thorax cutis ventral, multiple fragments;
F. Thorax cutis dorsa, multiple fragments;
G. Right upper extremity, ventral, multiple fragments;
H. Right upper extremity, dorsal, multiple fragments;
I. Left upper extremity ventral, multiple fragments;
J. Left upper extremity dorsa, multiple fragments;
K. Right lower extremity, ventral, multiple fragments;
L. Right lower extremity, dorsal, multiple fragments;
M. Left lower extremity ventral, multiple fragments;
N. Left lower extremity dorsa, multiple fragments;
O. Central nervous system, multiple fragments;
P. Viscera, multiple fragments; and
Q. Additional viscera, multiple fragments.

MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION

CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM: Sections showed cardiac parenchyma and stroma free of significant interstitial-type fibrosis and nuclear & cytoplasmic hypertrophy, acute & chronic inflammation, hemorrhage, and necrosis. Sections of coronary arteries were free of significant cholesterol clefts and dystrophic calcifications within narrowed vascular walls. Sections of aorta were free of significant cholesterol clefts deposits. Negative for malignant cells.

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM: Bilateral sections of pulmonary parenchyma and stroma notable were free of significant congestion, variably sized & increased alveolar spaces, acute inflammation, chronic inflammation, fibrosis, hemorrhage, and hemosiderin-laden macrophages. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Sections of hilar lymph nodes showed benign primary follicles. Sections of larynx were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

LIVER & BILIARY SYSTEM: Sections showed hepatic parenchyma and stroma free of significant acute & chronic inflammation, macrosteatosis, glycogenated nuclei, and fibrosis. Negative for malignant cells.

GENITOURINARY SYSTEM: Sections showed bilateral renal parenchyma and stroma notable for medial hypertrophy of medium sized vessels and interstitial/subcapsular lymphocytic inflammation, but free of significant basement membrane thickening, hyaline change, thyroidization, and interstitial fibrosis. Section of urinary bladder were denuded, but free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Sections of genitourinary tract were histologically unremarkable. Polarization and refraction failed to reveal polarizable and refractile materials, respectively. Negative for malignant cells.

ALIMENTARY TRACT: Sections showed histologically unremarkable pancreatobilliary and tubular gastrointestinal tract. Negative for malignant cells.

RETICULOENDOTHELIAL SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma, free of significant acute and chronic inflammation. Negative for malignant cells.

INTEGUMENTARY SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for malignant cells.

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM: Sections showed histologically unremarkable parenchyma and stroma. Negative for adrenal hemorrhage. Negative for malignant cells.

MEDICAL RECORDS REVIEW

Accompanying medical information collected from pre-autopsy verbal report by _Esmeralda CASTLE, the mother of the decedent, was notable for following medical findings:

Past Medical History: negative for suicidal attempts; equivocal for prior past suicidal ideation (10/2024);

Surgical Procedures: none;

Medical Laboratory: antemortem COVID-19 negative test.

Additional Notes: Clinical symptoms/signs, not in acute distress (5/28/2025-5/29/2025), asymptomatic (interim). The decedent did not receive blood transfusions or lived in Europe prior to death. The decedent was vaccinated against COVID-19 prior to death. The decedent had been consuming alcoholic beverages (wine and liquor)/tobacco (vaped) prior to death. The decedent had not been consuming illegal habit-forming drugs prior to death. The decedent did not have history of cancer prior to death. External and macroscopic images taken for posterity. Examination limited by autolysis and tissue preservation. Preliminary diagnosis called to and confirmed by Esmeralda CASTLE on 7/3/2025 at 1615. See accompanying Axis 3327991 report. Final diagnosis called to and confirmed by family friend on 8/1/2025 at 1615.

OPINION:

Based collectively on my autopsy findings herein as well as my review of the accompanying submitted medical information, in the case of this 21-year-old female, V/A.R. the manner of death is deferred (1,4-6,&9). I reserve the right to amend my opinion(s) upon the receipt of additional material (7).

Comment: "The following statement applies to tests, i.e. to dye(s), chemical solution stains, and Class I IHC reagents and kits. Dye(s), chemical solution stains are defined in the Code of Federal Regulations as "mixtures of synthetic or natural dyes or nondye chemicals in solutions used in staining cells and tissues for diagnostic histopathology, cytopathology, or hematology" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1850). This definition encompasses many of the common materials found in a conventional histopathology laboratory, such as routine hematoxylin and eosin stains, as well as special stains like trichrome, iron, and Grocott-Gömöri's methenamine silver, among others, and are considered Class I devices subject to general controls. Class I IHC reagents and kits are defined as those that "provide the pathologist with adjunctive diagnostic information that may be incorporated into the pathologist's report, but that is not ordinarily reported to the clinician as an independent finding," noting that "these IHC's are used after the primary diagnosis of tumor (neoplasm) has been made by conventional histopathology using nonimmunologic histochemical stains, such as hematoxylin and eosin" (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). The 1998 final rule further describes these as "adjunctive tests [to conventional histopathologic diagnostic examination] and presenting a low risk to public health."37 An example of a Class I IHC specifically mentioned in the IHC reagents and kit regulation is keratin (see 21 C.F.R. § 864.1860). Many other Class I IHC reagents and kits can be found by searching for the "NJT" product code on the FDA establishment registration and device listing database.47 These IVDs are exempt from premarket notification/510(k) submission, although they are still subject to FDA general controls and QS/CGMP requirements. Most IHC stains used by anatomic pathologists are considered diagnostic markers and therefore are categorized as Class I by the FDA. The tests herein have not been cleared or approved for the specific use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. FDA does not require this test to go through premarket FDA review. These tests are used for clinical purposes. It should not be regarded as investigational or for research. This laboratory is certified under the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendments 1988 (CLIA) as qualified to perform high complexity clinical laboratory testing. All stains and tests are performed with general controls, i.e. positive and negative control reactions as necessary, and all controls show appropriate reactivity. However, stains and tests have not been validated on decalcified tissues. Results should be interpreted with caution given the likelihood of false negativity on decalcified specimens. Certain tests utilize Class I Analyte-Specific Reagents (ASR); these tests are developed, and their performance characteristics determined by this laboratory. ASRs used in this laboratory have been established and verified for accuracy and precision.(8)"

But again Please remember that what I like to do in order for the due diligence we observe is that after the military final autopsy document becomes available ask miss missus cancelled to submit it to our secure Dropbox shared folder and then send us an e-mail at sometime in the two-minute whenever the report is available maybe like 10 weeks from now or 16 weeks from now whenever OK and then I will review that and then either then or correct the report as needed OK so the so microscopic examination of multiple sections on this case showed no evidence of any blunt force trauma so that's something I think was important to rule in or out the toxicology studies were pertinently positive and there was a significant level of ethanol or alcohol there was detected and I think that is a significant finding now this upon microscopic examination on the organ systems there's no other changes either on microscope events or inflammation infection or cancer of any kind so I think the major other cause of that has been have been formally ruled out so this substance is detected in the bodily fluid I think is significant in the quantity and quality of it and I think that's something that informs the cause of death in this case um so in other words you know from our end we don't see any evidence of foul play as far as UM trauma to the remains and I think this is again let me just I'm careful what kind of language I'm using here I think this is suggestive of an accidental ingestion OK now um again what I'd like to do in order for all of the due diligence be observed is that once the the military is available I will review that material and then appropriately if I identify any additional diagnostic features that can help better classify the findings will attend the mandatory OK do you do you have any questions for me from your end yes so a couple questions um does the the findings or are there any other pending tests that that need to be deducted or awaiting results that will impact your final report the due diligence worked that I wanted to perform from our end is available is completed and but when and if the final autopsy documents from the first examination becomes available I'll be very happy to review that and again because you may be sometime in the future like a month two months maybe even six months depending on how complex this is on there and um whatever that is I just asked you and the family yeah we we did I I wanted to check we did open the Dropbox folder OK their e-mail maybe I should actually add you let me just add you on on that e-mail as well because you are you know the point of contact here and and then once you do that because it may be again sometime in the future just please drop me an e-mail OK and say something like hey doctor Aldrich dismiss cancel or miss poor yeah you're missus amber esmeralda I'm ibra so esmeralda is is miss castle and then my name is Debra I'm her colleague from law school yes her friend got it OK so let me see here then please just send me an e-mail that way I can see that it's in the archive that's the only problem with the Dropbox automatically not familiar it's there and then within about a week or two I will schedule us for follow up or attended or amend their correct report as needed OK the second question that I had was are any of the tests are able to indicate or any of the anything that you were able to see and able to show whether there was any strangulation or any type of of anything of that nature I took very meticulous examination both externally of the remains and systematic microscopic examination to rule out even some small or difficult to detect ecchymosis or petechiae or other force or signs of one force trauma and I look very carefully there there's none so I and considered it formally ruled that out OK so sometimes by external examination you cannot see the you know the evidence of trauma but but this way that I performed it there's just simply no way of missing it because I'm looking at singular cells at that level right and if there's any kind of level of of change in I'm I'm I'm able to see it now there is that there has been formally considered and ruled out so I will add you to the to do a Dropbox share folder and let's then be communication whenever the report becomes available OK and once that report comes out we'll as well as I'll call her as me I'm sorry we'll miss castle get a copy of of your findings or will or will she get a copy of this additional report after I just feel like she's going to ask him no I'm gonna explain this to thank you so we're going to release our report automatically this is our standard operating procedure we're gonna release our reported automatically to to to her to Monday morning OK and then electronically and then they will mail her a hard copy those are typically dashed that same went Friday OK perfect and then once we reviewed the additional material we will follow the same sequence OK we'll release the report basically as if it's a new report one thing we have you know that's confirmed so that's fine but to confirm the address should we mail her report to [redacted] yes that's it OK wonderful thank you so much and lesbian communication then the first report OK thank you so much thank you bye bye

Well, it's going to take the lab quite a while to do the escitalopram, particularly since Dr. Lameira pointed out to me that we don't have blood, just liver and muscle. I'm not sure the expensive, fast lab (NMS) will even do naproxen on liver and muscle; I think they only work on blood. So you're looking at 60 days if you want to wait for the escitalopram.

If you don't, then there is a much shorter timeline; I'll leave it up to Dr. Lameira to estimate it for you.

Subject: [Non-DoD Source] RE: List of Prescription Medication

We can definitely ask for escitalopram, and if we have to we can send out for naproxen, but we can't do Cefpodoxime, the antibiotic.

I kind of think naproxen isn't indicated; if it's going to kill you, it does it by internal bleeding, and that wasn't part of the findings, right, Dr. Lameira?

How about if we ask our lab for escitalopram, and if it's positive, we don't do naproxen? If it's negative, the expense of outside lab can do naproxen within a couple of weeks.

Dr. Gunther

Subject: List of Prescription Medication

Good Afternoon Dr. Lameira and Dr. Gunther,

Thank you so much for taking the time to meet with us on Tuesday. I apologize for the delay in getting back to you, but it took some time for us to track down the specific prescriptions we'd like to have the sample tested for (if that has not already been done). They are:

- Escitalopram/Lexapro
- Cefpodoxime
- Naproxen

Thank you!

Very Respectfully,

Christopher B. Dempsey

U N I T E D S T A T E S v. JERMIAH T. COPELAND CSSN/E-3, USN	GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO DEFENSE MOTIONS TO SUPPRESS 5 December 2025

MOTION

The Government respectfully requests this Court deny the Defense Motions to Suppress the evidence obtained from CSSN Copeland's barracks room pursuant to a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure (CASS), the search of CSSN Copeland's iPhone 15 also pursuant to a CASS, and CSSN Copeland's statements to the Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS) on 3 and 6 June 2025.

FACTS

1. On 31 May 2025, NCIS was contacted by Officer James Stalcup of the Norfolk Police Department (NPD) regarding a missing person report filed by ET3 Daniel Rich, USN regarding his ex-girlfriend, CS3 A.R, .USN.[1]

2. ET3 Rich advised Officer Stalcup that CS3 A.R. had not been seen or heard from since 29 May 2025 when she was last seen with CSSN Jermiah Copeland, USN, the Accused.[2]

3. Officer Stalcup told NCIS that he contacted CS3 A.R.'s command, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95) and was informed by the command legal officer, LTJG David Demazure, USN (DDG 95) that CS3 A.R. was in an unauthorized absence (UA) status and the ship had been unable to contact her.[3]

4. LTJG Demazure provided Officer Stalcup with a phone number for CS3 A.R. However, when Officer Stalcup called the phone number, the number went straight to voicemail.[4]

5. After receiving this report from NPD, on 31 May 2025 NCIS also contacted LTJG Demazure, who confirmed that both CS3 A.R. and CSSN Copeland were in a UA status.

LTJG Demazure did not indicate any safety concerns surrounding CS3 A.R. and CSSN Copeland.[5]

6. On 31 May 2025, NCIS interviewed ET3 Rich. ET3 Rich stated that he last spoke to CS3 A.R. around 0230 on 29 May 25 via phone during which she was crying and asked for help. After the call, ET3 Rich was able to trace CS3 A.R.'s phone to Willis Manor, X-2 Barracks located on board Naval Station Norfolk, but only until 0430 at which time it appeared to have powered down.[6]

7. On 1 June 2025 at approximately 1341, CSSN Copeland was located in his barracks room on board Naval Station Norfolk after his mother called base security requesting a welfare check on her son.[7]

8. On 1 June 2025, NCIS contacted CS3 A.R.'s mother, Ms. Esmeralda Castle.

    a. Ms. Castle stated that she had not spoken to her daughter in about a week, but did receive a Facetime call from her on 28 May 2025 that she was unable to answer.

    b. NCIS asked Ms. Castle if she had any concerns that her daughter may commit suicide. Ms. Castle said she did not think that her daughter would have committed suicide, however, she told NCIS that her daughter has had in-patient mental health treatment in the past.

    c. Ms. Castle noted the in-patient treatment was brought about by pressures CS3 A.R. felt from work and ongoing sexual harassment she was subjected to by an older male on board the ship.[8]

9. On 1 June 2025, NCIS opened a missing-person investigation stemming from the suspected Article 86 absence of CS3 A.R.[9]

10. On 1 June 2025, NCIS conducted an initial search of CS3 A.R.'s barracks room. NCIS found the room to be neat tidy with various personal items throughout, to include a yoga mat, workout weights laid on the floor and a motorcycle helmet sitting on a desk. NCIS did not observe any signs of foul play.[10]

11. On 1 June 2025, NCIS interviewed CS3 A.R.'s roommate, MA3 Jessica Gouge, USN, USS GEORGE H.W. BUSH (CVN 77) who indicated she had not seen CS3 A.R. in several days.[11]

12. On 1 June 2025, NCIS interviewed ET3 Rich.[12] ET3 Rich explained he is a recent ex-boyfriend of CS3 A.R.

    a. ET3 Rich stated that the two ended their relationship roughly a month ago, but she still shared her phone location with him.

    b. ET3 Rich told investigators that he and HT3 Michael Gillespie, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95), another ex-boyfriend of CS3 A.R., attempted to search for CS3 A.R. in the early morning hours of 29 May 2025, but did not find her.

    c. ET3 Rich told investigators that CS3 A.R.'s father is currently incarcerated for assaulting CS3 A.R. when she was younger. ET3 Rich told investigators that CS3 A.R. was fearful of her father's release from prison.

    d. ET3 Rich further told investigators that CS3 A.R. suffered from some type of depression, and he helped regulate her medication as he was worried she might purposely overdose.

13. On 1 June 2025, NCIS contacted Naval Medical Center Portsmouth (NMCP) to see if CS3 A.R. was or was currently a patient. NMCP stated they had no record of a recent hospital admission.[13]

14. On 1 June 2025, NCIS interviewed FCC Brad Parker, USN, USS JAMES WILLIAMS (DDG 95). FCC Parker was CS3 Copeland and CS3 A.R.'s Chief.

    a. FCC Parker stated he went to CSSN Copeland's barracks room on the morning of 29 May 2025 because CSSN Copeland did not come to work as scheduled.

    b. FCC Parker believed CSSN Copeland was asleep when he arrived because when CSSN Copeland answered his barracks room door he appeared groggy.

    c. FCC Parker told investigators that he observed CS3 A.R. in CSSN Copeland's barracks bed, she acknowledged him, rolled over, and appeared to go back to sleep.

    d. FCC Parker stated he told CSSN Copeland to tend to CS3 A.R. and then come into work that day.

e. FCC Parker stated that CSSN Copeland told him CS3 A.R. was having personal issues and she came to CSSN Copeland's barracks room to discuss.[14]

15. On 1 June 2025, NCIS interviewed CSSN Copeland in the lounge of X-2 Willis Manor - his barracks building.

a. CSSN Copeland told investigators that he and CS3 A.R. were co-workers and he texted her on 28 May 2025 to discuss recipes and ingredients for tacos.

b. CSSN Copeland said CS3 A.R. came to his barracks that night and the two made tacos and drank alcohol.

c. CSSN Copeland described CS3 A.R. as becoming increasingly more emotional as the night went on and the two spoke about her romantic relationships.

d. CSSN Copeland stated that CS3 A.R. confided in him regarding her relationship with an ex-boyfriend, HT3 Gillespie and a recent argument the two had over a motorcycle helmet.

e. CSSN Copeland stated that one of his roommates came into the barracks common area where the two were sitting to check on CS3 A.R. because she appeared to be upset.

f. CSSN Copeland told NCIS that CS3 A.R. spent the night in his room and the two did not engage in sexual intercourse.

g. CSSN Copeland said they were woken by their chief, FCC Parker, around 0900 on 29 May 2025.

h. CSSN Copeland told investigators that the last time he saw CS3 A.R. was when he borrowed his roommate's car and returned CS3 A.R. to her barracks room around 1000 on 29 May 2025.[15]

16. On 2 June 2025, NCIS interviewed CSSN Gladys Garcia - Barrera, USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95), a friend of CS3 A.R.

a. CSSN Garcia-Barrera told investigators that on 28 May 2025, CS3 A.R. and CSSN Garcia-Barrera went to Target and purchased exercise equipment and groceries.

b. After both returning to base and parting ways, CS3 A.R. told CSSN Garcia-Barrera that she was going to CSSN Copeland's barracks room to make tacos.

[14] Encl 9, Results of Initial Contact with FCC Brad Parker, USN
[15] Encl 10, Results of Initial Interview of CSSN Jermiah Copeland, USN

c. When asked about CS3 A.R.'s mental health, CSSN Garcia-Barrera told investigators that she had heard CS3 A.R. had received inpatient mental health treatment at NMCP but did not know of any suicide attempts.

d. She disclosed, however, that CS3 A.R. talked about visiting a friend in New York and made comments to HT3 Gillespie about going UA to New York.[16]

17. On 2 June 2025, NCIS requested Navy Federal Credit Union Financial Records of CS3 A.R.

a. The subpoena requested that CS3 A.R. not be notified for fear that notification carried with it "a substantial risk…of endangering life or physical safety, flight from prosecution, or seriously jeopardizing an investigation or official proceeding or unduly delaying the same."[17]

b. In the Special Agent's opinion, this concern was based on two factors "(a) CS3 A.R.'s previously expressed suicidal ideation and her distressed state immediately prior to her entering a UA status; and (b) The nature of the offense as being in an unauthorized absence status will mean she will likely change her patterns to avoid being caught if she knows we are tracking her location."[18]

18. On 2 June 2025, NCIS interviewed CSSN Copeland's roommate, YN3 Sean Monaghan, USN (VAW 124).

a. YN3 Monaghan stated that CSSN Copeland occasionally has female guests in the barracks. YN3 Monaghan could recall three different women on three separate occasions.

b. He recalled that on the first two occasions he brought over an African American woman and on the third occasion, YN3 Monaghan observed CSSN Copeland with a white female with dark hair.

c. He told investigators that he saw the white female with dark hair passed out on the floor in her underwear.

d. When shown a photo of CS3 A.R., he could not identify her as the female he had seen passed out on the floor.[19]

19. On 3 June 2025, NCIS interviewed HT3 Gillespie. HT3 Gillespie is also an ex-boyfriend of CS3 A.R.

a. On the night of 28 May 2025, HT3 Gillespie received a text message from CS3 A.R. that read, "fuck you."

b. HT3 Gillespie stated that he and CS3 A.R. had had an argument on 27 May 2025 regarding her returning a motorcycle helmet to him.

c. HT3 Gillespie said after he received the text message, he tried to contact CS3 A.R. multiple times, but she did not respond.

d. NCIS requested and HT3 Gillespie provide a PASS to allow NCIS to review his cell phone.

e. CSSN Copeland told HT3 Gillespie that he dropped CS3 A.R. off at her barracks room at 1300 on Thursday.[20]

20. On 3 June 2025, NCIS contacted Virginia State Police and requested they activate a Critical Missing Adult Alert Statewide for CS3 A.R. noting a current mental health issue.[21]

21. On 3 June 2025, NCIS interviewed AR John Calisse, USN,(VAW 124), CSSN Copeland's suitemate.

a. AR Calisse lived in the room across the common area from CSSN Copeland's bedroom.

b. AR Calisse recalled leaving his room on 29 May 2025 at approximately 0530.

c. When AR Calisse exited his room, he observed CSSN Copeland and an unknown female laying naked in the middle of common room floor.

d. He described the two lying on their backs, face up, with their eyes closed and CSSN Copeland's head lying on the thigh of the female.

e. AR Calisse described that the female's bra was pulled down exposing her breast.

f. AR Calisse told NCIS that CSSN Copeland borrowed AR Calisse's White Jeep on the evening of 1 June, but did not return to base with the vehicle until the morning of 2 June 2025 making AR Calisse late for work.[22]

22. On 3 June 2025, NCIS also interviewed PSSN Irbin Gordillocruz, USN,(VAW 124), the last suitemate of CSSN Copeland.

a. He advised that he arrived back to the barracks room from a trip at approximately 0400 on 29 May.[23] He advised that all of the lights were off and he did not see anyone at that time.[24]

b. When PSSN GordilloCruz left his room with AR Calisse the next morning, he observed a female laying nearly fully naked with her breasts exposed on the floor of the common area with CSSN Copeland laying naked face up with his head on her torso.[25]

23. On 3 June 2025, CSSN Copeland invited a female Sailor, CSSN Sarah Cook, USN, who was a co-worker from his previous ship, USS HARRY S TRUMAN (CVN 75), to his barracks.

a. CSSN Cook arrived at CSSN Copeland barracks room around 1845.

b. CSSN Cook and CSSN Copeland hung out for over an hour in the common area of his barracks room watching TV and playing video games. CSSN Cook told NCIS she did not notice anything off about CSSN Copeland's behavior during her visit.

c. CSSN Cook estimated that she was at CSSN Copeland's room for over an hour when NCIS arrived and escorted him to his interview.[26]

24. On 3 June 2024 at 1949, CAPT Matthew Schlarmann, Commanding Officer of Naval Station Norfolk signed a CASS authorizing a search of the place where CS3 A.R. was last seen - SN Copeland's side of the his barrack's room - Rack A of 335B and common area of the barracks room. The CASS was issued in connection with the ongoing investigation into CS3 A.R.'s Article 86 offense.[27]

25. At approximately 2117, NCIS conducted an initial walk through of Room 335.[28]

26. While on scene, AR Calisse, CSSN Copeland's suitemate signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for Willis Manor X-2 #335.[29]

27. While the search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room was underway, CSSN Copeland's was interviewed at the Norfolk NCIS Field Office on board Naval Station Norfolk at approximately at 2130 on 3 June 2025.

a. Prior to entering the interview room, agents seized an iPhone 15 that CSSN Copeland brought with him.[30]

b. At the beginning of the interview, CSSN Copeland was asked if he had eaten which he acknowledged he had.[31]

c. CSSN Copeland was provided several bags of snacks and water at the beginning of the interview.[32]

28. One of the agents involved in the interview, Special Agent Bea Duffy, was very familiar with CSSN Copeland.

a. The two deployed together on the USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN 75) for several months at the end of 2024.

b. As the TRUMAN's Afloat Agent, Special Agent Duffy was the lead agent on the cases involving ABHAN A.R. and CSSN S.S. This interview was the fourth time in 10 months she had interviewed CSSN Copeland.[33]

29. After he was advised of his Article 31(b) rights, at approximately 2147, CSSN Copeland waived those rights and spoke with NCIS.[34] [35]

30. He was advised he could request a break at any time and additional snacks should he desire.[36]

31. At 2203, NCIS searched for electronics belonging to CS3 A.R. in Room 335, Side B and common space using an electronics detecting dog and found nothing of evidentiary value.[37]

32. At approximately 2234, NCIS searched Room 335 Side B Rack A and Common Area utilizing a cadaver dog. The dog alerted to a grey backpack located on CSSN Copeland's side of suite B at 2241, but this was not given any serious weight as these dogs can alert to any body odor, including sweat.[38]

33. At approximately, 1 hour and 22 minutes into the interview, agents offered CSSN Copeland a break.

    a. Agents asked him if he needed anything or would like to use the bathroom. He declined both offers.[39]

    b. The break lasts approximately 43 minutes during which time CSSN Copeland appeared to take a nap.[40]

34. When agents return to the room, they ask CSSN Copeland if he is fine to continue and he replies, "Yes, ma'am."[41] He is offered, but declines a bathroom break.

35. Although CSSN Copeland places his head on the table during breaks, he never tells the Special Agents that he is too tired to continue. In fact, he never tells either agent that he is tired. The Special Agents, however, continually check in with him, by making reference to they themselves being tired or they acknowledge that he must be tired[42] – but CSSN Copeland never asks to terminate the interview.

36. NCIS then broaches the topic with CSSN Copeland regarding his phone. They ask:

    [02:06:25] Special Agent Gokey, "So, I would like then to look at your phone and place you in the room, and that could potentially maybe help you with your command. Like, we could pitch it to him like, 'Hey, man, he didn't go to work, but it's not like he was fucking missing or gone or whatever.' Right?

    [02:06:46] SA GOKEY: You would be cool with that?

    [02:06:48] CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

Pg. 105 – Special Agent Duffy "I'm tired, too"

37. CSSN Copeland then gives Special Agents the passcode to his phone.[43]

38. Special Agent Gokey then reads the PASS to CSSN Copeland.

    a. Special Agent Gokey informs CSSN Copeland again that NCIS is conducting an investigation into Article 86 and 107,

    b. Special Agent Gokey informs CSSN Copeland that NCIS is requesting to search his iPhone 15, and

    c. That he has the right to refuse to permit NCIS to search his phone.[44]

39. CSSN Copeland asks investigators if his phone will be returned to him. He says he would like to call his mother. Agents agree to facilitate a call with his mother. First, Special Agent Gokey reaffirms CSSN Copeland's desire to allow a permissive search of his phone by asking:

    [02:09:55] Special Agent Gokey: Are you good with signing this?

    [02:09:56] CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But is it cool if I can call my mom?

40. During this exchange, CSSN Copeland never says he is no longer permitting NCIS to search his iPhone 15.

41. Approximately 2 hours and 36 minutes into the interview and roughly 1 hour and 14 minutes after the first break, CSSN Copeland is offered a second break.[45]

42. At 2346, NCIS utilized a Hemastix, to test for the presence of blood on a sticker found stuck to the floor of CSSN Copeland's closet which was brown in color. The sticker tested presumptive positive for the presence of blood.[46]

43. At 0005, NCIS utilized a Hemastix, to test for the presence of blood on CSSN Copeland's bathroom sink. The sample tested presumptive positive for the presence of blood.[47]

44. From 0000-0116, NCIS utilized Bluestar, a chemical reagent used to test for the presence of blood.[48]

45. At the end of the interview, CSSN Copeland signed a PASS which authorized agents to search his backpack, barracks room, and electronic devices.[49]

46. When presenting the PASS to CSSN Copeland, Special Agent Duffy discussed the parameters.

    a. She verbally explained all the items that he already given consent to and additional items that NCIS would like to search.

    b. She verbally listed the iPhone 15 that was previously discussed that CSSN Copeland had given consent to search. She says:

    "And then, you know, I know we already talked about phone and you were okay with us, you know, looking through that. And I wanted to ask you about the other iPhone that you have in your room. Is that something you would also be okay with going through?"

    c. CSSN Copeland does not express disagreement regarding her assertion that he is giving consent to the iPhone 15 that was previously discussed.

    d. She also listed another phone found in his bedroom, an apple watch, and a PS5.

    e. She discussed with him his right to refuse or limit the scope of the search.

    f. After reading the PASS to him in its entirety, CSSN Copeland signed the PASS.[50]

47. Special Agent Duffy then asked if CSSN Copeland was still willing to sign the paper copy of the first PASS to memorialize his consent. CSSN Copeland, visibly annoyed, said "No. I just—can we just—I'm just trying to go home."[51] The interview was terminated, although Special Agent Duffy returned a couple of minutes later to ask "I didn't give you my phone in order to call your mom. You want to do that? [52] CSSN Copeland responds "I'll just wait" and asks how much longer it will take to leave.[53] The parties depart not long after that.

48. At 0138, NCIS ceased the search of the barracks room and released the scene to CSSN Copeland, who was then present at the barracks room.[54] While at the barracks room, CSSN Copeland asked for his phone back, but SA Duffy advised he could not have it as it had been seized, or something to that effect.[55]

50. On 4 June 25 Digital Forensic Examiner (DFE) Samuel BUSH, NCIS Digital Forensics Norfolk, VA, conducted a digital forensic acquisition of the seized iPhone 15 belonging to CSSN Copeland.

51. On 4 June 25, NCIS obtained a 2703(d) Order for T-Mobile Records pertaining to CS3 A.R. and CSSN Copeland's cellular phone accounts, respectively.

    a. Both orders included a request for device location, historical location information, mobility of cell location and wireline information.

    b. The mobility records for CSSN Copeland's account showed that he contacted CS3 A.R. on 1 June 2025 a total of 5 times between 1902 and 1904.[57]

52. On 4 June 2025, NCIS coordinated with Newport News Police Department Criminal Intelligence Unit to conduct License Plate Reader (LPR) queries on two vehicles CSSN Copeland had been known to borrow.

    a. The White Jeep Liberty belonging to AR Calisse was captured at Hampton Blvd & W 25th Street at 0440 on 2 June.[58]

    b. AR Calisse told investigators CSSN Copeland borrowed his Jeep on the night of 1 June, but did not return to base with it until 2 June making AR Calisse late for work.[59]

53. On 4 June 2025, at approximately 1315, NCIS conducted a scene examination in the hallway and stairwell closest to CSSN Copeland's barracks room - Room 335 on the third floor.

    a. Multiple areas of reddish brown staining were observed in the stairwell between levels 1 and 3.

    b. NCIS collected samples of the reddish brown stains for later analysis. No presumptive testing was done during the collection.[60]

54. At 0743 on 5 June 2025, CAPT Matthew Schlarmann, Commanding Officer of Naval Station Norfolk signed a CASS authorizing a search of CSSN Copeland's seized iPhone 15. Defense has not challenged the validity of this CASS, but merely the timing in relation to when they mistakenly believe that the search of the phone began.[61]

55. Also on 5 June, the Government obtained a Search Warrant for CSSN Copeland's AT&T account requesting, among other items, Call/Text/Data Detail records and specialized location data for CSSN Copeland's cell phone.[62]

56. At 1230 on 5 June, NCIS conducted a canvas of the X-2 Building. Upon arrival, the Barracks Manager, Ms. Mary Benson, explained to NCIS that she observed what appeared to be blood down the hallway of the first floor. NCIS observed at the end of hallway near the door a small dropping of a reddish brown substance. Ms. Benson stated the floors had been mopped between 29 or 30 May, but not since.[63] Samples were collected.

57. On 5 June, NCIS obtained a search warrant for CS3 A.R.'s Google account. The results showed two failed log in attempts on 2 June.[64] On 7 June 2025, it was determined that these failed log in attempts were done by ET3 Rich in attempt to located CSSN A.R..[65]

58. On 5 June, NCIS and Suffolk Police and Fire Departments conducted a canvassing search of the area surrounding College Dr. in Suffolk, Virginia as NCIS determined that was area of interest due to a possible cell ping from CS3 A.R.'s phone. No items of evidentiary value were recovered from the canvas.[66]

59. On 5 June 25, a preliminary rapid DNA test was conducted by Virginia State Police on comparison a sample obtained from CS3 A.R.'s mother and three suspected blood samples found in and around CSSN Copeland's barracks room.

    a. Sample 1: A buccal swab provided by CS3 A.R.'s mother.
    b. Sample 2: A swab of suspected blood from the X2 barracks stairwell 5, between levels 1 and 2
    c. Sample 3:A swab of suspected blood from the left rear corner of CSSN Copeland's closet
    d. Sample 4: A swab of suspected blood from X2 barracks stairwell 5, between levels 2 and 3.

Results were inconclusive. Sample 1 lacked sufficient DNA, Samples 2 and 3 were a mixture meaning they contained at least 2 human DNA profiles and Sample 4 displayed an error code and no human DNA was detected.[67]

60. On 6 June 25, CSSN Copeland was interviewed by NCIS at approximately 0843. During that interview he was advised that he was suspected of making a false official statement and knowledge of the possible death of CS3 Angelina A.R.[68]

61. Agents repeatedly advised CSSN Copeland that he was in control of the interview and could stop at any time.

Special Agent: "I'd like to go through it with you. There's one that's a little--one piece of it's a little different on this form than what was talked about last time, and I want to have a chance to explain that to you. But, again, I--I--if you're telling me you don't want to do this, like, I'm not going to make you even do this part."[69]
****
"Are you--you comfortable just doing the first step and then talking a little bit more? We're not going to make you make a decision one way or the other.

CSSN Copeland: Yeah. I mean, what do you--what's the form?
Special Agent: Okay. Yeah."[70]

62. CSSN Copeland after being advised of 31(b) rights, waived those rights and spoke with investigators.[71]

63. On 9 June 25, YN3 Sean Monaghan, CSSN Copeland's roommate was interviewed by NCIS a second time.[72]

    a. YN3 Monaghan told investigators that he returned from leave on 28 May 25 around 1900. CSSN Copeland arrived to their barracks room around 2200. YN3 Monaghan had watch early on 29 May, so he was already half asleep. However, YN3 Monaghan remembers seeing a lighter skinned female with short hair with CSSN Copeland.

    b. YN3 Monahan woke up around 0500 on 29 May and noticed there was no one else in his bedroom. When he exited his bedroom and entered the common area around 0640, he observed CSSN Copeland asleep on the living floor in his underwear with a girl that YN3 Monaghan did not recognize. YN3 Monaghan left for work and returned around 1300.

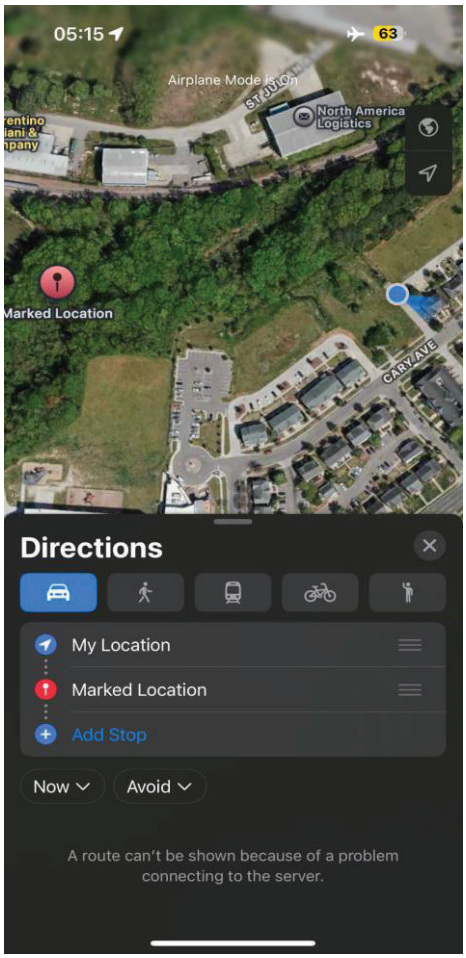
c. When he returned, no one was in the barracks room. He next saw CSSN Copeland in their barracks room around 2000.

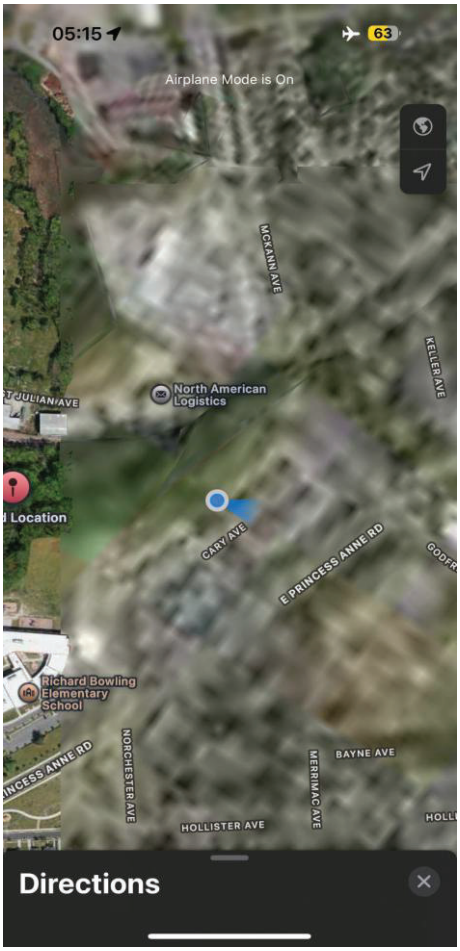
d. Over the course of 30 May – 1 June, YN3 Monaghan observed CSSN Copeland leaving their barracks room very early in the morning and returning late in the evening.

e. YN3 Monaghan described CSSN Copeland's behavior on 2 June as "skiddish."

f. YN3 Monaghan stated that although he does not allow CSSN Copeland to use his car, he does leave his keys in places where CSSN Copeland could access them. YN3 Monaghan stated that on 3 June 25, he believes that his car had moved parking spots.



g. YN3 Monaghan also told investigators that he deep cleaned the barracks room on 2 June after noticing a blood spot on a bathmat in the bathroom he shares with CSSN Copeland.



64. Between 5 June 25 and 9 June 25, an NCIS Digital Forensic Expert, Special Agent John Davison conducted a digital forensic examination of a seized iPhone 15 belonging to CSSN Copeland pursuant to a CASS executed by CAPT Schlarman, NAS Norfolk, VA, dated 05 June 25. That search did not commence until after the CASS was signed. [73]

65. On 9 June 25, Special Agent Davison located and extracted two image files during the examination of the iPhone 15 belonging to CSSN Copeland. The image file named IMG_2621.PNG appears to be a screenshot of an Apple maps App with the street name Cary Ave visible in the image. The device also appears to be in Airplane mode and time of day is 05:15 according to the visible image. The blue circle appears to be the user of the iPhone 15 belonging to CSSN Copeland and appears to be facing towards the house on Cary Ave.[74]

66. The following are the image files containing the screenshots named IMG_2621.PNG and IMG_2622.PNG in order.[75]

68. The user of the iPhone 15 belonging to CSSN Copeland took the screenshot named IMG_2621.PNG on 02 June 25, at 5:15:21 AM. The user of the iPhone 15 belonging to CSSN Copeland either purposely or accidentally took the screenshot named IMG_2622.PNG on 02 June 25, at 5:15:25 AM.[76]

69. On 9 June 2025 at approximately 1700, NCIS arrived at the location of Cary Avenue in Norfolk, Virginia and conducted a foot search around the Broad Creek neighborhood and Richard Bowling Elementary School.[77]

70. The Broad Creek neighborhood is a residential area occupied by townhomes, an elementary school and a wooded area containing walking paths to a creek.[78]

71. At 1745, NCIS located a bag off a path behind a row of townhomes. NCIS divided into groups and ultimately located the bag by following a smell.[79]

72. Once the bag was located, K9 Kyra, a cadaver dog was utilized who presented a positive alert for the bag.[8081]

73. NCIS partially unzipped the bag and discovered human remains inside.[82]

74. On 10 June 2025, NCIS applied for a second CASS for CSSN Copeland's iPhone 15 which was executed by CAPT Matthew Schlarmann, Commanding Officer of Naval Station Norfolk.[83] This CASS included a search for evidence of Article 118, UCMJ.[84]

75. On 10 June 2025, USACIL DNA results indicated that the blood found in CSSN Copeland's closet was a mixture originating from two individuals – both CSSN Copeland and CS3 A.R.'s DNA profile were included as contributors to this mixture.[85] The reddish-brown substance found in the stairwell also matched CS3 A.R.'s DNA.

BURDEN OF PROOF

The Government bears the burden of proof and persuasion by a preponderance of the evidence. R.C.M. 905(c)

Pursuant to M.R.E. 311(d)(5), the Government bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that either (A) the evidence was not obtained as the result of an unlawful search or (B) the evidence obtained from an unlawful search fits into any one of a number of exceptions to the exclusionary rule.

LAW

I. CONSENT TO SEARCH

Under Mil. R. Evid. 314(e)(2), Manual Courts-Martial, a person may consent to a search of his or her person or property, or both, unless control over such property has been given to another. A person may grant consent to search property when the person exercises control over that property. Consent to search must be proven by the Government by clear and convincing evidence. Mil. R. Evid. 314(e)(5).

"M.R.E. 314(e)(3) implements the limited scope rule of Schneckloth v. Bustamonte,[86] which requires investigators to account for any express or implied limitations on a consent to search. Those limitations, however, cannot be determined on the basis of the subjective intentions of the consenting party. As the Supreme Court concluded in Florida v. Jimeno,[87] the standard is "that of 'objective' reasonableness -- what would the typical reasonable person have understood by the exchange between the officer and the suspect?"[88]

As CAAF cited in United States v. Harborth, "'…the ultimate touchstone of the Fourth Amendment is reasonableness' . . . [t]he 'warrant requirement is subject to certain exceptions.'"[89] One such exception allows for the temporary seizure of effects based upon probable cause or a "reasonable, articulable suspicion, premised on objective facts," of criminal activity." [90]

"[CAAF] has recognized that "search" and "seizure" are separate concepts. Revoking consent to one does not necessarily revoke consent to the other.[91]

"There must be some communication understandable to those conducting the search that the consent has been withdrawn." [92] "…[M]agic words" are not required to effectuate withdrawal of consent, an accused must make his intent clear through some unequivocal act or statement.[93]

Military Rule of Evidence (Mil. R. Evid.) 314(e)(4), which governs the voluntariness of consent searches, states "[c]onsent may . . . be withdrawn at any time." The phrase "any time" suggests no expiration, but our higher court has provided a terminus: "Consent . . . may be withdrawn at any time, provided of course that the search has not already been conducted."[94] Mil. R. Evid. 316(d)(2) states the consent requirements of Mil. R. Evid. 314 apply to consent seizures. The same reasoning therefore applies, and consent may be withdrawn at any time, provided that the seizure has not already been completed. Additionally, revoking consent to a seizure does not revoke consent to search. [95]

"As a general matter, a voluntary oral consent to search is not invalidated by a subsequent refusal to provide written consent to search."[96] Refusal to sign a form acknowledging that one has orally consented does not, absent more, negate the oral consent."[97]

II. COMMAND AUTHORIZED SEARCH AND SEIZURE

A search is proper if conducted pursuant to a search warrant or authorization based on probable cause.[98] A search authorization is valid only if issued by an impartial individual in one of the following categories: commander, military judge or magistrate, or other competent search authority.[99]

A. Probable Cause

No warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.[100] The Fourth Amendment protects the people against unlawful searches and seizures and requires establishment of probable cause prior to issuance of a warrant.[101] The military has implemented the Fourth Amendment through Military Rules of Evidence (M.R.E.) 311-17.

Probable cause exists to search when there is a reasonable belief that the person, property, or evidence sought is located in the place or on the person to be searched.[102] As noted by the U.S. Supreme Court, probable cause determinations must be based upon the "totality of the circumstances."[103] Probable cause requires more than a bare suspicion, but something less than preponderance of the evidence.[104] "It follows that probable cause determination are inherently contextual, dependent upon the specific circumstances presented as well as on the evidence itself. Indeed, probable cause is founded not on the determinative features of any particular piece of evidence provided … but rather the overall effect or weight of all factors presented to the magistrate.[105]

Further, probable cause "deals with probabilities."[106] "[T]here is no specific probability required, nor must the evidence lead one to believe that it is more probable than not that contraband will be present."[107] "The duty of the reviewing court is simply to make a practical, common-sense decision whether, given all the circumstances set forth in the affidavit, there is a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place. Probable cause to search exists when the facts and circumstances are sufficient in themselves to warrant a man of reasonable caution to believe that an offense has been committed."[108] Further, "there is no requirement that an affidavit present conclusive proof by direct evidence that the crime has been committed before a search warrant can issue."[109] Finally, Courts should not invalidate warrants by interpreting affidavits in a hyper technical, rather than a commonsense manner.[110]

"Stated differently, in order for there to be probable cause, a sufficient nexus must be shown to exist between the alleged crime and the specific item to be seized."[111] "The question of nexus focuses on whether there was a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place."[112]

When the defense has challenged the probable cause support for a search authorization, the evidence relevant to the motion is limited to evidence concerning the information actually presented to or otherwise known by the authorizing officer.[113] Nonetheless, a court "will not defer to a warrant based on an affidavit that does not provide a magistrate with a substantial basis for determining the existence of probable cause."[114] Accordingly, "substantial basis as a standard of review examines the information supporting the request for a search authorization through the eyes of a judge evaluating the magistrate's decision."[115] Finally, while a Commanding Officer does not issue warrants, he or she is bound by the same rules in authorizing a search as a [F]ederal magistrate; that is, probable cause to believe that the things to be seized are on or within the premises to be searched.[116]

B. Particularity

A search authorization must "particularly describe the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."[117] The Fourth Amendment requires that a search warrant describe the items to be seized with sufficient particularity to prevent a general exploratory rummaging in a person's belongings.[118] Notwithstanding the importance of preserving the particularity requirement, there is considerable support in federal law for the notion of "achieving a balance by not overly restricting the ability to search electronic devices."[119] Thus, in applying the Fourth Amendment to searches of electronic devices, there exists "a zone in which such searches are expansive enough to allow investigators access to places where incriminating materials may be hidden, yet not so broad that they become the sort of free-for-all general searches the Fourth Amendment was designed to prevent."[120] The proper way to determine sufficient specificity is

Instead of attempting to set out bright line rules for limiting searches of electronic devices, the courts have looked to what is reasonable under the circumstances. "As always under the Fourth Amendment, the standard is reasonableness." United States v. Hill, 459 F.3d 966, 974-77 (9th Cir. 2006) (court upholding an off-site search of all of the defendant's computer storage media for evidence of child pornography).

"whether it was reasonable to provide a more specific description of the items at that juncture of the investigation."[121]

"A nexus inquiry focuses on whether there was a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place."[122] "A nexus may be inferred from the facts and circumstances of a particular case, including the type of crime, the nature of the items sought, and reasonable inferences about where evidence is likely to be kept."[123]

In the absence of facial specificity, if the Government can otherwise show the CASS incorporated by reference an affidavit that described the particular items to be searched then the Fourth Amendment would be satisfied.[124]

The Supreme Court has never declared that the Fourth Amendment prohibits a warrant from cross-referencing other documents. In fact, the Court recognizes that most Courts of Appeals have held that a court may construe a warrant with reference to a supporting application or affidavit if the warrant uses appropriate words of incorporation, and if the supporting document accompanies the warrant.[125]

"It has long been held that the presence of a search warrant serves a high function, and that high function is not necessarily vindicated when some other document, somewhere, says something about the objects of the search, but the contents of that document are neither known to the person whose home is being searched nor available for her inspection."[126]

The Court in Ixcolgonzalez did not disagree with the concept that simultaneous delivery of supporting documents with the CASS may be a means of incorporation.[127]

C. Scope of a Search

To assess whether a search is reasonable, we must assess, "on the one hand, the degree to which [the search] intrudes upon an individual's privacy and, on the other, the degree to which it is needed for the promotion of legitimate governmental interests." United States v. Gurczynski, 76 M.J. 381, 386

D. Good Faith Exception

To begin, the good faith exception applies to searches authorized by a commander.[129] The "good-faith inquiry is confined to the objectively ascertainable question whether a reasonably well trained officer would have known that the search was illegal in light of all of the circumstances."[130] Even where evidence was obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure, it may be still be used if it meets the requirements of good-faith exception:

(a) The search or seizure resulted from an authorization to search, seize, or apprehend issued by an individual competent to issue the authorization under M.R.E. 315(d) or from a search warrant or arrest warrant issued by competent civilian authority[…];

(b) the individual issuing the authorization or warrant had a substantial basis for determining the existence of probable cause or the official seeking and executing the authorization or warrant reasonably and in good faith believed that the individual issuing the authorization or warrant had a substantial basis for determining the existence of probable cause, and

(c) the officials seeking and executing the authorization or warrant reasonably and with good faith relied on the issuance of the authorization or warrant. Good faith is to be determined using an objective standard.[131]

Further "[searches] pursuant to a warrant will rarely require any deep inquiry into reasonableness," for "a warrant issued by a magistrate normally suffices to establish" that a law enforcement officer has "acted in good faith in conducting the search."[132] Nevertheless, "the officer's reliance on the magistrate's probable-cause determination and on the technical sufficiency of the warrant he issues must be objectively reasonable."[133]

Next, a law enforcement official does not have an objectively reasonable belief that there was a substantial basis for determining probable cause where the magistrate "was misled by information in an affidavit that the affiant knew was false or would have known was false except for his reckless disregard of the truth;" where the magistrate "wholly abandoned his judicial role" or was a mere rubber stamp for the police; and where the warrant is "so facially deficient – i.e., in failing to particularize the place to be searched or things to be seized – that executing officers cannot reasonably presume it to be valid…."[134] Additionally, there can be no objectively reasonable belief in a substantial basis for determining probable cause where the warrant was based on an affidavit "so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render official belief in its existence entirely unreasonable."[135]

E. Appreciable Deterrence

Evidence obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure made by a person acting in a governmental capacity is inadmissible against the accused if: (a) the accused makes a timely motion to suppress; (b) the accused had a reasonable expectation of privacy in the person, place, or property searched; and (c) exclusion of the evidence results in appreciable deterrence of future unlawful searches and seizures and the benefits of the deterrence outweigh the costs to the justice system.[136]

In United States v. Leon, the Supreme Court noted that it is the "magistrate's responsibility to determine whether the officer's allegations establish probable cause and, if so, to issue a warrant comporting in form with the requirements of the Fourth Amendment."[137] In the ordinary case, "an officer cannot be expected to question the magistrate's probable-cause determination or his judgment that the form of the warrant is technically sufficient."[138] "[Once] the warrant issues, there is literally nothing more the policeman can do in seeking to comply with the law."[139] Penalizing the officer for the magistrate's error, rather than his own, "cannot logically contribute to the deterrence of Fourth Amendment violations."[140] Finally, the Court found that "the marginal or nonexistent benefits produced by suppressing evidence obtained in objectively reasonable reliance on a subsequently invalidated search warrant cannot justify the substantial costs of exclusion."[141]

F. Inevitable Discovery

Evidence that was obtained as a result of an unlawful search or seizure may be used when the evidence would have been obtained even if such unlawful search or seizure had not been made.[142] "This doctrine may apply where it is reasonable to conclude officers would have

In United States v. Eppes, where the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces concluded a search of the accused's bags was beyond the scope of the search authorization, it nonetheless upheld the admission of the evidence obtained as a result of the search under the inevitable discovery exception.[145] In that case, the search authorization authorized the search of the accused and his personal vehicle, but not the accused's personal bags.[146] Upon executing the search, the law enforcement agents searched the bags, resulting in a search beyond the scope of the authorization, but within the confines of the affidavit, which requested authority to search the accused, his personal bags and his personal vehicle.[147] The Court stated: "It is likely the omission of the bags from the search authorization was simply a scrivener's error because the agent who swore the affidavit also apparently authored the search authorization signed by the magistrate. It seems incongruous that the agent would include the bags in the affidavit and then intentionally leave them out of the drafted search authorization.[148] Upon searching the bags, agents found evidence of a separate offense in plain view.[149] They stopped their search and obtained an additional search authorization to collect evidence of the separate offense.[150] In upholding admission of evidence obtained as a result of the search of the bags under the inevitable discovery doctrine, the Court reasoned the agents would have applied for and received authorization to search the bags had they recognized the discrepancy in the authorization omitting the bags.[151] Further, the Court found "no valid policy reason for applying the exclusionary rule."[152]

III. VOLUNTARY STATEMENTS

Article 31(b), UCMJ provides:

> No person subject to this chapter may interrogate, or request any statement from, an accused or a person suspected of an offense without first informing him of the nature of the accusation and advising him that he does not have to make any statement regarding the offense of which he is accused or suspected and that any statement made by him may be used as evidence against him in a trial by court-martial.

Article 31(b) warnings encompass the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination's two distinct rights: the right to silence and the right to counsel during custodial pretrial questioning.[153]

"Such warnings are required when "(1) a person subject to the UCMJ, (2) interrogates or requests any statement, (3) from an accused or person suspected of an offense, and (4) the statements regard the offense of which the person questioned is accused or suspected."[154]

"Whether a person is a suspect is an objective question that is answered by considering all the facts and circumstances at the time of the interview to determine whether the military questioner believed or reasonably should have believed that the servicemember committed an offense."[155]

At times it can also be appropriate to consider the subjective view, looking at "what the investigator, in fact, believed, and . . . decid[ing] if the investigator considered the interrogated person to be a suspect."[156] Designating someone a suspect for Article 31(b), UCMJ, purposes requires more than merely a "hunch."[157]

"The purpose of informing a suspect or accused of the nature of the accusation is to orient him to the transaction or incident in which he is allegedly involved."[158] "It is not necessary to spell out the details . . . with technical nicety."[159] The warning need only inform an accused "of the general nature of the allegation, to include the area of suspicion that focuses the person toward the circumstances surrounding the event."[160]

A waiver of Article 31(b), UCMJ and Fifth Amendment rights must be voluntary, knowing, and intelligent.[161] Voluntariness turns on whether the accused's "will has been overborne."[162] "The necessary inquiry is whether the confession [or admission] is the product of an essentially free and unconstrained choice by its maker."[163] An accused "may waive his right to remain silent even if the [accused] does not know the specific questions the authorities intend to ask."[164]

Whether an accused's will has been overborne in a particular case, and whether a waiver is knowing and intelligent, depends on the "totality of all surrounding circumstances[.]"[165] Factors considered include "the youth of the accused, his lack of education, or low intelligence, the lack of any advice to the accused of his constitutional right, the length of detention, the repeated and prolonged nature of the questioning, and the use of physical punishment such as the deprivation of food or sleep", and the accused's experience, education, background, capacity to understand, nature of the rights and their warnings, and the consequences of waiving rights.[166] No one criterion is controlling.[167]

The Constitution is not concerned with moral and psychological pressures to confess emanating from sources other than official coercion, such as an accused's fear for his future.[168] The fact that a suspect chooses to speak after a rights advisement is highly probative.[169] The presence or absence of tactics during an interrogation are probative.[170] "Ploys to mislead a suspect or lull him into a false sense of security" may be utilized without automatic suppression.[171] Even "a misrepresentation by police that a cohort has confessed or that a companion has identified the accused as a perpetrator, while relevant to a determination of voluntariness, would not render an otherwise voluntary statement involuntary."[172] Mild-mannered forms of questioning weigh in favor of finding confessions voluntary.[173] "Not only must we examine the circumstances

ARGUMENT

I. THE SEARCH OF CSSN COPELAND'S BARRACKS ROOM ON 3 JUNE WAS A VALID SEARCH.

a. THE CASS ISSUED ON 2 JUNE 2025 WAS VALID. THE CASS DESCRIBED THE ITEMS TO BE SEIZED WITH PARTICULARITY.

Defense misunderstands the purpose and scope of the CASS that authorized the search of the barracks room. The CASS was issued to investigate CS3 A.R.'s unauthorized absence. The supporting affidavit details the facts surrounding CS3 A.R.'s absence, her last known movements, and the need to locate evidence bearing on where she had gone or whether she was in danger. Except for a single typographical error in the header, the authorization is titled with CS3 A.R.'s name, further underscoring its purpose.

It is entirely reasonable—and often necessary—for investigators to search for "other evidence of the offense," including the victim's personal items, clothing, backpack, bus or plane tickets, travel receipts, or anything indicating where she went or whether she was hiding. Likewise, searching for potential biological evidence such as blood or DNA is a routine and reasonable investigative step when determining a missing person's location or condition. Defense's attempt to recast the CASS as targeting CSSN Copeland ignores both the factual context and the plain language of the affidavit. The search was properly authorized and directly related to locating the missing victim who was in a UA status, and any evidence or tips of where she may be from the last place she had been seen.

b. THE AREAS IN WHICH BLOOD WAS FOUND WAS WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE CASS

It was also objectively reasonable for investigators executing the CASS to look inside a locked closet while searching for a missing person. When a service member is in an unauthorized absence status and potentially in danger, investigators must consider the full range of possibilities—including that the individual may be hiding, injured, unconscious, or otherwise unable to respond. Closets, particularly locked ones, are common locations where a missing person might be concealed, voluntarily or involuntarily. A closet may also contain the victim's personal effects, clothing, travel bags, identification, transportation receipts, or other indicia of where she had gone or whether she was preparing to leave. Additionally, investigators could reasonably believe a locked closet might contain biological evidence—such as blood, bodily fluids, or signs of injury—bearing on the victim's physical condition. In an investigation to find a missing person, it would be unreasonable not to check a locked closet. The decision to open it was therefore well within the scope of the authorized search and entirely consistent with the goal of locating the missing person and assessing her condition.

[174] Ellis, 57 M.J. at 379.

c. CSSN COPELAND ALSO SIGNED A PASS FOR THE SEARCH OF HIS BARRACKS ROOM ON 3 JUNE 2025

Defense also ignores that CSSN Copeland signed a PASS at the conclusion of his interview authorizing NCIS to search among other things, his barracks room. CSSN Copeland knowingly and voluntarily authorized the search and independently validated the agents' authority to search the barracks room. The Defense cannot simply disregard this subsequent voluntary consent, which operates as an independent and lawful basis for this search.[175]

d. CSSN COPELAND'S SUITEMATE SIGNED A PASS FOR THE COMMON AREA OF THE BARRACKS ROOM – BLUESTAR ILLUMINATED

Moreover prior to the search, AR Calisse, CSSN Copeland's suitemate also gave authorization to search the areas in which he had control. This would include the common area which also through the use of Bluestar indicated the presence of blood.[176]

e. GOOD FAITH EXCEPTION WOULD APPLY

Here, under M.R.E. 311(c)(3), even if the search authorization is found to be defective by this Court, the Good Faith Exception should apply. First, there was a search authorization issued by a person with authority to issue it, the Commanding Officer (CO) of Naval Station Norfolk. Under the second prong, the CO "had a substantial basis for determining the existence of probable cause."[177] Under the last prong, the NCIS search team "reasonably and with good faith relied on the issuance of the authorization."[178] In short, Special Agent Gokey presented a proper affidavit to the CO, and her team relied on it.

f. INEVITABLE DISCOVERY WOULD APPLY

Even if this Court were to find the initial search of the barracks room, the inevitable discovery doctrine squarely applies. First, CSSN Copeland signed a PASS for the search of his barracks room during his 3 June interview. That fact alone would have led to the discovery of the items found in the initial search of his barracks room. Moreover, other independent, contemporaneously developing evidence—wholly unrelated to any evidence found inside the barracks room or based on this PASS—would have produced probable cause for a valid search authorization.

On 3 June, CSSN Copeland voluntarily told law enforcement that he had been texting the victim on 1 June, and independent of that statement, on 4 June 2025, a 2703(d) order from AT&T confirmed that he contacted CS3 A.R.'s phone multiple times on the evening of 1 June 2025. On 3 June, investigators also learned that he borrowed his roommate's car overnight, with license-plate-reader data placing the vehicle on relevant routes during the critical time period.

[178] M.R.E. 311(c)(3)(C).

Most significantly, law enforcement discovered blood in the hallway and stairwell immediately outside the barracks room—locations requiring no search authorization—and subsequent testing confirmed the blood belonged to the victim. These facts, taken together, would have inevitably led to the issuance of a search authorization for the barracks room meaning the contested evidence would have been lawfully discovered regardless of any alleged defect in the initial search.

g. THE EXCLUSIONARY RULE DOES NOT PROHIBIT ADMISSION OF THIS EVIDENCE

Under M.R.E. 311(a)(3), "exclusion of this evidence" would not "result[] in appreciable deterrence of future unlawful searches . . . and the benefits of such deterrence do not outweigh the costs to the justice system." First, there is no conduct from the agents to deter, as they presented evidence of a Sailor who was in an unauthorized absence status to a person who could properly issue a search authorization and then acted upon that authorization. There is no government malfeasance here. Their conduct reflects diligence, not misconduct. Far from engaging in any overreach, agents took deliberate, lawful measures to ensure the investigation proceeded in compliance with the 4th Amendment. Even if there were conduct to deter, the benefits of deterring that conduct do not in any way outweigh the costs to the justice system of excluding evidence of blood and DNA of a deceased Sailor from the last location where she was seen alive.

II. CSSN COPELAND'S 3 JUNE AND 6 JUNE STATEMENTS ARE ADMISSIBLE AND WERE LAWFULLY OBTAINED

A. BECAUSE CSSN COPELAND WAS PROPERLY ADVISED OF HIS RIGHTS AND THE TOTALITY OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES SHOWS VOLUNTARINESS, THE 3 JUNE 2025 INTERVIEW IS ADMISSIBLE

i. INVESTIGATORS COMPLIED WITH ARTICLE 31(b) BY ADVISING CSSN COPELAND OF THE MISCONDUCT UNDER INVESTIGATION; ARTICLE 118 WAS NOT AMONG THE OFFENSES FOR WHICH HE WAS THEN A SUSPECT

Investigators properly oriented CSSN Copeland to the offenses for which he was suspected at the time—namely, Article 107, UCMJ based on the inconsistencies that were beginning to emerge in his account of 28 and 29 May, and Article 86, UCMJ due to his own unauthorized absence.

First, he was not a suspect for Article 118 at the time and NCIS did not need to advise him that he was suspected of the murder of CS3 A.R. At the time of the 31(b) advisement and interview, CS3 A.R. had only been missing for approximately five days and there was no direct evidence that she was deceased. After issuing a BOLO, law enforcement continued to receive multiple tips regarding sightings and her potential whereabouts. Moreover, NCIS were aware of the victim's documented history of suicidal ideations and her prior statements expressing self-harm. Multiple witnesses to include, ET3 Rich, HT3 Gillespie, and the victim's mother, Ms. Castle, described to law enforcement CS3 A.R.'s mental health history. NCIS searched for her at NMCP looking for any hospital admission. CS3 Garcia Barrera disclosure to law enforcement that CS3 A.R. had even talked about going to visit in a friend in New York and potentially going UA. Based on the information available on that date, it was entirely reasonable—and factually supported—to believe that she may have voluntarily left CSSN Copeland's residence and harmed herself, or that CSSN Copeland was potentially assisting her in evading law enforcement due to her mental state, ongoing personal issues on the ship, or her UA status at the time. Nothing at the time of the interview elevated the matter to a suspected murder. Moreover, aside from some inconsistencies, CSSN Copeland had given an entirely plausible account of events and multiple witnesses reported that CS3 A.R. was alive on the morning of 29 May 2025.

NCIS's own actions after the search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room also demonstrate they did not suspect CSSN Copeland of murder at the time of his 3 June interview. First of all, the questioning agents were not aware that blood had been found in the barracks. This occurred either at the very end of the interview and they were not notified or after it's conclusion. But even after completing the search of his barracks room (and finding the blood), agents returned the barracks room to him[179] – an objective indication that they did not suspect him of murder or any foul play at that time. Indeed, the blood could have been anyone's (including CSSN Copeland) or even pre-dated CSSN Copeland's occupancy.

Even assuming arguendo that he should have been advised of Article 118, advising him about being suspected of Article 86 and 107 offenses in relation to the disappearance of CS3 AR was sufficient to orient him to the incident he was being questioned about, which is his interactions with CS3 A.R. in his barracks room, the inconsistent explanations he gave about those interactions, and both her and his UA statuses. There is no scenario in which he would not have understood that law enforcement was trying to locate CS3 A.R. and was looking for information from the last person to have been with her. That is sufficient to orient him to the incident at issue.

In United States v. Metz,[180] CAAF found Article 31(b) rights were not required when law enforcement merely viewed the subject as a person of interest and not a suspect. In Metz, NCIS investigated a suspected intentional fire inside a maintenance building at Camp Pendleton. NCIS interviewed a noncommissioned officer (NCO) in charge of the building who identified the accused and another Marine as two who possessed keys to the building - among potential others. The NCO told investigators that a particular set of belongings had been destroyed in the fire and the owner of those items had recently counseled the accused. He further said the accused was a "problem child," "has a grudge," and "if anyone was going to start a fire it would have been [the accused]."[181] NCIS next spoke with the accused in his barracks room, they informed him that they were investigating an incident at his workplace, but did not inform of Article 31(b) rights. The accused made several statements to law enforcement – to include he had no knowledge of the incident, he had been at his barracks all morning and he believed his key could be lost.[182]

CAAF agreed with the trial court and NMCCA when it found that Article 31(b) warning were not required during the law enforcement interview in the accused's barracks room. CAAF citing United States v. Swift, noted, "Designating someone a suspect for Article 31(b), UCMJ, purposes requires more than merely a "hunch." [183] The same is true in this case. A mere "hunch" that the accused may have caused the disappearance of CS3 A.R. is not enough to require Article 31(b) warnings. The evidence available at the time could not have supported anything beyond a hunch.

ii. THE TOTALITY OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES ON 3 JUNE DEMONSTRATES THAT CSSN COPELAND'S STATEMENTS WERE VOLUNTARY

Applied here, every Schneckloth factor supports a finding of voluntariness. The interview lasted a little over three hours - ending before 0100. CSSN Copeland was offered and took several breaks throughout the interview. Prior to arriving at NCIS, CSSN Copeland was relaxing with a friend at his barracks room, playing video games and watching TV. There is no evidence of prolonged, repeated, or coercive questioning. Defense makes no argument that CSSN Copeland is not of normal intelligence or suffering from any mental or cognitive impairments. He was properly advised of his Article 31(b) rights by Special Agent Gokey, stated he understood them, and signed the written warning. There was no deprivation of food, multiple breaks were taken, and despite Defense's assertion that CSSN Copeland "expressed to agents several times throughout the entire interview that he was tired and wanted to go home" these words are found nowhere in the transcript of his interview. In fact, it was not until the very end of the interview that CSSN Copeland made any reference to wanting to go home. Special Agent Duffy then terminated the interview to make that happen.

The interview is devoid of any threats, promises, or physical coercion. The agents' tone throughout the recorded interview was calm and conversational. CSSN Copeland answered questions coherently and demonstrated full capacity to understand the situation, the rights he had been advised of, and the consequences of speaking with investigators. In fact, this was CSSN Copeland's fourth occasion to receive a rights advisement in the past year.[184] Under these circumstances, and considering both his personal characteristics and the conditions of the interview, the totality of the evidence demonstrates that his statements were voluntary.

B. BECAUSE CSSN COPELAND WAS PROPERLY ADVISED OF HIS RIGHTS AND THE TOTALITY OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES SHOWS VOLUNTARINESS, THE 6 JUNE 2025 INTERVIEW IS ALSO ADMISSIBLE

1. INVESTIGATORS COMPLIED WITH ARTICLE 31(b) BY ADVISING CSSN COPELAND OF THE MISCONDUCT UNDER INVESTIGATION;

---

[183] Id.

[184] The Accused had been interviewed by NCIS once regarding ABHAN C.R. and twice regarding CSSN S.S.

ARTICLE 118 WAS NOT AMONG THE OFFENSES FOR WHICH HE WAS THEN A SUSPECT

Again, investigators properly oriented CSSN Copeland to the offenses for which he was suspected at the time—namely, Article 107 and his knowledge of the possible death of CS3 A.R. Having been properly advised of his rights, he waived those rights and agreed to speak with investigators.

At the time of the interview, no body had been found, and no DNA analysis had linked any blood to the victim. Investigators merely knew that blood had been found CSSN Copeland's room, with no evidence yet connecting it to CSSN A.R.. It is neither unreasonable nor uncommon for a person's own blood to appear in a space where they store clothing, shoes, and personal items. Nor does it strain credibility to acknowledge that a Navy barracks room is, at best, generally unsanitary—making the presence of biological material from multiple sources entirely plausible.

Defense enjoys the benefit of hindsight; investigators did not. The correct inquiry is what investigators reasonably believed at the time. At that stage, the victim remained missing; explanations other than murder remained viable; and CSSN Copeland's shifting and inconsistent accounts supported suspicion of false official statements, potentially to cover for her - not murder. Under these circumstances, the Article 107 advisement—combined with the advisement that he was suspected of having knowledge of the victim's possible death—more than adequately oriented him to the incident under investigation for purposes of Article 31(b).

Just as CAAF held in Metz, being a labeled a "person of interest" is not synonymous with being a "suspect" for purposes of Article 31(b). As Metz confirms, a person of interest is not a suspect, so Article 31(b) warnings are not required. Here, investigators nonetheless provided rights and expressly oriented CSSN Copeland to their belief that CS3 A.R. was possibly dead and if so, CSSN Copeland may have knowledge of that fact – affording him greater protection than Metz requires.

Even assuming arguendo that investigators should have suspected him of Article 118, the advisements actually given—including that he was suspected of Article 107 offenses arising from the victim's disappearance and that he was suspected of having knowledge of the possible death of the CS3 A.R.—fully oriented him to the incident under investigation. Advising a suspect that law enforcement believes he may have knowledge of a person's death is not a peripheral or ambiguous statement; it alerts any reasonable person that investigators are exploring the circumstances surrounding that person's disappearance, possible demise, and the suspect's potential involvement in or awareness of those circumstances. In practical effect, such an advisement directs CSSN Copeland to the same factual core that underlies an Article 118 inquiry—the events leading to the victim's disappearance, CSSN Copeland's last known interactions with her, and whether he played any role in or has information about her death. That advisement sufficiently orients him to the gravity and nature of the suspected misconduct.

Defense also places undue weight on the fact that the Office of Special Trial Counsel (OSTC) was involved at this early stage. That observation is legally meaningless. At the time, General Crimes and OSTC—though separate commands—routinely collaborated on cases that might develop into covered offenses as occurred here. Furthermore, CSSN Copeland already had two open Article 120, UCMJ investigations, both of which were active with OSTC.[185] As a known suspect from those cases, OSTC would naturally be involved. Nonetheless, OSTC's early awareness does not retroactively transform the investigation into a murder inquiry, nor does it alter what investigators reasonably believed when they advised CSSN Copeland of the offenses for which he was actually suspected.

CSSN Copeland's statements were voluntary under any fair application of the totality-of-the-circumstances analysis. The interview occurred mid-morning at 0842 or after any prolonged detention. At the outset, agents expressly told him that he was in "full control"[186] of the process and emphasized that he could terminate the interview at any time. They did not merely recite this once—they paused during the interview to reiterate that he could stop the questioning whenever he wished, underscoring the truly voluntary nature of the encounter.[187] Moreover, this was far from his first rights advisement. By this point in 2025, CSSN Copeland had his Article 31(b) rights read to him five separate times.[188] He was therefore no novice to the process, and he demonstrated both the familiarity and the capacity to understand his rights and make informed decisions about whether to speak. Nothing about the circumstances—mid-day timing, repeated reminders of his control, absence of coercive tactics—supports a finding that his will was overborne. Under these facts, his statements were plainly voluntary.

III. THE SEARCH OF CSSN COPELAND'S PHONE WAS LAWFUL, AND THE RESULTING EVIDENCE IS ADMISSIBLE

A. INDEPENDENT OF THE VALID PASS, THE LAWFUL CASS AUTHORIZED THE SEARCH AND RENDERS THE EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE

NCIS lawfully obtained a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure (CASS) on 5 June 2025 before conducting any forensic examination of CSSN Copeland's phone. The Defense does not challenge the validity of that authorization, and that fact alone renders the resulting evidence admissible. Although the phone was seized pursuant to a PASS, it was—more importantly and entirely independent of the PASS—also seized on the basis of probable cause. When CSSN Copeland arrived for his 3 June interview, his iPhone 15 was seized.[189] His interview concluded in the early morning hours of 4 June. On 4 June, NCIS started the extraction of CSSN Copeland's iPhone 15. A digital extraction is simply an extension of the lawful seizure and a routine step in preserving electronic evidence. In the early morning hours of 5 June 2025, the CASS was granted. Special Agent Davison then commenced his search of the iPhone 15 on 5 June 2025 pursuant to the CASS. Because NCIS secured a valid CASS prior to reviewing or searching any data on the device, the subsequent search was lawful, and suppression is unwarranted.

B. CSSN COPELAND CONSENTED TWICE TO THE SEARCH OF HIS IPHONE 15

By words and action, CSSN Copeland authorized NCIS to search his iPhone 15. Special Agent Gokey asked, "So, I would like then to look at your phone…Are you cool with that?" CSSN Copeland responds, "Yeah." His oral consent was immediately reinforced with his actions – identifying his phone to Special Agent Gokey as an iPhone15. He then actively enabled the search by giving agents the passcode to unlock the phone. It is patently unreasonable to believe that one who intends to withhold consent hands investigators the digital keys to their device. CSSN Copeland further confirmed his willingness when he stated he understood the purpose of the search, understood he could revoke consent at any time, and understood the agents did not have a warrant, yet chose to allow the search to proceed. At no point did he express refusal to permit the search.

Defense urges the Court to focus on CSSN Copeland's delay in the act of signing the PASS as evidence of refusal, but that argument is a red herring and not one supported by case law. When evaluating voluntary consent that involves oral consent, but refusal to sign a written consent form "as a general matter a voluntary oral consent to search is not invalidated by a subsequent refusal to provide written consent to search".[190] The written PASS serves to memorialize the exchange between investigators and CSSN Copeland—a procedural safeguard arguably rooted in an era when interviews were not routinely recorded. It is not the signature itself that determines voluntariness; it is the interaction, advisement, and conduct captured on video that controls. CSSN Copeland had already orally consented, provided the agents with his phone's make, model, and passcode, and affirmatively indicated he understood the nature and consequences of the search. The Court must evaluate voluntariness based on the totality of circumstances—not on the timing of when a written form was signed. Defense's focus on paperwork timing ignores the governing legal test and cannot defeat the clear and convincing evidence of voluntary consent.

Defense also asks the Court to treat CSSN Copeland's questions—whether he would get his phone back and whether he could call his mother—as revocations of consent or indications that he had not truly consented in the first place. That argument collapses when scrutinized. These questions are not revocations. At no point did CSSN Copeland state or imply, "stop," "do not search," or anything approximating a withdrawal of consent. Instead, he continued to cooperate, remained engaged, and took no action—verbal or otherwise—to halt the search. His inquiries reflect nothing more than a desire to understand logistical consequences and to communicate with a family member, neither of which constitute legal revocation under Mil. R. Evid. 314(e)(3). It is a fair question of law enforcement to ask when and if personal property will be returned – especially a companion of daily life – a smart phone. Further it's a logical assumption that CSSN Copeland would believe he would have to use his phone to call his mother opposed to NCIS providing him with a phone. His questions were reasonable, but not revocations. A revocation must be unequivocal. Here, CSSN Copeland's words and conduct did the opposite:

[190] *United States v. Green, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 206238, 72

he maintained consent, provided access information, and never once attempted to limit or terminate the search. Defense's attempt to recast routine questions as rescissions of consent is unsupported by law and contradicted by the events of his 3 June interview.

And this same logic applies to his request for his phone while at his barracks room after the interview. Asking about when he may get his phone, is not a revocation of consent.

Even if this Court finds that CSSN Copeland unequivocally requested that his phone be returned to him either during the interview or at his barracks room afterward, that request affects only the seizure of his phone – not the search. The Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces analyzed a similar situation in United States v. Eugene.[191] In Eugene, the accused gave his wife possession of his cellphone while he was on a field exercise where cellphone use was prohibited. While in possession of the phone, the accused's wife discovered messages and nude photos and videos of women who his wife suspected were underage. The accused's wife turned his phone over to law enforcement, unlocking the phone with her fingerprint. A basic search of the accused's phone did not yield any items of evidentiary value. Four days after his phone was seized by law enforcement, the accused was interviewed. During the interview, the accused asked that his cell phone be returned. Law enforcement denied his request. A thorough search of the accused's phone was conducted months later and several items of evidentiary value were recovered.

At trial, Defense moved to suppress the search of the phone. The trial court denied the. motion citing that the request to return the phone was an attempt to withdraw consent to seize but "did not amount to a withdrawal of consent to search."[192]

In Eugene, the CAAF reminds practitioners that "search" and "seizure" are distinct concepts.[193] The Court noted, "Revoking consent to one does not necessarily revoke consent to the other."[194] In affirming the lower court's decision, the Court noted the military judge found that Appellant "never told SA Nations or anyone else in CID not to search his cell phone or that he refused consent to search his cell phone." Instead, the accused merely "asked . . . if he could have his cell phone back, most likely so he could continue to use it.[195]" CAAF upheld the trial court's rationale that this request – at best – "implicated the seizure of the phone and not the search."[196] CAAF specifically noted that at no point did the accused ask the agents not to search his phone and the request for the phone to be returned came on the heels of the accused giving law enforcement identifying information about his phone and the keys to access the data therein – "his phone number, email address, user name for Kik and password for Kik."[197]

Like in Eugene and assuming arguendo that in this case CSSN Copeland asked that his phone be returned to him to call his mother, he was revoking a consent to seize, not consent to search. Once the seizure is complete consent cannot be revoked.[198] But notwithstanding, CSSN Copeland's consent to allow NCIS to seize his iPhone 15, NCIS also lawfully seized his phone upon arrival at the NCIS Field Office pursuant to M.R.E. 316(c).

Ultimately, CSSN Copeland never unequivocally revoked his consent to search. At most, he inquired about the return of his phone—an issue that pertains to seizure, not search. And even that request, had it been a revocation, would have been legally ineffective because the lawful seizure had already occurred.

Further underscoring that CSSN Copeland consented to a search of his iPhone 15, agents ended the interview by presenting CSSN Copeland with a second PASS covering his backpack, the barracks room, and his electronic devices—explicitly mentioning the cell phone he had already agreed could be searched. He demonstrated understanding, asked questions about limiting the scope, and later signed a second PASS authorizing the same searches. Despite this, Defense fixates on a single moment when—visibly irritated—CSSN Copeland said "No" as the first PASS was placed in front of him and immediately followed it with, "I'm just trying to go home." Defense now asks the Court to pretend that isolated "No," stripped of all context, somehow constituted a revocation of consent. That argument is untenable.

In context, CSSN Copeland was refusing to engage in further conversation or paperwork, not withdrawing permission for the search. He did not object to agents searching his phone, did not tell them to stop and never once expressed a desire to revoke consent. A revocation must be unequivocal and specifically directed at the search. Nothing about CSSN Copeland's irritated dismissal meets that standard. Defense's attempt to elevate a moment of frustration into a legal revocation is not merely misguided—it is contradicted by CSSN Copeland's words, actions, and written authorization which immediately preceded. It defies logic to claim that CSSN Copeland both granted consent and, in the very same breath, withdrew it.

Indeed, CSSN Copeland's own conduct demonstrates that he wanted law enforcement to take possession of his phone—not that he objected to it. His behavior reflects a clear effort to manipulate what investigators would ultimately find: he texted CSSN A.R. on the evening of 1 June despite knowing she was already dead and he placed his phone in Airplane Mode in an apparent attempt to avoid detection of his movements. Understanding that agents were actively trying to place his whereabouts during the period of unauthorized absence, he also knew that when his phone was not in Airplane Mode, its location data would likely place him at his barracks – an alibi. These actions are entirely inconsistent with someone attempting to shield the device from law enforcement; they instead reflect an individual trying—unsuccessfully—to outsmart the investigation.

III. ALTERNATIVELY, THE GOOD-FAITH AND INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY EXCEPTIONS BAR SUPPRESSION

Even assuming arguendo that the CASS or CSSN Copeland's multiple consents were somehow deficient, suppression is still unwarranted because the evidence extracted from his phone would have been inevitably discovered through lawful investigative avenues already underway.

First, NCIS had already lawfully seized the phone at the time consent was initially provided. Once a device is validly seized, investigators may and in – this case did - continue to pursue independent investigative steps that would inevitably authorize a forensic search. That is exactly what occurred here.

But even if the phone had not been seized, as the investigation progressed, NCIS obtained a lawful 2703(d) order from CSSN Copeland's cellular provider showing that he sent text messages to the CS3 A.R. mere hours before the White Jeep he borrowed was captured via license plate reader technology in the early morning of 2 June travelling in and around Hampton Blvd and 24th Street. This temporal proximity between potential communication with CSSN A.R. and his access to a vehicle would have underscored the evidentiary value of CSSN Copeland's phone.

Lastly, the physical evidence obtained in this case would provide another independent legal basis to obtain and search CS3 Copeland's phone. Once forensic analysis later confirmed that blood found in CSSN Copeland's room matched CS3 A.R. investigators undoubtedly had probable cause to search any device capable of storing communications, photographs, or geolocation data related to the victim's disappearance. Additionally even in areas of the barracks that did not require any search authorizations, hallways and stairwells, law enforcement identified brown reddish substances which after testing were a DNA match for CS3 A.R.

Ultimately, the contents of CSSN Copeland's phone would have been discovered as a matter of course through routine, lawful investigative developments—entirely independent of any challenged consent or authorization. The inevitable discovery doctrine squarely applies - As does the good faith exception. First, the CASS was issued by a person fully empowered to do so—the Commanding Officer of Naval Station Norfolk. Second, the CO had a substantial basis to determine that probable cause existed based on the information presented. Third, the executing NCIS agents reasonably relied on that authorization and did so in good faith. Taken together, NCIS submitted a facially sufficient affidavit, the CO exercised his authority appropriately, and investigators justifiably relied on the authorization.

And even if not, "exclusion of this evidence" would not "result[] in appreciable deterrence of future unlawful searches . . . and the benefits of such deterrence do not outweigh the costs to the justice system."[199] The exclusionary rule has no application under these circumstances. Suppression is unwarranted.

RESULTS OF INITIAL CONTACT WITH NORFOLK POLICE DEPARTMENT

1. On 31May25, Reporting Agent (RA) was contacted by Officer James STALCUP, CIV, Norfolk Police Department (NPD) about two (2) sailors who were considered to be in an Unauthorized Absence (UA) status. STALCUP advised ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95) called and wanted to report his ex-girlfriend CSSN [redacted] V/A.R. (V/F [redacted] V/A.R., USN, DDG 95 missing because no one had talked to her or seen her since 29May25. STALCUP noted ET3 RICH stated V/ [redacted] V/A.R. had been with CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN , DDG 95, the other sailor reported missing.

2. STALCUP stated he called DDG 95 and spoke with LTJG David DEMAZURE, USN, DDG 95 who is the legal office for DDG 95. STALCUP advised he confirmed with LTJG DEMAZURE that V/ [redacted] V/A.R. and S/COPELAND were UA from DDG 95 and the ship has had no contact with them.

3. STALCUP provided V/ [redacted] V/A.R. phone number which he attempted to call but his call went straight to voicemail. STALCUP did not have any contact information for S/COPELAND. RA attempted to call the number for V/ [redacted] V/A.R. provided by STALCUP but the call went straight to voicemail.

4. At 1622 hours, RA located a contact number for S/COPELAND. When called S/COPELAND's mother Rochell BROWN, CIV answered. BROWN advised she had not talked to S/COPELAND in a few days. When asked if she had a phone number for him she sated his phone had been turned off and talked with him through social media. RA asked BORWN if she could reach out to S/COPELAND. BROWN stated she would attempt to contact him.

5. RA contacted the duty agent, Special Agent Carrie Johnson, and provided her with the relevant details and steps already taken.

RESULTS OF INITIAL CONTACT WITH COMMAND, MTAC, AND ET3 DANIEL RICH, USN ON 31MAY25

1. On 31MAY25, Reporting Agent (RA) received a duty notification at 1637 hours, from Special Agent Jordan KENNEDY, in reference to missing persons concerns involving two sailors assigned to USS James E. Williams (DDG 95). SA KENNEDY reported receiving information from Norfolk Police Department (NPD) that ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95 was attempting to file a missing person's report for CSSN [redacted] (V/[redacted], USN, DDG 95. SA KENNEDY informed RA that ET3 RICH stated V/[redacted] was last seen with CSSN Jerimiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95. Additionally, SA KENNEDY stated he had already spoken with LTJG David DEZMURE, USN, Legal Officer, DDG-95, who confirmed awareness of two sailors missing after not reporting for duty. SA KENNEDY further advised his attempts were unsuccessful to contact both V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND. At 1635 hours, RA informed the Duty Supervisor, Special Agent (SSA) Matthew MILLER, with the information received from SA KENNEDY.

2. At approximately 1728 hours, RA made contact with the Multi Threat Assessment Center (MTAC) to request assistance in pinging V/[redacted]'s cellphone. RA spoke with Janice BAILEY, MTAC, who noted that without V/[redacted] experiencing immediate suicidal ideations or in harm, she would not be able to conduct a ping for S/[redacted]'s cellphone. RA re-connected with LTJG DEMAZURE via telephone [redacted]), who reiterated his awareness of V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND not showing up for duty. LTJG DEMAZURE stated that V/[redacted] last reported on 28MAY25. He also confirmed contact was made with S/COPELAND on 29MAY25. S/COPELAND was instructed to report to duty, but S/COPELAND never reported to work. LTJG DEZMURE acknowledged about being informed about ET3 RICH filing the missing person's report for V/[redacted]. LTLG DEMAZURE did not indicate command had any safety concerns surrounding V/[redacted] and S/COPELAND.

3. ON 31MAY25, RA made contact with ET3 RICH via telephone [redacted]) in reference to the captioned investigation. ET3 RICH stated he last communicated with V/[redacted] around 0230 hours, on 29MAY25. ET3 RICH stated V/[redacted] was crying and made a comment about needing his help. ET3 RICH attempted to track V/[redacted] cellphone location which led him to the Willis Hall, X2 Barracks, located on Norfolk Naval Station (NOB). ET3 RICH advised he was able to track V/[redacted] location until approximately 0430 hours, at which time he stated V/[redacted]'s phone powered down. ET3 RICH advised after speaking with V/[redacted]'s friends (NFI), the last person V/[redacted] was in contact with was S/COPELAND on 29MAY25. ET3 RICH advised he requested a

1. On 01JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) made initial contact with Esmeralda CASTLE, CIV, mother of CSSN [redacted] V/A.R. (V/[redacted] V/A.R. USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) in regard to her daughter's missing status.

2. This contact was conducted via cellphone and not recorded.

3. RA attempted to contact CASTLE two times via phone call and followed up with a text message, with no response. After speaking with ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG-95 and learning he was in contact with CASTLE, RA instructed ET3 RICH to ask CASTLE to call RA.

4. RA asked CASTLE when the last time she spoke with V/[redacted] V/A.R. and CASTLE stated she had not spoken with V/[redacted] V/A.R. in approximately a week, however, V/[redacted] V/A.R. did attempt a Facetime call Wednesday 28MAY25, but CASTLE did not answer. CASTLE stated V/[redacted] V/A.R. most likely called her younger sister after she did not answer, but CASTLE was not certain. RA gathered contact information for the 3 siblings of V/[redacted] V/A.R. to contact.

5. RA asked CASTLE if she had access to V/[redacted] V/A.R. banking records, which CASTLE stated she did not.

6. RA asked CASTLE if she would be concerned about V/[redacted] V/A.R. s mental health or concerned V/[redacted] V/A.R. may commit suicide, which CASTLE stated she did not think V/[redacted] V/A.R. would have committed suicide. However, CASTLE did disclose V/[redacted] V/A.R. had gone into mental health treatment sometime in the last year for inpatient treatment. RA followed up asking if CASTLE knew the reasoning for the inpatient treatment, which CASTLE responded, V/[redacted] V/A.R. was under a lot of pressure at work due to them being short staffed and V/[redacted] V/A.R. was also having problems with sexual harassment onboard DDG-95. RA followed up asking if CASTLE knew who was sexually harassing V/[redacted] V/A.R. which CASTLE stated an older white male.

7. RA asked CASTLE what, if anything had she been told about V/[redacted] V/A.R. missing. CASTLE stated she had been contacted by ET3 RICH, and he was concerned about V/[redacted] V/A.R. missing and to "not trust the command." RA asked CASTLE to explain further about not trusting the command. CASTLE stated ET3 RICH said they had lied to CASTLE and V/[redacted] V/A.R. was not found in a room, and she had not returned to work on Friday. CASTLE continued saying she called the Quarterdeck of DDG-95 and spoke to a Chief PARKER, who was identified as FCC Brad PARKER, USN, DDG-95. CASTLE stated FCC PARKER told

2. On June 1, 2025, NCIS commenced an investigation into accusations of a violation of Article 86, UCMJ committed by CSSN [redacted] V/A.R. [redacted] USN ("Accused"). I am the Lead Special Agent assigned to this investigation. The NCIS case number for the investigation is 01JUN25NFNF-00237-7MNA.

3. Due to the nature of the allegations, I determined it was a necessary investigative step to pursue and review the following categories of the Accused's financial records from Navy Federal Credit Union: Basic subscriber information and transactions pertaining to account number: [redacted] PII

4. These financial records are relevant and necessary to the investigation of the allegations against the Accused because the requested records will assist in identifying the location of the Accused and any means of transportation she may have utilized.

5. I have reason to believe that if the Accused is provided the customer notice that may be required under the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 that there is a substantial risk of destruction of endangering life or physical safety, flight from prosecution, or seriously jeopardizing an investigation or official proceeding or unduly delaying the same. I base my opinion on the following evidence and facts that I have observed and/or reviewed:

a. The suicidal ideation previously expressed by the Accused and her distressed state immediately prior to her entering a UA status; and

b. The nature of the offense as being in an unauthorized absence status will mean she will likely change her patterns to avoid being caught if she knows we are tracking her location.

was located. RA removed the motorcycle helmet from the desk and observed nothing of significance to the visible eye. RA then searched the trash can, there was a receipt located within the trashcan; however it was from approximately a month prior. PA searched the closet and nothing of significance was observed with the visible eye. RA looked through the dirty clothes hamper and did not see any staining on any of the clothing.

5. RA and PA then searched the common room area of V[PII] barracks and observed a plate of vegetables on the top shelf of the refrigerator. The vegetables observed where an onion, tomatoes, and jalapenos.

6. Nothing observed in V[PII] room nor in the common room alluded to any signs of foul play.

RESULTS OF INITIAL INTERVIEW OF CSSN JERMIAH COPELAND, USN

1. On 01Jun25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Jessica GOKEY interviewed CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95) regarding his knowledge of the whereabouts of V/[redacted] V/A.R. The interview took place in the lounge area on third floor of building X2, Willis Manor, located on Naval Station Norfolk (NOB), and was not recorded.

2. As background, V/[redacted] V/A.R. and S/COPELAND were placed into a Unauthorized Absence (UA) status subsequent to 29May25, after failing to report to work. On 01Jun25, after speaking with S/COPELAND's mother, NCIS and S/COPELAND's mother contacted Naval Station Norfolk (NOB) Base Police to conduct a follow-up health and welfare check on both S/COPELAND and V/[redacted] V/A.R. NCIS was advised that Security Forces received no answer at V/[redacted] V/A.R. door when they knocked on her barracks room located on NOB, Miller Hall, Room 1083.

3. During his interview, S/COPELAND described his relationship with V/[redacted] V/A.R. as co-workers. S/COPELAND stated he texted with V/[redacted] V/A.R. on Wednesday, 28May25 to discuss recipes and ingredients for tacos. S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] V/A.R. came over to his barracks room, made tacos and they both consumed alcohol. S/COPELAND explained V/[redacted] V/A.R. gradually became more upset as the night progressed and they spoke about her current and past romantic relationships. S/COPELAND stated V/[redacted] V/A.R. spoke on the phone to two (2) ex-boyfriends, both of which were confrontational calls. One call was with an ex-boyfriend he still believed was located in Texas (NFI) and the other call was with HT3 Michael GILLESPIE, USN, DDG 95.

4. S/COPELAND explained V/[redacted] V/A.R. and HT3 GILLESPIE argued over returning a motorcycle helmet and that HT3 GILLESPIE wanted it back. S/COPELAND said V/[redacted] V/A.R. explained her relationship with HT3 GILLESPIE was toxic and described her most recent ex-boyfriend, ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95, as at first being a sweetheart and then he wasn't. S/COPELAND said ET3 RICH and HT3 GILLESPIE do not get along, that they have issues with each other, and opined it was due to their relationships with V/[redacted] V/A.R. S/COPELAND said HT3 GILLESPIE has come to the galley on the ship a lot, which sometimes caused issues. S/COPELAND said he did not know of any instances of HT3 GILLESPIE being violent toward V/[redacted] V/A.R. and that HT3 GILLESPIE was more of a topic of conversation than ET3 RICH was during their evening together.

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA, USN

1. On 02JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Carrie JOHNSON interviewed CSSN Gladis GARCIA-BARRERA, USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95) regarding the whereabouts of CCSN [redacted V/A.R.] (V/[redacted V/A.R.] USN, DDG-95. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA was identified as a friend of V/[redacted V/A.R.]

2. The interview was conducted inside a government vehicle outside of CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA's barracks building, SP-29, onboard Naval Station Norfolk (NAVSTA Norfolk). RA and PA JOHNSON identified themselves via credentials.

3. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised that she only became close with V/[redacted V/A.R.] over the last month or so, and that they hung out together for the first time outside of work on 24MAY25. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that she mostly communicates with V/[redacted V/A.R.] on text message or Instagram. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA said the last time she received any communication from V/[redacted V/A.R.] was via Instagram at 2244 hours on Wednesday night, 28MAY25.

4. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA recalled that on 28MAY25, she and V/[redacted V/A.R.] ended their shift at 0815 and upon being released from the ship, took an Uber to Target together. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised that V/[redacted V/A.R.] ordered the Uber on her phone. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA could not recall which Target they went to, but remembered there was a Food Lion next to it. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that she and V/[redacted V/A.R.] both purchased yoga mats and weights because they both wanted to exercise more. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised they purchased other things, such as grocery items, etc. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that V/[redacted V/A.R.] purchased her Target items with a tap-to-pay feature on her phone, which CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA believed to be linked to V/[redacted V/A.R.] "Navy cash card."

5. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that when she and V/[redacted V/A.R.] left target, CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA ordered a Z-Trip ride which was supposed to arrive at 1141; however, the vehicle was late, so they took another Z-Trip ride at 1202 hours. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised the Z-Trip took them through Gate 22 of Naval Station Norfolk, dropped off CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA, then dropped V/[redacted V/A.R.] off. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated she requested that V/[redacted V/A.R.] let her know when she was back safely, which V/[redacted V/A.R.] did. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised that later in the afternoon, V/[redacted V/A.R.] mentioned going to the barracks room of Jermiah Taylor COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG-95 to cook tacos and sent her a couple of pictures of food. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA was unsure of the relationship between S/COPELAND and V/ V/A.R. and did not know S/COPELAND very well. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised that she heard S/COPELAND "had a case" from the USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN-75) involving "Richerton" (NFI) and heard that S/COPELAND was supposed to go to jail for speeding and evading. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA did not know any other details regarding S/COPELAND's previous case.

6. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised that on the morning of Thursday, 29MAY25, HT3 Michael Davontae GILLESPIE, USN, DDG-95 messaged her around 0454 am requesting her to call him. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that she did call HT3 GILLESPIE, who was V/ V/A.R. ex-boyfriend, and HT3 GILLEPSIE expressed his concerns for V/ V/A.R. because the previous evening V/ V/A.R. sporadically texted him "fuck you."

7. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA was asked about V/ V/A.R. mental health. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised she had heard V/ V/A.R. had mental health issues and had been admitted to the "5th floor" before (the "5th floor" is a term referring to the psychiatric unit at Naval Medical Center Portsmouth (NMCP)). CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA did not know of any suicide attempts by V/ V/A.R. and denied that V/ V/A.R. communicated any suicidal ideations. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that there were times when V/ V/A.R. would stop talking to people, but only in person and not for this long. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised that V/ V/A.R. had recently suggested the two of them take a trip to New York to go shopping. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that V/ V/A.R. had a friend in New York referred to as "Flacko" (NFI) which CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA advised was the term for "skinny" in the Spanish language. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA did not know anything more about "Flacko." CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that she did hear that V/ V/A.R. made comments to HT3 GILLESPIE regarding going AWOL and mentioned New York.

8. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA also advised that V/ V/A.R. was closest to CSSN Junrojel MIGUEL, USN, DDG-95. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA stated that V/ V/A.R. texted CSSN MIGUEL a concerning text message. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA had a screenshot of part of the text message and showed RA. RA observed the partial text message (from V/ V/A.R. to CSSN MIGUEL) which stated that V/ V/A.R. was scared of men and indicated that she felt uncomfortable around several people on the ship who V/ V/A.R. referred to as "CS1" who V/ V/A.R. alleged would grab her phone out of her hands and look through her gallery; "RS2" who told V/ V/A.R. he loved her and wanted a hug; and "BM1" who wanted a secret relationship with V/ V/A.R. after finding out she and HT3 GILLESPIE broke up. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA identified CS1 as CS1 Darrell HOWELLEL (NFI) and RS2 HART (NFI). CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA did not recall BM1's name but knew he was on DDG-95 along with CS1 and RS2.

9. CSSN GARCIA-BARRERA listed other relevant individuals: ET3 RICH (NFI) is an ex-boyfriend of V/ V/A.R. CSSN Jean JAQUAEZ ("JJ") (NFI) was identified

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF YN3 SEAN MONAGHAN, USN

1. On 02JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and participating Agent (PA) Lisa CARROLL conducted an interview of YN3 Sean MONGHAN, USN, Helicopter Mine Countermeasures Squadron (HM 12), in regard to the caption investigation.

2. YN3 MONAGHAN stated while living at Willis Manor, X2, barracks aboard Norfolk Naval Base, Norfolk, VA, he received a roommate approximately 5 months ago. YN3 MONAGHAN identified his roommate as CSSN Jeremiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95). YN3 MONAGHAN explained that he and S/COPELAND are occupants of room 335B, which houses four (4) individuals. The commons area is shared with residents of room 335A. Although he is not very familiar with the other roommates, YN3 MONAGHAN advised S/COPELAND is very good friends with one of the roommate occupants in 335A (NFI). YN3 MONAGHAN described that particular roommate as a shorter white male with black hair.

3. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he owns a 2011 Toyota Camry, white in color, bearing New Jersey tag PII. On 02JUN25, YN3 MONAGHAN provided PA with four (4) pictures of his vehicle for verification, all of which were placed on a CD-R; Enclosure (A) pertains. Four (4) photographs provided by YN3 MONAGHAN were also placed on a photograph template; Enclosure (B) pertains. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he was unsure if any of his roommate's in 335A owned any vehicles. YN3 MONAGHAN explained S/COPELAND typically drives a four-door sedan, black in color, but he could not recall the exact make or model due to S/COPELAND's frequent mechanical issues and the vehicle's poor condition. YN3 MONAGHAN noted the vehicle S/COPELAND's drives is often parked in the parking lot of X2 barracks, near the handicap spaces. YN3 MONAGHAN stated he does not allow S/COPELAND to borrow his vehicle.

4. YN3 MONAGHAN described S/COPELAND as someone who enjoys partying, play video games, and occasionally inviting female guests to the barracks. YN3 MONAGHAN mentioned that while being roommates, S/COPELAND brought three different women over on separate occasions. YN3 MONAGHAN described the first woman as a black female with long black dreads and a scar on the left side of her face (NFI). According to YN3 MONAGHAN, she and S/COPELAND had a very toxic and abusive relationship. YN3 MONAGHAN recalled an incident where she slashed S/COPELAND's car tires while he was playing video games. The second woman was described as a black female with an aggressive demeanor (NFI). YN3 MONAGHAN recalled an incident where she attempted to stab S/COPELAND while holding a knife, pushing past YN3 MONAGHAN during the confrontation. The third woman was described as a white female with short black hair (NFI). YN3 MONAGHAN stated he did not have any personal interactions with these women and only observed them passing by, as his conversations were solely with S/COPELAND.

5. YN3 MONAGHAN stated on 29MAY25, he left the barracks around 0600 for work. At that time, S/COPELAND was not in their room. YN3 MONAGHAN reported that when he returned around 1300 hours, S/COPELAND was in the common area wearing a black hoodie with yellow writing and jeans while playing video games. On 30MAY25, S/COPELAND neither reported to work nor remained consistently in the barracks. YN3 MONAGHAN stated S/COPELAND appeared to be gone mostly all-day Saturday and Sunday, 30-31MAY25, which was usual behavior. On 31MAY25, YN3 MONAGHAN was awakened by S/COPELAND's command representative (NFI). YN3 MONAGHAN stated he informed S/COPELAND's command that S/COPELAND had already left that morning. YN3 MONAGHAN was unsure of S/COPELAND whereabouts. At approximately 1200 hours on 31MAY25, Norfolk Naval Station (NOB) Police arrived to conduct a welfare check, as S/COPELAND had still not returned to work. YN3 MONAGHAN reported S/COPELAND eventually returned back to the barracks around 1000 hours the next day, 01JUN25. Later that evening, YN3 MONAGHAN reported he saw S/COPELAND sitting in the common area of their barracks room playing his video game around 2300 hours. On 02JUN25, S/COPELAND reportedly woke YN3 MONAGHAN at 0500 hours, to request a ride to gate 2, which YN3 MONAGHAN did not provide.

6. YN3 MONAGHAN was unsure of the usual places S/COPELAND tends to frequent on a regular basis. YN3 MONAGHAN noted S/COPELAND does not own any electronics other that his video gaming system and two cellular devices. YN3 MONAGHAN described the cellular devices a being an iPhone black in color (NFI) and a possible black android cellular phone (NFI). At the conclusion of the interview, RA and PA showed YN3 MONAGHAN a picture of CSSN V/A.R. (V V/A.R. USN, DDG 95 for identification purposes. YN3 MONGHAN could not identify V/V/A.R. and noted he has not seen V/V/A.R. at his barracks room, as she does not match the description of the aforementioned female individuals.

7. There are no further details to report.

S/COPELAND, JERMIAH TAYLOR/SN USN
M/B/NEE3/S/[redacted PII]

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF HT3 MICHAEL GILLESPIE, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (PA) Colton WEAVER, interviewed HT3 Michael GILLESPIE, USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG 95) at NCISRA PORTSMOUTH, VA in reference to the captioned investigation.

2. For the ease of the reader, this summary is condensed from the interview, which was audio/video only recorded in its entirety and is not necessarily described in the order it was discussed. The recording contains a verbatim account of the interview. The audio/video interview was subsequently transferred onto a DVD-R. A copy of the DVD-R containing the audio/video recording of HT3 GILLESPIE's interview is appended to this report as Enclosure (A).

3. HT3 GILLESPIE stated he dated CSSN [redacted V/A.R.] (V/[redacted V/A.R.] DDG 95 for approximately six (6) months, circa MAY24 to NOV24. HT3 GILLESPIE advised after they broke up, they maintained a friendship and would still see each other. HT3 GILLESPIE recalled V/[redacted V/A.R.] was admitted to Naval Medical Center Portsmouth (NMCP) circa SEP24 for mental health related issues. HT3 GILLESPIE advised V/[redacted] disclosed being diagnosed with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) and an eating disorder. HT3 GILLESPIE reported V/[redacted] was prescribed medication relating to mental illness. HT3 GILLESPIE stated V/[redacted V/A.R.] spoke about taking more medication than prescribed which resulted to V/[redacted] agreeing to let HT3 GILLESPIE hide her medication and dispense the correct amount as needed. HT3 GILLESPIE stated another ex-boyfriend, ET3 Daniel RICH, USN, DDG 95 also hid V/[redacted]s medication for the same aforenoted reason.

4. HT3 GILLESPIE described V/[redacted V/A.R.] as a person who did not like being alone but was a kind person who was willing to help others. HT3 GILLESPIE indicated V/[redacted] has a history of being a victim of sexual assault. HT3 GILLESPIE recalled V/[redacted V/A.R.] making jokes about buying a plane ticket and traveling to New York (NFI). HT3 GILLESPIE advised V/[redacted V/A.R.] did not own a vehicle but was saving money for one. HT3 GILLESPIE stated V/[redacted V/A.R.] would often ride with him or other friends to get around. HT3 GILLESPIE advised he is unaware of V/[redacted V/A.R.] making recent suicidal ideations.

5. HT3 GILLESPIE stated he was on duty from 0700 on 28MAY25 to 0700 the following day, 29MAY25. HT3 GILLESPIE advised while at work on 28MAY25, he saw V/[redacted] and they made plans to go get his motorcycle helmet from V/[redacted]barracks room on 29MAY25. HT3 GILLESPIE advised V/[redacted V/A.R.]

appeared upset and was passive aggressive during the interaction and wanted to know why HT3 GILLESPIE wanted his helmet back. HT3 GILLESPIE reported at approximately 1900 hours on 28MAY25, he received a call from V/[V/A.R.] and she wanted to tell HT3 GILLESPIE about her day. HT3 GILLESPIE noted V/[V/A.R.] appeared happy during the phone call and that was the last time he heard V/R[V/A.R.] voice. At approximately 2200-2300 hours that same night, HT3 GILLESPIE advised he received a text messaged from V/[V/A.R.] which read "Fuck you". HT3 GILLESPIE stated after he received the aforenoted text message, he attempted to reach out to V/[V/A.R.] repeatedly until approximately 0400 hours on 29MAY25. HT3 GILLESPIE stated he became increasingly concerned after V/[V/A.R.] failed to reply to his messages. HT3 GILLESPIE also noted V/[V/A.R.] stopped sharing her location with him and at approximately 0200 hours on 29MAY25, he observed his text messages not showing as "delivered". HT3 GILLESPIE described the behavior as concerning because V/[V/A.R.] would never completely ignore him in the past.

6. HT3 GILLESPIE reported the following day, on 29MAY25, he responded to a barracks building (NFI) onboard Naval Station Norfolk with ET3 RICH, which was V/[V/A.R.] last shared location via iPhone. HT3 GILLESPIE advised he knocked on V/[V/A.R.] door and her roommate (NFI) answered and advised she had not seen V/[V/A.R.] HT3 GILLESPIE noted although V/[V/A.R.] stopped sharing her location with him, she continued to share her location with ET3 RICH. HT3 GILLESPIE advised he was eventually notified by V/R[V/A.R.] friend "GARCIA" that V/[V/A.R.] was picked up by CSSN Jeremiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95 and taken back to his barracks room. HT3 GILLESPIE stated he was aware CSSN COPELAND did not possess a vehicle but heard he had borrowed one (NFI). GARCIA also stated on 28MAY25, she went to Target (NFI) with V/[V/A.R.] and purchased yoga items, clothing and other items.

7. HT3 GILLESPIE reported prior to the interview with NCIS, he spoke with S/COPELAND about his interaction with V/[V/A.R.] HT3 GILLISPIE stated he recorded their interaction without S/COPELAND knowing. S/COPELAND disclosed while with V/[V/A.R.] they had consumed alcohol (NFI) and V/[V/A.R.] became emotional and had an "episode" and started calling people (NFI). Furthermore, S/COPELAND explained the last time he saw V/[V/A.R.] was when he dropped her off at her barracks on 29MAY25 at approximately 1300 hours. HT3 GILLESPIE advised he asked S/COPELAND if he actually saw V/[V/A.R.] go into her barracks in which S/COPELAND responded in the negative and advised she walked off the side of the building.

8. HT3 GILLESPIE signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure and sent RA 25 photograph screenshots and one (1) video via Airdrop. This investigative endeavor will be documented on separate reporting.

9. Nothing further to report.

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF AR JOHN CALISSE, USN

1. On 03Jun25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Investigator (PI) John KOWALSKI conducted an interview of AR John CALISSE, USN, Airborne Command & Control Squadron (VAW) 124 regarding his knowledge related to the whereabouts of CSSN V/A.R. (V/ V/A.R. USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG 95).

2. The interview of AR CALISSE was recorded using an audio/visual recording system, and a digital copy was downloaded onto a Digital Video Disc-Recordable (DVD-R). This document is a summary of the interview and not a verbatim transcription. For full details of the interview, refer to the working copy of the original DVD-R; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. AR CALISSE reported on 29May25, while at his barracks Willis Manor, Building X-2, Room 335, on Naval Station Norfolk, at approximately 0200, he heard his suitemate CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG 95, and an unknown female singing karaoke in S/COPELAND's room. AR CALISSE stated he always heard loud music coming from S/COPELAND's room at all times of the night. AR CALISSE did not recall seeing any signs that S/COPELAND was consuming alcohol in the common area. AR CALISSE stated at approximately 1900 on 28May25, S/COPELAND requested to use his white 2014 Jeep Compass to which he obliged. AR CALISSE reported S/COPELAND returned at approximately 2000, knocked on his barracks door, and when he opened the door to obtain the keys, he observed a female in the kitchen area cooking, who he later identified as V/ V/A.R.

4. AR CALISSE recalled waking up the morning of 29May25, at approximately 0500, to report to work on time. At approximately 0530, AR CALISSE stated he exited his room and upon walking into the common area observed S/COPELAND and an unknown female laying naked in the middle of the common room floor. AR CALISSE stated he observed them on their backs, face up, with their eyes closed. AR CALISSE stated he observed S/COPELAND laying on the thigh of the unknown female. AR CALISSE stated he did not see any clothing belonging to S/COPELAND. AR CALISSE stated he observed the female wearing red pajama pants with flowers, with one pant leg slightly on at the ankle, and her bra pulled down exposing her breast. AR CALISSE reported walking past them in order to leave the room and believed both S/COPELAND and the female to be breathing. AR CALISSE stated when he returned from work at approximately 1700, S/COPELAND and the female were not in the barracks room.

5. AR CALISSE described the female as brown skinned, long brown hair, and with what he believed to be a possible nose piercing. AR CALISSE stated this was his first time seeing the female; however, confirmed it was V/ V/A.R. when showed a photograph.

6. AR CALISSE stated he did not see S/COPELAND again until Sunday 01Jun25, at approximately 1400, when he asked him for a ride to report to DDG 95. AR CALISSE agreed to provide transportation to S/COPELAND after returning from Walmart. AR CALISSE stated he transported S/COPELAND along with ISSA Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, USN, VAW 124, at approximately 1700. AR CALISSE stated S/COPELAND was on DDG 95 for approximately one hour while ISSA GORDILLACRUZ and AR CALISSE waited in the parking lot for him to return. AR CALISSE stated when S/COPELAND returned to the vehicle he informed him he was required to do a urinalysis for not reporting to work on 30May25. AR CALISSE stated while driving from DDG 95 back to the barracks they stopped at Chipotle located at 4712 Hampton Blvd, Norfolk, VA 23508, at approximately 1900.

7. AR CALISSE stated when they returned to the barracks, S/COPELAND asked if he could use his car to get something to eat. AR CALISSE allowed S/COPELAND to use his vehicle giving him the key at approximately 2000. AR CALISSE stated when he woke up the next morning and proceeded to go to work, he noticed his car key was not on the kitchen counter where S/COPELAND normally leaves it after borrowing his car. AR CALISSE stated he called S/COPELAND to find out his location and was angry because he caused him to be late for work. AR CALISSE reported meeting S/COPELAND in the X-2 parking lot at approximately 0630 and watched him drive the vehicle into the parking lot. AR CALISSE stated he was unaware of the locations S/COPELAND traveled to while he had his vehicle.

8. During his interview, AR CALISSE signed a Permissive Authorization for Search and Seizure (PASS) for his Jeep Compass which will be documented under separate cover.

9. At the conclusion of the interview, while returning AR CALISSE to VAW-124, he located EZ Pass transactions and provided screenshots of the charges from 27May25 to 02Jun25 without being requested; Enclosure (B) pertains. AR CALISSE stated the charge on 01Jun25 was his return from the ship; however, all other charges were believed to be accrued by S/COPELAND.

RESULTS OF INTERVIEW OF PSSN IRBIN GORDILLOCRUZ, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and Participating Agent (RA) Fritzner PHILEMON conducted an interview of PSSN Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, USN, Airborne Command and Control Squadron 124 (VAW-124) in regards to his knowledge of this investigation. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ is one of 4 roommates of CSSN Jermiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, USS JAMES E. WILLIAMS (DDG-95).

2. This interview was audio and video recorded utilizing Case Cracker. A copy of the recording was subsequently saved to an optical disc and maintained with the case file. This report should not be treated as a verbatim or comprehensive representation of the interview; Enclosure (A) pertains.

3. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated he returned to his barracks room at approximately 0400 on 28JUN25. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ had been on leave and flew back to Norfolk at approximately 0300. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated upon his return he walked into the common area of the room and noticed all the lights were off. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated he did not see or notice anyone on the couch or the floor of the common room area. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ admitted he was exhausted and was really only focused on going to sleep.

4. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated he woke up for work at approximately 0620 and exited his room at approximately 0645 with his roommate, AR John CALISSE, and they both noticed two individuals laying on the ground near the couch opposite their room. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated the female was laying on her back with her breasts exposed and her chest was rising and falling. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ further described the female as dark skin and having curly hair. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated he had never seen this female but did believe she was in the Navy. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ described his roommate, S/COPELAND, was naked and was laying with his head on the females stomach. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated he and CALISSE had to maneuver around the two laying on the ground to get to the front door.

5. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated on Saturday, 31MAY25, and Sunday, 01JUN25, he had been woken up in the morning by base security trying to locate S/COPELAND. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated on 01JUN25, base security had arrived and told S/COPELAND he had to check in with his Command due to him being UA. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ stated S/COPELAND, CALISSE, and himself went to DDG-95, utilizing CALISSE's vehicle. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ continued saying, S/COPELAND had to check into the Command and do a urinalysis test. Afterwards, they all went to Chipotle for food and returned to the barracks. PSSN GORDILLOCRUZ

RESULTS OF CONTACT OF CSSN SARAH COOK, USN

1. On 03JUN25, Reporting Agent (RA) and participating Agent (PA) Caroline ROBINSON spoke with CSSN Sarah COOK (CSSN COOK), USN, USS HARRY S. TRUMAN (CVN 77), regarding the whereabouts of CCSN [redacted V/A.R.] (V/[redacted V/A.R.] USN, USS JAMES E WILLIAMS (DDG-95). CSSN COOK was identified as a friend of CSSN Jeremiah COPELAND (S/COPELAND), USN, DDG-95.

2. This conversation was audio recorded, and a copy of the recording was subsequently saved to a DVD-R disc. This report should not be treated as a verbatim or comprehensive representation of the interview; please refer to Enclosure (A) for amplifying details. This interview took place at [redacted PII] [redacted PII] floor three within the lobby area.

3. As background, V/[redacted V/A.R.] was last seen at S/COPELAND's, barracks located at 9712 Virginia Ave. room 335B. On 03JUN25, NCIS executed a Command Authorized Search and Seizure (CASS) for [redacted PII]. NCIS discovered three individuals identified as S/COPELAND's roommates and one female identified as CSSN COOK in S/COPELAND's barracks room during the execution of the CASS.

4. CSSN COOK stated she received text messages from S/COPELAND to hang out at his apartment on 03JUN25 and arrived at his room at approximately 1845 hours. CSSN COOK went on to state she has known S/COPELAND since January 2025 and met at the gally on deployment aboard the CVN 77. CSSN COOK stated S/COPELAND became friends on the deployment and a few months later S/COPELAND was removed off of the CVN 77 during the deployment. CSSN COOK further explained she was not informed of the specific reason for his removal from deployment, but S/COPELAND expressed to her it was for his mental health and self- harming "cutting" incidents.

5. CSSN COOK advised she met with S/COPELAND at his room located at 9712 Virginia Avenue Building X-2 Apartment 335B on 03JUN25. CSSN COOK went on to explain she was only at the room for over an hour when NCIS arrived at the front door. CSSN COOK stated she was in the common area with S/COPELAND watching tv and playing video games. CSSN COOK stated she did not go anywhere else within the apartment, but the common areas. CSSN COOK advised she didn't notice any off about S/COPELAND during their interaction during the night.

6. CSSN COOK recalled S/COPELAND was on his phone checking his messages while hanging out and advised he was texting someone with a "short name";

NAVAL CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIVE SERVICE

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

VS.

CSSN [redacted] USN

1. I, Jessica Gokey, am a Special Agent with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS) assigned to the NCIS Resident Agency Norfolk, VA and have been employed with NCIS since March 2022. During my tenure as a Special Agent, I have completed approximately 900 hours of instruction at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC) in Glynco, GA, where I attended the Special Agent Basic Training Integrated Program (SABTI). I was provided instruction on investigations, federal law, and other various practice issues for investigators. I am a member of the Military Criminal Investigative Organization Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force. I have attended the National Criminal Justice Training Center's Internet Crimes Against Children certification course and additional training through ICAC for an approximate total of 90 hours. I spent eight (8) years as an active duty member of the United States Navy, where I was a Master-at-Arms (MA). As a MA, I was a first responder to base incidents, misdemeanor crimes, and traffic accidents. During my tenure as a MA, I was employed with the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) where I worked various cases to include Domestic Violence cases, simple assaults, and other misdemeanor crimes. I have a Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice from Fort Hays State University, Hays, KS.

2. The following facts and information are known to your Affiant based upon information gained from the conduct of this investigation, witness observations, training and experience, and/or through information relayed through other law enforcement officers.

3. This affidavit is submitted in support of an application for a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure to search the residence belonging to CSSN Jermiah COPELAND as annotated in Attachment A.

4. Since this affidavit is being submitted for the limited purpose of securing a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure, your Affiant has not included each and every fact known concerning this investigation. Your Affiant has set forth the facts believed necessary to establish probable cause to believe that evidence of violations of Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) Article 86 (Absence without leave).

FACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES ESTABLISHING PROBABLE CAUSE

5. This United States is investigating violations of Article 86 (Absence without leave).

6. On May 28, 2025, CSSN V/A.R. was known to be in the barracks room located at X-2 room 335B Rack A located onboard Naval Station Norfolk, who is occupied by CSSN Jermiah COPELAND.

7. According to COPELAND, V/A.R. came to his barracks room to have dinner and have a couple drinks.

8. COPELAND stated V/A.R. called a "ex-boyfriend from Texas" and was confronting the person about returning personal items. COPELAND stated, V/A.R. became emotional and began to cry.

9. COPELAND stated the relationship with V/A.R. was platonic and he is a friend from work and no sexual acts have happened between them.

10. During an interview with PSSN Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, who is a roommate of COPELAND, at approximately 0645 on 29 May 2025, GORDILLOCRUZ stated he was leaving for work and saw his roommate, later clarified to be COPELAND and an unknown female on the floor naked.

11. GORDILLOCRUZ stated the female looked to have darker skin, and black curly hair. He could see V/A.R. breasts and could see COPELAND's head resting on V/A.R. stomach area. GORDILLOCRUZ stated he could not see if V/A.R. was wearing anything below COPELAND's head. GORDILLOCRUZ stated COPELAND was also naked but his back was facing upwards.

12. GORDILLOCRUZ stated he could tell V/A.R. was breathing by her chest moving up and down. GORDILLOCRUZ stated, he had never seen the female before and has not seen her since.

13. COPELAND stated, he was late for work on the morning of 29 May 2025 and FCC Brad PARKER knocked on his door to say COPELAND was going to be labeled as Unauthorized Absence (UA). FCC PARKER stated COPELAND and V/A.R. were in a state of undress and V/A.R. waved and rolled over into a blanket. FCC PARKER told COPELAND to report to work and left the barracks room.

14. COPELAND continued explaining, the two of them got dressed and a roommate took him and V/A.R. to V/A.R. residence located at Miller Hall onboard Naval Station Norfolk at approximately 1000.

15. COPELAND's movements after dropping V/A.R. off at Miller Hall. However, we know after speaking with Command, COPELAND was marked UA for the days of 29-31 May 2025 and on 01 June 2025.

16. On 02 June 2025, NCIS spoke to FCC PARKER to verify V/A.R. work schedule. FCC PARKER stated V/A.R. was scheduled to work day shift Friday, May 30, 2025 - Sunday, June 1, 2025 with a report time of 0500-0530 hours. FCC PARKER stated V/A.R. failed to report all three (3) days.

17. NCIS interview all remaining roommates of COPELAND who stated they did not give a ride to COPELAND and V/A.R. on the morning of 29 May 2025.

18. The whereabouts of V/A.R. are still unknown. Her cellphone last pinged on 31 May 2025 for last known location. The last known was approximately Latitude 36.896558 Longitude -76.435536, which appears to be located in Suffolk, VA.

19. Additionally, NCIS spoke with her mother in Texas and she conveyed V/A.R. has attempted suicide in the past and suffers from depression, for which she is prescribed medication. Emergency Room's, psychology departments, morgues, and jails were all negative for her presence when called.

CONCLUSION

20. Based upon the information, your Affiant asserts there is probable cause to believe items in COPELAND's barracks room located at X-2 room 335B Rack A and the common room area onboard Naval Station Norfolk may constitute evidence of Article 86 (Absence without leave) of the UCMJ.

21. Your affiant respectfully requests a CASS be issued, authorizing NCIS Agents, forensic examiners tasked by NCIS, and other law enforcement entities and their forensic components to search and retain evidence as described above.

MS. BEA: Okay. I didn't know what you prefer, so you all that.

CSSN COPELAND: Thank you.

MS. BEA: Yeah, no problem. I'll be right back with you. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: All right. Thank you.

[Ms. Bea departed the room.]

MS. BEA: Sorry, Jeremiah, for that delay. You good?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I'm fine.

MS. BEA: Did you eat?

CSSN COPELAND: I ate a little.

MS. BEA: Do you want more and CheezIts?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. If you change your mind, let me know, okay?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Jess introduced herself, right? You know Justin?

Yeah.

SA GOKEY: I'll do it again. Oh, just for, you know.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Special Agent Jessica Gokey.

MS. BEA: I'm still Bea.

CSSN COPELAND: [Inaudible 00:07:49.]

SA GOKEY: Your CAC is it in your wallet?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. [Hands wallet to CSSN Copeland.]

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am. [Did as directed.]

SA GOKEY: All righty. I'll put that back out here with your stuff. All right.

Okay. So, I know we talked Sunday a little bit about what's going on, but that was more like super informal. Now, we're in like the more formal setting, so I'm just going to get some information from you, okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am. All right.

Just need--okay. What day did you report to the ship, roughly?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe like February 21st.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Of this year, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okey-dokey. What--you're CSSN, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Branch? U.S.

Sex?

CSSN COPELAND: Male.

SA GOKEY: Race?

CSSN COPELAND: Black. African American.

SA GOKEY: Okay. U.S. citizen?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Do you have a clearance?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's your full social?

CSSN COPELAND: [Redacted.]

SA GOKEY: [Redacted.]

CSSN COPELAND: [Redacted.]

SA GOKEY: Just kidding.

CSSN COPELAND: [Redacted.]

SA GOKEY: [Redacted.]

SA GOKEY: [Redacted.]

CSSN COPELAND: [Redacted.]

SA GOKEY: [Redacted.]

All right. Date of birth?

CSSN COPELAND: PII

SA GOKEY: Got another '05.

MS. BEA: It just makes us feel old.

SA GOKEY: It makes me feel old. I was a junior in high school.

How tall are you?

CSSN COPELAND: Like five-ten. Five-nine and a half.

SA GOKEY: I'll give you five-ten.

Weight?

CSSN COPELAND: Like 157.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Hair color?

CSSN COPELAND: Black.

SA GOKEY: Place of birth?

CSSN COPELAND: North Carolina.

SA GOKEY: North Carolina. Was that Durham?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Is it D-U-R-A-M?

CSSN COPELAND: D-U-R-H-A-M-H-A-M.

SA GOKEY: All right. Eye color?

CSSN COPELAND: Brown.

SA GOKEY: Brown. Okay. When are you set to rotate?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't even know.

SA GOKEY: No? Okay.

Is this your first enlistment?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: So, when did you enlist?

CSSN COPELAND: I joined the Navy July 13th, 2023.

SA GOKEY: 13th, July 23. Okay. I see you got tattoos. What's your favorite?

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's it say?

CSSN COPELAND: In life, we all suffer, but I'll find my way through the darkness.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Is that from the Bible?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: What's it from?

CSSN COPELAND: Just a quote.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And that's your left arm?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: All right. And you currently reside at X-2?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Room number?

CSSN COPELAND: 335.

SA GOKEY: Are you Alpha Bravo?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe--I don't even know.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Bravo.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then in the room, do you know if you're---

CSSN COPELAND: I believe I'm Alpha.

SA GOKEY: You're Alpha in the room. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's a good note--a good phone number for you?

CSSN COPELAND: PII.

SA GOKEY: PII

CSSN COPELAND: PII

SA GOKEY: PII

CSSN COPELAND: PII

SA GOKEY: PII Okay. Good email?

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted]

SA GOKEY: Seven at Gmail. Okay. Do you have a vehicle?

CSSN COPELAND: No, no ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What is your home address of record?

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted].

SA GOKEY: [redacted]

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Is that Durham?

CSSN COPELAND: No, that's in [redacted].

SA GOKEY: Oh, [redacted].

Okay. Do you know the zip code?

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted]

SA GOKEY: [redacted]

Okay. Highest level of education?

CSSN COPELAND: High school diploma.

SA GOKEY: High school. Okay.

You married?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: All right. Who's your next to kin?

CSSN COPELAND: My mom.

SA GOKEY: Mom. What's Mama's name?

CSSN COPELAND: Rochelle Brown. R-O-C-H-E-L-L. And like--like the color brown.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know Mom's phone number by chance?

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted]

SA GOKEY: All right. Most--most people don't know their parents' number or they're next to kin.

Do you have a civilian occupation? Like, do you Uber Eats or anything on the side?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Do you want to see that?

MS. BEA: No.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I figured. We'll just have--have you hold onto that.

Okay. So, I know from past experience you've been down this road before with Ms. Bea here, and kind of like what--why we were at your room today. So, we're executing a CASS, which is a Command Authorized Search and Seizure because [redacted], that was the last place, you know, we--you--somebody saw her, me being you?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: So, that's why we're doing that. Right? So, right now we're classifying her as UA.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: And I would like to talk to you about the time that you were also UA and some other inconsist--inconsistencies I've gotten from the previous statement that we had in order to protect you. I want to read you your rights.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: And then, we can discuss further if you want to, okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. If you don't mind, I'm going to scoot a little closer.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, I am going to read this to you. All right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: And then, whenever I say like, "One," and then I read it, I'm going to ask you if you understand.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: You're going to say yes or no. If you understand. Yes. If you don't know, and then I'll explain further for you. Okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: All right. So, the place is in NCIS U-40. That is this building. The date is 03 June 25. You, Jeremiah Copeland, have been advised by me, Special Agent Jessica Gokey, that you were suspected of Article 86, unauthorized absence, and Article 107, false official.

You have also been advised that:

One, you have the right to remain silent and make no statement at all.

Do you understand this right?

CSSN COPELAND: I understand the right, but what is Article 107 for false official?

SA GOKEY: So, it's the false official statement. So, I'm going to ask you questions that could be incriminating.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: About, you know, the story that we talked about on Sunday.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: So, because you're military, you guys get----

CSSN COPELAND: Articles.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. You guys and you also get to get told what we're talking about it, so there's no surprises. So I am--I'm going to ask you questions that could be incriminating. So, therefore, I have to read you that right? Or excuse me, that article.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Does that make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, I'll read number one again. All right. You have the right to remain silent and make no statement at all.

Do you understand this right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I'm going to ask you to initial it, it is not that you're waiving your right at that time.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I understand.

SA GOKEY: Okay, perfect. Just saying that you understand.

All right, and so I'll read number two. Any statement you make can be used against you in a trial by court-martial or other judicial or administrative proceedings.

Do you understand this right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay, go ahead for me.

Three. You have the right to consult with a lawyer prior to any questioning. This lawyer may be a civilian lawyer retained by you at no cost to the United States, a military lawyer appointed to act as your counsel at no cost to you, or both.

Do you understand this right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay, go ahead.

CSSN COPELAND: [Did as directed.]

SA GOKEY: Four. You have the right to have your retained lawyer and or appointed military lawyer present during this interview.

Do you understand this right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And five, you may terminate this interview at any time for any reason.

Do you understand this right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay, go ahead.

CSSN COPELAND: [Did as directed.]

SA GOKEY: All right. So, one through five. Do you have any questions about that at all?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay, perfect.

So, at this time, Jeremiah, do you want to continue this conversation?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Go ahead and read that paragraph out loud for me.

CSSN COPELAND: I understand my rights as relative to me and--to me and as set forth above. With that understanding, I have decided that I do not desire to remain silent, consult with a retained or appoint lawyer, or have a lawyer present at this time. I make this decision freely and voluntarily. No threats or promises have been made with me--or been made to me.

SA GOKEY: Perfect. Have I threatened you today?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Has any other agent threatened you?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Have we made any promises to you?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. If you would just initial before and after that paragraph for me.

CSSN COPELAND: [Did as directed.]

SA GOKEY: And then, I'll have you sign and date.

CSSN COPELAND: [Did as directed.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then, I will sign it, and I'll have Ms. Bea sign it as well.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Ms. Bea. [Hands document to Ms. Bea.]

Thank you. All right.

Okay. All right, Jeremiah. Okay. So, if you need a break, if you need to use the restroom, or you need more snackies, let me know. Okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: All right. So, we know we're talking about V/A.R.

Can you go ahead and tell me, you know, the events leading up to why we're here right now?

CSSN COPELAND: So, I mean, I--what is it? We were at work, and she gave me a recipe to make salsa, and I was like, "I'm probably going to make it by tonight, or some shit." So, she was like, "Cool." And she was like, "If you do end up making tacos, then just call me." I was like, "All right. Bet. Cool."

So, I got home. By the time I got off work and everything, I called her and I was like, "I'm finna make tacos." And she was like, "All right." So, I told her I was just going to go to the store just to grab the rest of the stuff that was on the--like on the menu that she gave me. And then from there I went to the store, got everything, and then I came and picked her up, and we came back home. From there, we cooked--well, she made the salsa. We made tacos. She taught me how to make these, like, little tortillas, like out of the corn tortillas.

From there everything was cool, and we were just chilling, playing music, listening music. From there, she--it took a left turn when I told her something about one of the dudes that she messes with on the boat. And then, from there she was just, she got on the floor and she called one of her ex-boyfriends from Texas. We were sitting there talking for about maybe like 15, 20 minutes, maybe 25, just talking about the situation. Everything.

After that, she hung up, and she was just going on a call spree, calling hella people. And then from there, I guess she just broke down, whatever, saying how he did this. He did that. Cool. And then, from there, my roommate walked--walked in the room, and he asked if everything was good. I was like, "Just let her have a moment." because she's just sitting there crying. I'm not going to sit there and entertain that. So, we went to sleep. The morning comes, and obviously, I had to be at work, so I didn't show up. My Chief came in the room and he asked, "What's going on?" I was just saying, "I'm just having a late start." And he was like, "All right. Cool." He told me, "Do I have a ride to work?" And I said, "I, at the current moment, I was like, my roommate can take me, but I have--I have to wait until he gets off work." So, my Chief was like, "All right. Cool."

And so, my roommate got off late, so by the time my roommate got home, like they were already gone. So, I was just like, "Fuck it." And I was just like, I wasn't going to go in. So, I didn't go in. And then Friday comes, Saturday goes by, and then CS1 and my chief text me saying that I'm being marked UA. And from there, I was just like, all right.

And Sunday comes, the MAs come because my mom called because I haven't contacted my mom. So, I guess that part it was a well welfare check.

So, Sunday, I ended up going to the ship. And from there, I did urinalysis. And after urinalysis, they released me, and I went back home.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. All right. So, you went to--so, let's go back to when--what day did she come over?

CSSN COPELAND: Thursday.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You're positive it was Thursday?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am. I believe it was Thursday.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, you were going to make tacos, and you were going to go to the store to get the ingredients?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And you did go to the store?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: How did you get to the store?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate took me to the store.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Which roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't specifically know his name, but he's across the room from me. He's the black African dude.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, the--the black guy in the other room?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What kind of car does he drive?

CSSN COPELAND: White Jeep.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, he took you, or you just took his keys?

CSSN COPELAND: No, he took me.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What store did you go to?

CSSN COPELAND: We went to Food Lion.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was that--which one?

CSSN COPELAND: I have no clue. There's like a lot of Food Lions.

SA GOKEY: That's fair. That's fair.

Do you know about what time you guys went?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You said you called her right, though?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I FaceTimed her.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you FaceTimed her, and then did you go to the store right after you FaceTimed her?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I hung up, and then after that, I was just telling him. I said, "Cool. Can we go to the store?" And he was like, "Yeah, let's go."

SA GOKEY: Okay.

MS. BEA: Did he go in with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Hmm?

MS. BEA: Did he go in with you? Like, y'all were both doing some shopping?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, he went in with me.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. And then, what'd you do after you left the store?

CSSN COPELAND: We went back home.

SA GOKEY: Back to your building?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, how did V/A.R. get there?

CSSN COPELAND: I came and picked her up.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And did--in what car?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate's car.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did he go with you on that one?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I came and picked her up.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

MS. BEA: Same Jeep you said?

CSSN COPELAND: Huh?

MS. BEA: Same Jeep?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Same roommate. Okay.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you guys went--or excuse me, you went and picked her up.

What was she wearing?

CSSN COPELAND: I can't recall. I remember she was wearing a black shirt and I believe black pants.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she have anything with her?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe she had a--she had a purple backpack that she always carries with her.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I think that was it.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Any--anything more descriptive about what she was wearing? Was like--again, like you may be one of the last people to here before she went UA.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: And I'm really trying to find her.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: because she's UA and she needs to be at work, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: So, anything more descriptive that I can start looking for?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah, like, I can't really remember that. All I remember is her wearing a black shirt. I believe it was black pants and she had some Uggs.

SA GOKEY: Uggs. What kind of Uggs?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know the brand of--I--I just know of Uggs.

SA GOKEY: But--so, were they like slip-ons or were they boots or?

CSSN COPELAND: They were slip-ons.

SA GOKEY: They were the slip-ons. Okay. Okay. So, slip-on Uggs. Okay. Anything else?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Did you notice any jewelry that she was wearing?

CSSN COPELAND: I know she had a bracelet and I think a hair clip.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And a hair clip. Like one of the big ones to pull up a bunch of hair, or like a little big one.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was like a--a clip. Like an actual clip? Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But like, big one, little one.

CSSN COPELAND: It was like a medium-sized one.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know how females justify their hair clips, so.

SA GOKEY: No, that's fine.

MS. BEA: I never met V/A.R. Is she Hispanic? Is she black? Is she white?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe she's Hispanic.

MS. BEA: Okay. Does she wear, like, any kind of braids or anything like that? Or like, just kind of like, where's it long?

CSSN COPELAND: Military--military style, like in a bun.

MS. BEA: When you picked her up, was it in a bun?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. Was it in a bun the whole time?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. She always keeps her hair in a bun.

MS. BEA: Got it.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Does she have her nose pierced?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Do you recall about what time you picked her up?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't remember.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. All right. So, you picked her up, and then what did you do?

CSSN COPELAND: After that, we came home and we started making tacos.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she--did you say something about salsa on Sunday?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, I mean, that shit is in the sink right now.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: In my room, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So did she--did she make it there or did you guys----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, she made it. I don't know if it was--it was like a guacamole or a salsa. It was one of the two. She made it in the room, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: She made everything, put it in the blender. The shit is still sitting in the sink right now, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was it good?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah, it was good, but it--it was her and my stomach. I have a weak stomach, so.

SA GOKEY: That's fair. That's fair. Did she bring any of the ingredients with her?

CSSN COPELAND: No, I bought everything at the store.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

So, you bought all the ingredients, and then she just made it?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. So, you guys made tacos. She made the salsa. Y'all ate. Then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: From there, we started listening to music on my game on Apple Music and Spotify. It was going back and forth because too many people was on the internet at the time. So, obviously, it's going to start lagging. And then from there we just started talking. And she mentioned something about Gillespie, which is the dude that she talks to on the boat, and all this other stuff. And then, that's when I had brought up the fact that, like, something about he said something about him picking up a female. And she was like, that's crazy, because she went on a walk, so and so, and she basically saw him pick up a female that looked like it was on his bike because he wears all black. So, she said it looked like it was his. And from there, I'm pretty sure she knew that it was him. So, she texted him and she was like, "Fuck you."

Sorry for my language.

SA GOKEY: No, but we're all adults. So, you cuss, you say whatever you--you need to say to----

CSSN COPELAND: But it--it is just me out of respect. I don't--you know.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But from there she said that. And from there, that's when she called her ex-boyfriend, that lived in Texas. And I was sitting on the couch. She was--she was sitting on the floor, and then she told me to come over to meet him. And then from there I was like, "What's good, Brody?" And he was like, "What's good?" And from there, they were talking, and I would just put my feedback in or just like, say like little things, because at the end of the day, it's not really my conversation, it's theirs. They're having a conversation, so. They were talking whatever. And then, from there they hung up and she was just calling other people, talking about how Gillespie's not shit, this, that, the third, and just going on a rabbit spree, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, what is Gillespie and her's relationship?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't really know. It's not really my part to really say, because I don't know much about Gillespie. I mean, I know that he works on our boat. She did mention they previously dated. I don't know how, for how long.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she tell you anything about if there was any, like, emotional abuse or physical abuse or anything like that between the two of them?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. I know she was basically saying, like, how much money she spent basically on him paying for all his shit. He never done shit for her and so on. I know she mentioned--I think the thing that really like blew her over is how she said that she recently paid him $500 for a lawyer.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And from there I was like, that's crazy because I told him that he could have got a public defender for the-- the--he was going to court for speeding.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And I remember previously talking to him that week about that, because I said he could have got a public defender, and I guess that blew her because she basically told him the same thing, and I guess he didn't listen to her and got a lawyer anyway. So, she spent $500 helping him pay for a lawyer.

SA GOKEY: Damn. She seems nice. I wouldn't do that.

CSSN COPELAND: Right.

SA GOKEY: Absolutely not. Sorry. Okay.

Anything else you know about the relationship?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't really know much about Gil. So, that's as far as--that's----

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: ----everything that I know.

SA GOKEY: Okay. From your own perception, do--what do you think of Gil?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, like I said, I don't really know him that much.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, it's like, I can't really say what I know about him.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I've had a couple conversations to him, but I don't know him as a person, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you couldn't say if, like, he's mean or nice or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, from the conversations I had with him, he's--he's cool. Like, that's all I can say. I don't know him as a person, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Just asking mainly because you know, she--he's an ex-boyfriend, so.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I don't really know what they get into for their relationship, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. Okay. What about this ex-boyfriend from Texas? Do you know anything about that person?

CSSN COPELAND: That was my first time ever meeting, talking to him, seeing him, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What'd he look like?

CSSN COPELAND: He was kind of like my complexion.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Pretty much the same color. Same like, build. I believe he had dreads.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did--did you hear like a nickname or his name by chance?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And you saw him, so was she FaceTiming him?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, they were FaceTiming. Okay. All right. Okay.

So, then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: After what?

SA GOKEY: I guess, after you guys got off the phone with the ex-boyfriend from Texas.

CSSN COPELAND: She went on a, like, rampage calling other people and just talking about how Gilispe's not shit.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And when you say, rampage, I'm asking just because I want to--I want to understand like her mindset right then, like her--her mental capacity at that point.

Like, can you describe to me what that means to you?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, she was just calling other people.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And just talking about how Gil's not shit.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was she pissed off and cussing, or was she crying? Was she just like, you know, just kind of flailing around? Anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, she was like, she was cooling, but she--at the same time, you could tell that she's getting like agitated.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like I said, like, after we were talking, she mentioned that she spent $500. That's what blew her because she was, like, not only did I mention that, but she also told him, and on top of him telling her that, or, like, her telling him that, somebody else told her the same thing about getting a public defender, so.

It's just like she felt like he lied to him, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: All right. So, I mean, in your opinion--I know you might not know him--do you think he was using her for money?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't--I'm not--it's not my part. I don't know him, so.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. No. That's fine.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: So, I was, like, in your opinion--if you don't know, you don't know, okay? So, do you know who all she was calling?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am. The only person that I saw, or that I knew, was her ex-boyfriend, which she introduced me to.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, just the Texas guy?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you didn't know who else she called?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So. All right. So, then, what else happened?

CSSN COPELAND: From there, after she started making phone calls, like, she started getting emotional, started crying, and shit. From there, I just sat on the couch, you know, I was just like, all right, bro. Like, you just had her moment.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You were sitting on the couch. Where was she sitting?

CSSN COPELAND: She was sitting on the floor, like right in front of the table.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: From there, she was still crying, and then my other roommate, the Mexican one that's also across the room, he walked in, and he was just asking, is everything cool? And I was like, yeah, bro. I was like, she's just having her moment. And I was like--I was like, she's--she's going to be good. And then he was like, all right. Cool. And he walked in the room, and I guess, I don't know. He just walked in the room and just kept it pushing.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, he didn't really get involved?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Nah. He was just making sure if everything was good, and I told him, yeah, she's fine. Like, she just had some shit happen, so. She's just having her moment right now.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And he was like, all right. Cool. And he was like, if y'all need something, just come, let me know. I was like, all right. Back at cha.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: And from there, that's when the night started ending. Like, I was like, cool. I'm going to go to sleep. And she was like, all right. Cool. So, she came and went to sleep with me.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Where did you guys go to sleep?

CSSN COPELAND: My bed.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, then your bed. Okay. And she slept with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Did you guys have sex?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then what happened? What was the next thing you remember?

CSSN COPELAND: I went to sleep.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And then from there, that's when my chief came and knocked on the door the next day.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And what chief was that, again?

CSSN COPELAND: FCC Parker.

SA GOKEY: Parker. Okay. Do you remember about what time he knocked on the door?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was the sun out or was it still dark?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. The sun was out.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then walk me through what happened next?

CSSN COPELAND: He knocked on the door, and then I could hear somebody fidgeting with the doorknob. So, I thought it was my roommate because usually if I lock the door, if I close the door, he would just knock on the door until I wake up. So, I was like, hold on.

So, I woke up, and chief was there, and I was like, oh. I was like, good morning chief. And he was like, you having a late morning, like a late start? I was like, yeah. And he was like, is V/A.R. here? I was, like, yeah, she's right there. He saw her. He was like, all right. Cool. And that's when he was asking like, do I got a ride to work and everything? And I was like, at the moment, like, my roommate, he can take me whenever he gets off work. And he was like, all right. Cool.

He was like, just make sure you call CS1 or whatever and let him know, like, you're heading to work and everything. I was like, all right. Cool.

So, my roommate, he still never came through like when he was supposed to get off. So, I--I didn't go to work and I was just like, fuck it. I didn't go to work.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's when everything processed through, all the way up to Saturday, when CS1 and chief told me I was marked UA.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: But I feel like it was all a misunderstanding because obviously, I had the weekend off, but I guess that's how the military is. If you are marked UA or whatever the day I wasn't present, it still builds up until I actually go in and basically----

SA GOKEY: And show face.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, how many days did you get marked UA then?

CSSN COPELAND: Thursday, Friday, I think it was four. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday. Yeah. Sunday, around like the evening time, I came and I went to the CDO, and from there the CO is--was like, yeah, your mom called and she was worried [inaudible 00:39:26]. I didn't know about that part either, so.

I was like, yeah, I was like, I'm here. So, he told me I just got to standby until, until they can get somebody to basically do a urinalysis on me.

So, I waited, and then they ended up calling my MA1 because they couldn't find whatever they needed to find for her to get my sample. So, I waited until she got to the ship.

She got there. She got my information, and then after that, I did urinalysis. And then from there, they said I was good to leave.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. So, then, you said you were marked UA Thursday through Sunday?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, then what were you doing Friday?

CSSN COPELAND: I was at home.

SA GOKEY: At the barracks?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What were you doing?

CSSN COPELAND: In the lounge.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did you go anywhere?

CSSN COPELAND: I never left the building.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. What about Saturday?

CSSN COPELAND: I was also in the lounge. I was just in the barracks.

SA GOKEY: In your lounge? In your bedroom or in your----

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, in the building.

SA GOKEY: Oh, gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, I think my roommate knows by now, I don't really fuck with him. Like, ever since I've been in the barracks, I either sleep on the couch or whenever he is not in the room, that's when I'm in the room.

Obviously, when he goes to the room, I go into the living room or outside the room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, the one that you share a space with?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You--you guys don't get along?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He's just fucking filthy.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, it--it fucking irritates me every day that I have to go into a room with another grown man--you don't shower, you don't maintain yourself.

SA GOKEY: Gross.

CSSN COPELAND: And it came up until, I believe, yesterday morning, when his CO came to inspect the room and basically saw how shitty and fucked up his side was, that he had to fully deep clean the entire room.

It just annoys and irritates me that I have to live with someone like that, so.

SA GOKEY: No.

CSSN COPELAND: I go to the front desk every day. Like, they can't really move him because he's in a squadron. All right. Cool.

They offered if I wanted to move, but I told them, yeah, and--with just with me working my hours, I couldn't move because obviously when I had work, I wouldn't been able to move out within the timeframe they gave me, so.

They gave me like a timeframe. It was like three days or something. So, I couldn't switch rooms. So, it was what it was, but it just irritates me.

I think my roommate should know by now, like, whenever he's up or in the room, I'm outside the room or I'm in the living room. Whenever I go to sleep, I either go to my homeboy's room, or I go somewhere else, or I sleep on the couch.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Sometimes I sleep in the room because I'm--I'm just exhausted and tired, and--yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I don't blame you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It is--it annoys me, and he's older than I am.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. How old is he? Do you know?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe he's like, 21.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Or 22, something like that.

MS. BEA: Yeah. It's just gross.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. I would not be able to handle living in a situation like that. I would lose my mind.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, it is what it is. At the end of the day, I mean, deployment is the same way.

SA GOKEY: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: The fact that you're on land, you have all the time in the world to take a shower, clean up, do what you need to do, but he just chooses not to.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know why. It's----

SA GOKEY: Some people weren't raised right. Okay.

So, that Saturday, you were in a lounge in the barracks. Do you know which lounge?

CSSN COPELAND: I was like, on the third floor--fifth floor.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you were on both of them, or, you know----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Cool. Were you with anybody in there?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I was by myself.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do they have TVs in there or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha. Okay.

So, then Sunday, what were you doing?

CSSN COPELAND: I was also in the lounge.

SA GOKEY: Of the barracks?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's when I went to go take a shit, and I went to--I was taking a shit, and I heard somebody knock on the door, and I believe it was Ms. Mary's voice, and she asked who was in here, and I said, Copeland. And she was like, okay.

A couple minutes later, I heard somebody else like, trying to get in. I was like, I'm taking a shit. But he asked if he could come in here. I was like, bro, I'm taking a shit. He was like, all right. Cool.

And I believe like three, five minutes after that, that's when I believe the MAs came knocking on the door, asking--telling me to basically come out. From there, I was just like, what the fuck?

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: After that, I told him, just lemme wipe my ass. I got up, washed my hands, and everything. Cool. Walked out, and he was basically asking, do you know why I'm here?

I was like, yeah, because my chief texted me this morning saying basically--or the morning before that I was marked UA. And they were like, all right.

And from there, they weren't really saying much, but I guess, they were just asking me questions, like, more about myself, like, who--like, where I'm from and shit. Like, what school I graduated from, what sports and stuff do I play.

And then from there, the MA that was talking to me had left, went downstairs to go find his chief. And then from there, I was just upstairs talking to the two--the other MAs that were there.

After that, we walked down there. And from there, they basically talked to their chief, whatever. And he basically told me, just go check in to my command because obviously, I'm marked UA and to not make things worse on myself than what it already is, so.

I was like, all right. Cool. And I was like, I'll go do that. So, after that, I called my chief, and I was like--I [inaudible 00:46:15] asking my chief like, should I go basically to the barge right now with the time that it is right now? Or should I just wait till Monday when I have work?

And my chief was basically saying, it doesn't really make a difference. He said it would be--it could be better if I just go now, so it can be up and out the way. And he was like--he was saying, it's not really going to make a difference though because even if I do go Monday, it's going to be the same thing.

So, I was like, all right. Cool. And I hung up, and I put on my uniform, and I went to the barge. And then from there, that's when they did urinalysis and everything.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

So, your chief texted you Saturday and told you you were UA?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Why didn't you go in then?

CSSN COPELAND: because I was off. I already--I already told him. He asked the same thing. I was just like, if I'm off, then I'm off.

I mean, I read that you marked me UA. Cool. But if I'm off, like, they already know I'm not going to answer my phone. Like, even my CS2s, when they call, if I'm off, I'm not answering the phone.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you thought you were just off and not being marked as UA for the days you originally had off?

CSSN COPELAND: I--yeah. I didn't know what UA fully was, obviously, up until now. And they basically told me, cool.

So, if I'm marked UA, I'm just thinking, all right. When I go in Monday, they're just going to ask me basically what happened over the weekend, or why didn't I come in?

I didn't know that it keeps continuously going every day until I go and check in.

SA GOKEY: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: Until the MAs basically came in and told me that, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did command or the MAs ever come knocking on the door, like, Thursday or Friday, or Saturday?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. I was--I wasn't home at the time if they did come in.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So.

SA GOKEY: So, then where were you?

CSSN COPELAND: In the lounge.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha. Okay. But you were in the building somewhere?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Is there anybody that I can talk to to verify that you were in the lounges? Did anybody see you? Any friends, any passerby?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, shit if--whoever was there. I mean, you could talk to Ms. Mary.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: She walked in the lounge. I was on the fifth floor. She asked if I was good. I told her, yes, ma'am. I just told her--she walked by again and asked if everything was good. I told her, yeah. I just told her I didn't want to be in my room.

She obviously knows the state of my roommate.

SA GOKEY: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: because she was literally the only person that I went to every time I had an issue with my roommate. So, she can vouch and say the same thing, because I honestly do not like my roommate.

SA GOKEY: That's fair.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, he's a cool person. Like, he's a--he's a caring person, but it's just the way that he lives. I don't--I--I can't--like, I can't accept that.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: It's just filthy. Like, I respect him as a person, everything you do, cool. It's just the way that he lives as a person, it's filthy.

SA GOKEY: That's fair. That's fair. Okay.

So, Ms. Mary saw you the whole weekend in one of the lounges?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not going to say the whole weekend.

SA GOKEY: Well, I'm sorry. Like, one of the days or one of the times of these?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Anybody else?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

I mean, there was another dude that was in the lounge with us at the time, but I don't know him.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I'm sorry. I'm just picking up. You say with us. Were--was it just you and that other person, or were there like multiple people?

CSSN COPELAND: So, when I say us, it's like, it was me and another dude. We were inside the lounge, and at the time, they made him come into the lounge because they were people, like the workers there. They were cleaning the floor. They were waxing the floor. So, they made him come inside the lounge until they were done waxing the floor.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: But you don't know who that person is?

CSSN COPELAND: I've never seen him a day in my life.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Okay.

And then--so, then you guys go--do you go do your analysis? Who took you to do that?

CSSN COPELAND: So, when I walked in, one of my homeboys was--he was on watch and I was like, what's good, bro? He was like, what's good? And I was like, can you call the CDO for me? And he didn't know how to call the CDO. So, he walked into one of the--he walked into like, this little area. It's like when you first walk into the barge and he asked for one of the chiefs.

And he was like, chief, do you think you could help me call for the CDO? And that's when one of the chiefs walked out, and he was like, you can't call for the CDO, like on the radio----

SA GOKEY: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: ----so, because it goes straight to the ship. And he was like, what do you need the CDO for? And then that's when I walked up and I was like, I need the CDO. And he was like, oh, okay.

And he picked up on his radio. He was like, CDO--he was like, CSSN Copeland here. And I guess like, basically, just telling him that I'm here to check in. So, he was like, give him a minute, he's going to head down.

From there, the CDO came down, it was a--it was, I believe, a lieutenant. And from there, he was talking to me, and he was basically saying that my mom said she hasn't heard from me. So, she called the base, and then she also called my command.

And from there, that's when they did the welfare check and everything. So, the lieutenant was basically telling me, my mom, and everything was worried. And I was like, yeah. I was like, she was, because obviously when I called her she was.

SA GOKEY: Your momma was mad at you?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah. So, I was--I was just letting him know that she was irritated.

Well, she wasn't irritated. She was just worried and mad, so. Yeah. So, then from there, he was basically saying, he's going to get somebody to go do your analysis.

So, he told me just to hang tight, and I was like, all right. So, he left to go basically find the urinalysis, and that's when me and the chief was talking. We were just talking about how he used to be a CS.

And then from there, I was just telling him how I wanted to cross rate because me personally, I don't like being a CS, and I don't think I can do like a full--like, my whole entire life is just being a CS.

So, I was talking to him about cross rating--being another rate, and he pulled me into like his little office and he pulled up like my ASVAB score. And he was basically saying, if I study whoopie woo, I can cross rate and become something else, like a yeoman.

We were also talking about like CBs. And then from there, the officer was basically saying, MA1 one was on the way because they couldn't find where the sample holder was for me to take urinalysis.

So, from there, I was just waiting for MA1 to come. Eventually, MA1 showed up and she told me to go downstairs with

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

Arrange and bind the record of trial with allied papers in the sequence indicated below. The court reporter is responsible for certifying the record of trial prior to transmittal for appellate review, in accordance with R.C.M. 1112 and JAG/CNLSCINST 5813.1G.

k. All transfer orders, confinement orders, and excess leave orders.

l. Briefs of counsel submitted after trial, if any.

8. Preliminary Hearing.

a. DD Form 457, Preliminary Hearing Officer's Report, pursuant to Article 32, if such hearing was conducted, followed by any other allied papers that accompanied the charges when referred for trial (including any matters submitted under R.C.M. 405(l), unless included elsewhere in the record of trial).*

b. Waiver of Article 32 Hearing (if applicable).

9. Pre-Trial Allied Papers.

a. Convening Order and all amending convening orders.

b. DD Form 458, Charge Sheet (unless included at the point of arraignment in the transcript).

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

c. Congressional inquiries and replies, if any.

d. Advice of staff judge advocate, when prepared pursuant to Article 34 or otherwise.

10. Record of Proceedings.

a. Substantially verbatim recording of court-martial proceedings. Segregate open and closed sessions of the court-martial in accordance with R.C.M. 1113 and the following guidance:*

b. Ensure that each closed session of the court-martial is recorded on a separate DVD marked CLOSED SESSION, placed in its own envelope marked CLOSED SESSION, and sealed.

c. Label all DVD(s) and envelopes with the information on page 1 of this template.

d. Mark all DVDs and envelopes with "1 of X." as necessary (for example, the second DVD of six DVDs and its envelope should be marked, 2 of 6). All DVDs of open sessions may be in one envelope.

e. Mark all DVDs with their beginning and ending timestamps. The timestamps for closed sessions should match those shown on the Index.

f. Verbatim transcript or summarized report prepared in accordance with JAGINST 5814.1G. Include the following:

I. A certificate of correction, if any (including any supplemental certification for additional proceedings).

II. Court reporter and transcriptionist certification of verbatim transcript.

g. Records of former proceedings (Article 30a) and/or trials, (e.g., electronic/digital record of former proceeding, including audio recording and any scanned documentation/transcripts, CD/DVD format).*

14. Redaction. The following information shall be redacted in accordance with JAGMAN 1059 from the record of trial prior to releasing it to any accused or victim (including any transcript made pursuant to R.C.M. 1114 and attached to the record of trial) unless the information establishes an element of an offense, or is otherwise required:

a. Any recordings of closed sessions, any transcripts of closed sessions, and any sealed exhibits.

b. Names of minor victims, and names of minor witnesses. If an identifier is used, use only the initials.

c. Social Security Numbers.

d. Financial account information.

e. Home addresses.

f. Telephone numbers.

g. Personal e-mail addresses.

h. Dates of birth.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ASSEMBLING THE CERTIFIED RECORD OF TRIAL

i. Any other information that could be used to identify a specific person other than the accused.

*If the report of preliminary hearing or record of trial contains exhibits, proceedings, or other materials ordered sealed by the preliminary hearing officer or military judge, counsel for the Government, the court reporter, or trial counsel shall cause such materials to be sealed to prevent unauthorized examination or disclosure, pursuant to R.C.M. 1113. Sealed material shall be properly marked, individually placed in separate envelopes with a copy of the preliminary hearing officer or military judge sealing order affixed to it, and inserted at the appropriate place in the record of trial. Do not duplicate sealed material to include it in any copy of the record of trial. Instead, insert a copy of the sealing order in lieu of any sealed material, in any copies of the record of trial.

DIVIDERS ARE NOT NECESSARY TO SEPARATE EACH SECTION. IF USED, THEY CAN BE PAPER RATHER THAN CARD STOCK. IF A PARTICULAR COMPONENT IS NOT APPLICABLE IN THE RECORD OF TRIAL, SUCH AS AN ARTICLE 32 HEARING, EXHIBITS NOT ADMITTED, POST-TRIAL PROCEEDINGS AND VACATION HEARINGS, DO NOT INSERT A DIVIDER OR PLACEHOLDER.

FRONT AND BACK COVER MUST BE ON BLUE CARDS STOCK AND LABELED WITH GUM LABELS.

Binding. Each volume of a record of trial should be no more than 1.5 inches thick and bound at the top with metal or plastic fasteners. DO NOT interlace or "piggy-back" prong fasteners to create an oversized volume. DO NOT place hole punches where it covers up the evidence or language in the transcript. When it becomes necessary to assemble the record of trial in more than one volume, the volumes will be numbered consecutively, on the front cover, as illustrated below:

Volume 1 of 4 (Pages 1-250)
Volume 2 of 4 (Pages 251-400)
Volume 3 of 4 (Pages 401-652)
Volume 4 of 4 (Pages 653-901 and Exhibits)

Make the first volume of a multi-volume record an inch thick or smaller to allow for inclusion of post-trial documents. Limit subsequent volumes to 1.5 inches, unless dividing them requires assembling an additional volume smaller than a half inch.

Label the upper right-hand corner or the Preparation and Certification of Record of Trial Form (enclosure (8)) to reflect which copy it is, i.e., "ORIGINAL," "ACCUSED," "REVIEW" etc.

APPELLATE EXHIBITS

her. It was the same class that was there. And the lieutenant--the CDO walked into the office where we first were. And I believe the chief followed down. He went downstairs with us, and from there, everyone asked for my CAC, and she was just taking notes down and everything, jotting everything down from my CAC.

And from there, she waited. I guess she was like filling out a piece of paper, and from there she took my chief. Or not my chief, but the chief basically walked me upstairs to go pee. I went pee. Went back downstairs, gave her the bottle, and from there she gave me back my CAC and said I was good to go.

And then, with chief and the CDO, I both verified--they both made me verify, when I had to come back to work, and I was basically saying, chief told me Monday.

So, I called chief to verify when I left. And he was just saying, just come Monday, 7:30. And I was like, yes, chief.

SA GOKEY: Okay. How did you get to the ship?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate drove me.

SA GOKEY: Okay. The same roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Was anybody else with you?

CSSN COPELAND: Our other roommate, that was in the room with him. We went to get--he took me to the ship, and then afterwards we went to his Chipotle.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then what happened?

CSSN COPELAND: We went home after.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And you guys--you stayed at the room the rest of the night then?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

So, you didn't leave at all after you guys had gone to the ship, Chipotle came back. Nobody--or excuse me. Not nobody leaves.

You never left again?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then, presumably, you went up--got up and went to work the next morning?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Who took you to work?

CSSN COPELAND: My roommate.

SA GOKEY: Your roommate.

Is he on the same ship as you?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Whew. That man is a nice human. Where's he work? Do you know?

CSSN COPELAND: He works on base.

SA GOKEY: On this base?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay.

MS. BEA: I'm sorry. Is this the stinky roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Different roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Which one are we talking about?

CSSN COPELAND: The black African dude across.

MS. BEA: Black African dude. And your stinky roommate is which guy?

CSSN COPELAND: Sean.

MS. BEA: Sean. And what does he look like?

CSSN COPELAND: He's white.

MS. BEA: White dude. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Just want to make sure I'm keeping everybody straight. Okay. And the person that drove you around pretty much every time we talked about is your African dude, roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. Perfect. Thank you.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you have anything else right now?

MS. BEA: Yeah. I'm sorry. I know you got a ton of questions. I'm going to go back.

So, I know that you probably discussed a lot of this with Jess, like prior to me getting involved, right? So, I just wanted to make sure I understood.

So, what was your relationship with V/A.R. So, like, I know you said y'all didn't have sex that night, right? But I mean, like, were y'all talking, were you like getting to the point where you're going to be talking?

CSSN COPELAND: We just worked together.

MS. BEA: How long did you know her, like prior to her coming over?

CSSN COPELAND: Ever since I checked into the James E. Williams. On top of that, we went to A School together.

MS. BEA: Oh. Okay. So, you guys go way back?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, she's a CS as well?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it.

So, did you guys like hang out in A School? Like, essentially, what I'm asking is like, it sounds like you guys were pretty tight.

CSSN COPELAND: Nah. I mean, at A School, we just knew of each other. When I checked into the James E. Williams, we hung out a couple times, and yeah.

We hung out with a couple other people. I remember we would go out sometimes. We would go to--we went to Dave and Buster's. We went to Dirty Buffalo.

So, there's been previous times where we've hung out before. We hung out when she came over.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, would you say you guys are just like platonic friends, or was there like a romantic interest there?

CSSN COPELAND: There was never a romantic interest.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. So, that's like way out of left field type scenario. You're just friends.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Understood. Okay.

So, you've known her for--for a while. So, you said that, you know, we already beat the whole salsa thing to death for certain. But you said that you guys were talking after you ate, and you mentioned something about--what's his name, Gilispe, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, I got confused. So, you said you saw him picking up a girl on his motorcycle. Tell me more about that.

CSSN COPELAND: He told me, like, that he was at work, and I was sitting down, and obviously, we were talking. The ship's not big, so.

MS. BEA: It is not.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. We were sitting there talking, and he was basically saying how we picked up a female in his car and so on. Like, he was basically saying like, he didn't really say much. He picked her up.

Like, she was--well, she was in her car. It was two females, and a female asked him in the passenger seat, how fast did your bike go? And he basically nodded and said, come find out yourself.

So, she hopped on his bike and she drove down the street, or not she, but he drove down the street with her, and then from there he picked up her number and they've been talking ever since.

But V/A.R. she initially got mad because--I'm guess--I'm guessing, the day that he was with the female, he was asking for his--his--helmet back that he bought V/A.R. And V/A.R. was basically asking him like, why do you want the helmet? And he was basically saying like, because it brings back all the times, like, all the places they've could have gone together, this, that, the third.

And she basically just went off about the helmet, like, what does he specifically need the helmet for? And they were going on back and forth.

And then from there, he was just like, he cut it, and he was like, fuck it. Like, you could just keep the helmet.

MS. BEA: Did this all happen on Thursday night, did you say----

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: ----or this is Wednesday?

CSSN COPELAND: No. That--no. That was like the night that she came over. Like, she was basically telling me about that.

MS. BEA: Oh. Okay. So, she started talking to you about that whole shit?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But I'm saying, like with Gillespie and the female driving.

MS. BEA: Got it.

CSSN COPELAND: That was--that was when he told me when I was at work, the same day that she came over.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. So, let me make sure I have it right. So, when she came over, at some point, she started talking about Gillespie. Was she just like talking about her relationship, and were they still dating at the time, or they had already broken up?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. I----

MS. BEA: It's messy. Okay. And then, she was like telling you about an argument that she had with Gillespie about this motorcycle helmet, and you were like, oh, well, Gillespie told me----

CSSN COPELAND: No. So, she was talking about Gillespie, and she had mentioned something about him and a female, and I was like, that's crazy because so and so, and that's when I started talking about when you told me at work about the female.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And she was like, no fucking way you said that because he basically texted me the day that basically, I told him about her--told her about it.

She was--basically, put two and two together. And the same day that he was talking to the female was the same day that he was asking for the bike helmet back.

MS. BEA: Oh. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: I get it now. All right. And that really pissed her off, and it sounds like she--yeah. Flipped out about that. Okay.

So, she texted Gillespie, and she was like, fuck off or wherever--whatever, something like that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: And then you said that she called her--oh, I'm sorry. Did she call her boyfriend in--ex-boyfriend in Texas before or after that?

CSSN COPELAND: After that.

MS. BEA: After that. Okay. And so, it sounds like--I mean, she was probably--was she talking to her ex-boyfriend about stuff with Gillespie?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. When did she like lose it, lose it? Because you said that she was like on the ground, crying. Everything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Like, after she got done calling everyone. Like, after she got off the phone with her ex-boyfriend. Cool. Then she just started calling other people, and I guess she just lost it. Like, she was just done calling people, and she was just like, she was done.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, I was just like, cool. And that's when I sat there and just let her have her moment, and I was like, all right, bro.

MS. BEA: Was she drinking?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She had like a shot or two of buzz ball. But then again, Buzz Ball's not strong. So, I don't----

MS. BEA: I don't know what buzz ball is.

SA GOKEY: You don't know what buzz ball is?

MS. BEA: I'm so sorry. Oh, is that like the balls you see at the liquor store? Okay, my bag. Sorry. As we've talked about multiple times in the past, I'm pretty old. Okay.

So, she had like a shot or two out of the buzz ball?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Would you consider her to be drunk? I mean, have you seen her drunk before?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She was--I've never seen her drunk, but I don't think she was drunk because she was totally impaired of everything that she was doing, so.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it.

CSSN COPELAND: She was aware of everything she was doing.

MS. BEA: Okay. What do you mean when you say that?

CSSN COPELAND: Say what?

MS. BEA: Like, that she was aware of everything that she was doing.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, obviously, if somebody's drunk, you can tell if somebody's drunk because like, obviously, if they're having like a speech impediment or----

MS. BEA: Can't walk.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: So, like, when I say, she was visible and aware of everything she was doing, like she was obviously, like, you can tell there were no symptoms, that she was drunk.

MS. BEA: Got it. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: And let me see here. I have a bunch of questions written down. Okay. I just want to make sure I understood the timeline a little bit.

So, you were like, all right. Well, I'm going to go to sleep, and she came into the room with you. Was your roommate in there at the time?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe so. Shit. I dunno because by the time I woke up, everybody was gone.

MS. BEA: Was this Wednesday night into Thursday morning?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe so.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, you said, when you woke up, everybody was gone? Where--I never figured out where was she?

CSSN COPELAND: She was in my bed.

MS. BEA: She was in your bed? She hadn't left yet?

CSSN COPELAND: No. My chief was there.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: When he walked in, he saw her. Cool. And he told me, all right. When I'm obviously done and everything, he told me, just get ready for work and head to work.

MS. BEA: Here's what I'm confused about, too. Why didn't Chief just drive you to work? You didn't go back there anyway, right? Did he offered----

CSSN COPELAND: No. That's--no. He should have. That's why I was pissed off because they fucking marked me UA.

MS. BEA: Right.

CSSN COPELAND: That's the thing that, like, I don't know, because he--I feel like he set me for failure. I told--I fucking told him that, bro.

MS. BEA: Did you ask him for a ride? And he was like, no.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I--I feel like I should have offered, like, I should have been like, can I get a ride to work?

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: But then again, like, I feel like, he knows, obviously, I don't have a car, so.

MS. BEA: Right. Yeah. That doesn't make any sense. Okay. So, it just doesn't make sense, period.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: It's not just to me, it doesn't make sense. It just doesn't sense.

CSSN COPELAND: But like, he--like, he was also saying when he called me, he was just saying it was just a big miscommunication about me being UA.

So, I was like, all right. Cool. But I still was like a little irritated with the fact that it just--like, they marked me UA and like they made it this big fucking deal, this issue. I'm like, cool. I just left how it was.

I'm not finna argue. I'm not finna start a hissy fit or nothing. At the end of the day, I was UA. Cool. I'm going to own up to it. So.

MS. BEA: Okay. And V/A.R. was also UA with you, right? Like, essentially--because you know, are you both on the same schedule?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Was she supposed to be at work on Thursday as well?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She worked Friday and the weekend.

MS. BEA: Oh, I see.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: So, she was off.

CSSN COPELAND: We were opposite watch bill. So, when I'm working, she's not working. When she's working, I'm not working.

MS. BEA: And can you help me understand, are you on days all the time, or do you still have to work nights on the barge? Do you know what I mean?

You know how the carrier's like 24 hours?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Yeah, but no.

MS. BEA: No. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: So, our schedule's like, obviously, you come in on a turnover day, 7:30.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And you work 7:30 and we get off around 17, which is like what, 5, 6, 7, 5:30, 5:40.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, it's pretty much 7:30 to five in the evening?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. And then--so, she was supposed to be off. Was she at work on Wednesday? The day y'all had the conversation about the salsa?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was a turnover day.

MS. BEA: That was turnover. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: So, you came in and was she there as well?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes. Every turnover day, both watch supposed to be there.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. And then she was supposed to be off, I would assume, like, you know, from Wednesday until Thursday, and she was supposed to go back to work on Friday?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. Thank you for helping me understand that.

And, so, after chief woke y'all up--I mean, how did she seem that morning?

CSSN COPELAND: She was fine.

MS. BEA: She was fine. When did she leave?

CSSN COPELAND: After Chief had left. Like, an hour or two later. I was just--she was just helping me clean, and then from there we left. And then that's when I called Chief, or I didn't call him, but I was just telling him--I texted him.

I was like, when my roommate gets here, I'll go to work. He never showed up. He got there by the time I got off work. So, from there, I didn't think to call or text. At the end of the day, I didn't show up. All right. Cool.

MS. BEA: Where did V/A.R. go?

CSSN COPELAND: She went back home.

MS. BEA: Where did she live at?

CSSN COPELAND: On base.

MS. BEA: Same place or somewhere different?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Somewhere different. I think it is like, from this building, it's down the street.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I believe so.

MS. BEA: Did she walk? Did somebody come pick her up? Did she mention anything about how she was going to get back?

CSSN COPELAND: Getting a Uber.

MS. BEA: A Uber. On base?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. They got a zTrip.

MS. BEA: Oh, yeah. Not that they can't get on base, it's just kind of like she didn't want to walk.

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, the zTrip. It's on base teleportation. It's an Uber.

MS. BEA: I see. Okay. Got it.

Do you remember what time that was that you saw her last?

CSSN COPELAND: After chief left, and then after she got ready and everything and she helped me clean up my room.

MS. BEA: This might be a dumb question, but cleaning up how?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, the mess that was left in the living room.

MS. BEA: From what?

CSSN COPELAND: The food.

MS. BEA: From the food?

CSSN COPELAND: Cleaning up.

MS. BEA: Okay. Well, I just didn't--I don't know what type of mess y'all make. So, like, the messy kitchen type scenario?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: The food--there was food left out. We didn't throw none of the food away. So, everything was sitting on the countertop, on the stove, the pans and pots, and everything. There was dishes in the sink.

So, he was like, y'all need to get that cleaned up because obviously, if he's coming to inspect, that's unsat. If you have trash into the trash can, it's unsat. You have to take the trash out every day.

MS. BEA: Who's coming to inspect? I'm sorry.

CSSN COPELAND: My chief.

MS. BEA: I didn't know that part. Keep in mind, I didn't talk to you to begin with, right. So----

CSSN COPELAND: I believe I said that already. When he came into the room, he said like, he was coming to inspect.

MS. BEA: I didn't know that part. Okay.

So, he was coming into inspect, because why?

CSSN COPELAND: Monthly inspection.

MS. BEA: Oh. I've never lived in the barracks, and I've never been in the Navy. You know that.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: I'm just trying to ask questions. Okay.

So, he was coming in to inspect.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Did he tell you that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He didn't text, call, nothing. He just came in. But like I said, I was asleep, and when I heard like the fidget on the door, I thought it was my roommate. So, I said, hold up. I got up, opened the door, it's my chief.

MS. BEA: Okay. And this is the same time he came and woke y'all up when you like, were supposed to be at work, and he was like, late day. You got a late start or something like that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, he was supposed to come by anyway to inspect. He just didn't tell you he was going to do that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't--I don't know. I don't know if it was because either I was late or if he actually was coming to do a room inspection.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: At the end of the day, that's above my pay grade. Chief is the chief. I'm not going to argue with the chief. So.

MS. BEA: Okay. Did he say he was--okay.

Like, I wasn't there. Right. So, keep in mind, when I'm asking these questions, just because I wasn't there.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Did he say like, I'm going to come back and inspect? Did he say--did he walk in and he was like, this room's a mess. You got to clean up before you come to work. Like, how did that go? How did you know that this was like an inspection?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, when he woke up, he was just like, is it a late start? I was like, yeah. Cool.

I mean, obviously, on top of that, if you're supposed to be at work, you're supposed to have the room clean if you leave. So, regardless, you're supposed to have everything clean. But he was basically saying, I need to clean up, and when I'm done cleaning head--head to work.

So, I was like, all right. Cool. And then he was like, do you have a way of getting to work? And that's when I went to--I mentioned my roommate. I was like, my roommate, when he gets off work, he could probably take me. And he was like, all right. Cool.

When you get off work--when he gets off work, then just head to work. Make sure you call CS1 and somebody and notify them.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And that's when I was like, all right. Cool. I got you.

MS. BEA: Got it. So, she helped clean. And then did you like--did she just like leave straight out of your room? Did you like walk her down to the front? Like, how did that go?

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, I had to start getting ready for work, and I called my roommate, and he didn't answer. All right. Cool. So, I just waited until he got to the room. By the time he got there, I was just like, fuck it. I'm not--I'm not going because by the time he got there, we were--they were already off work.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not finna go into work, like, who am I supposed to check into? So, I was just like, all right. Cool. And I left it. I let the days pass by until Saturday hit and they texted me saying, I'm UA.

At that point, I'm not finna argue. I was just like, fuck it bro. I'll just go in Monday. And then, obviously, all that shit happened Sunday. So, I had to go in, and that's when I went in.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, to be really clear with you, like normally, you know, being UA is not a crime that NCIS investigates, right? We're really worried about V/A.R. which is, you know, why we want to talk to you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: So, you know, like all of the background is appreciated. I just, you know, I really want to know more about V/A.R. as far as, like, what was her mental state when she left.

Like, do you have any information that would be helpful for us to find her? Like, did she say that she was like not doing well? Did she say she was sad she was going to go somewhere?

CSSN COPELAND: She was fine. If you want to know more about her mental health, I'd probably say go to Mitch or Gillespie because, obviously, Gillespie had all the answers when he talked to me the other day, so.

MS. BEA: What do you mean by that?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm just saying, like he had everything, like, he was just saying, like, he was saying she liked to go on walks, saying that she wanted to buy plane tickets, this, that, the third.

He was basically stating how, when he would talk to her, he'd be like, randomly, what do you want to do? She would be like, I want to buy a plane ticket to so and so. Cool.

So, out of anything, I don't really know what V/A.R. does. Cool. I just wanted to hang out. Cool. Obviously, it went bad because she had an attitude with Gillespie. They're not on good terms, or they got into an argument. Cool.

But out of anything, Mitch and Gillespie knows more than what I do about V/A.R. because, obviously, they've been in relationships with her.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And they know her as a person. I don't fully know her as a person.

MS. BEA: Okay. And, you know, I'm getting that you're saying that you don't know her as well as a person.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Like, fully understand that. It's just that I think, you know, be like, you might have been the last person to see her that we've talked to. Unless there's somebody else that saw her after you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Like, that's why I'm asking you. Did she say she had plans to go meet somebody else? Was she like, I'm just going to go back to my room and sleep?

Like, anything you have would be helpful for us.

CSSN COPELAND: It was just like, I'll see you later. All right. Cool. If you need something, just call or text me. All right. I got you.

MS. BEA: Okay. Was she still crying when she left, or she seemed like she was fine?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She was cool.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, like, if you go to sleep after having a bad night, usually if you go to sleep and you wake up, you're fine.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Well, that's just how I see it. I'm not going to speak for her.

MS. BEA: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, if you're holding your emotions, you can hold your emotions. Cool. But from the talk that I had and when I--when she woke up and shit before she left, she said, I was just like, have a good day. If you need something, just call her, text me. And she was like, all right. And she left.

MS. BEA: And then did you hear from her again after she left?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah. Until I got back, and then my chief was basically saying we're both marked UA.

And then from there, that's when I texted her and I was like, yo, like are you good? I was like, they just barked--they marked me and you, UA. And then I was just like--I think I asked her to call or text me if she get the text or whatever. She never responded.

And then, I was talking to Gillespie when I went to the ship, fucking--the day that I went Sunday. And he was basically asking if I heard anything from her after that. I was like, nah. But I was just telling him like, if--like, when she left, like, if she needed something, just to call or text me, and he was like, all right. Cool.

After that, like, we just left it as that until, obviously, I went to work the next day, and he was just like talking about it and shit. I was just like, all right, bro.

MS. BEA: What kind of stuff was he saying?

CSSN COPELAND: Like, obviously, the stuff I was talking about, how she liked to go on walks, and she wanted to put plane--like, plane tickets and shit.

Like, he was asking me basically what you guys are asking me, like if she, like, said anything, like she wanted to go anywhere. I was like, nah.

Like, she was--I was like, I don't know what you did, but she was mainly just talking about how you fucked up, bro. I was like, I don't know what the fuck you did, like what the hell you told her, what you guys [inaudible 01:16:37] head up into? But I was like, "Bro, I was like, bro, you had her crying and shit. She was just mad as fuck at you." He was like, "Yeah, she text me so on." And I was like, "All right, bro." I was like, "I don't know what you did, but that's between y'all, bro."

Like--and people--like, most people already know, like, I don't like getting involved in other people's bullshit--like, what ya'll got going on is what ya'll got going on. I'm not fin'to get myself involved. As you already know, I like to [inaudible 01:17:04]. I don't roll with that shit. After that situation, I just been chilling obviously until shit like this happens. They asked if they want to come over. I'm being a nice guy. Cool. And shit like that happens.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. I mean, you seem like, you feel like a certain type of way because shit like you--you're involved even though you don't want to be.

I mean, you got any type of feelings about that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I mean, it's like I can't do shit about it. Like, obviously, if I'm pulled into the bullshit, I'm pulled into the bullshit. There's no way I can get myself out of it. And once you're in, you're in.

I'm not going to sit here, nick and nag about it. At the end of the day, I allowed her to come over. She did what she did. That's just me being the nice guy, and now I'm involved in the bullshit. It's not shit I can do to get myself out of it. Cool.

SA GOKEY: Did you--that like, she ever mention if she had any type of like mental health struggles or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: She didn't mention it, or she did like----

CSSN COPELAND: She never said anything about that.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Got it.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, another thing that you mentioned that I wanted to chat about is you said that your roommate, Skipper, came by--the CO came by, and like, had him clean the room, and like it was nasty.

Did I mishear that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Your nasty roommate?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Did you say his CO came and inspected it? The room?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: When did that happen?

CSSN COPELAND: I think yesterday. Yeah. I think it was yesterday.

MS. BEA: Okay. And if you don't know, it's okay. Do you know what command he's with?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He is in a squadron.

MS. BEA: Squadron. You know what type of squadron? Are we talking helicopters, jets?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I don't--I dunno.

MS. BEA: That's okay if you don't know.

CSSN COPELAND: Because his--his command is decommissioning soon. So--yeah. When his command decommissions, he's going on the deployment with the new squadron that's attached to the FORD. So, that's the only thing that I know about his squadron.

MS. BEA: That's kind of positive. Right. They'll be gone.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, cool. But eventually, it's--somebody going to replace them.

MS. BEA: Hopefully, they're cleaner.

CSSN COPELAND: Hopefully.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, yesterday is when--if we think, the Squadron CO came by and, like, made him clean everything. Like, clean the room really well and everything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. It was like mainly just his side and shit.

MS. BEA: Okay. Okay. And then the other thing--I know I already asked you. I just wanted to clarify. When you said that your roommate drove you to the barge on Sunday, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Did he wait around with you until you were done doing your urinalysis and everything, and then that's when y'all went to Chipotle? Or like----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: ----did he come back?

CSSN COPELAND: He stayed there, but he can't--obviously, he can't go on to the ship. So, he stayed in the car. So, like, where I walk is like I need to--my chip is like a reader to a CAC scan for me to enter.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: And then from there I walked on, and he stayed, and then I texted him. I was like, just wait like 25 minutes because I got to wait for my MA1 to come. And when she gets here, they're going to make me fucking do urinalysis. And after that, they said, I'm good to go.

So, he was like, okay, bro.

MS. BEA: Okay. And this is the same African dude with the white Jeep?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. Okay. So, we spent a ton of time asking you questions. What do you think is relevant, as far as like, do you have any information that would help us or other people that we should talk to?

I know that they've been doing a lot of investigation and, you know, the name Gillispie and Mitch, sure is not unusual to them, but is there anything else you can think of, because we're really worried?

CSSN COPELAND: That'd be the only two.

I mean, obviously, they go back and forth, and they're so in love with her, so. Obviously, the only two people I would think that actually know V/A.R. is Mitch and Gillespie, so.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. Did she--so, sometimes people like mention things and you don't think it's going to be important at the time, but then like, when you think back, you're like, oh, okay.

Is there anything that she might have mentioned to you in the amount of time that she was with you about, you know, like what she wanted to go do, or like, anything that was like indicative of her mental state, anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Even if you don't think it's important.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

MS. BEA: Okay.

Anything else, Jess, because I think we--we'll take a break real quick.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Let's take a break.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Do you need anything?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: You need to use restroom [inaudible 01:22:18] good?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. We'll be right back with you. All right.

CSSN COPELAND: All right.

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 01:22:31.]

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea returned to the room at timestamp 02:05:19.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Sorry about that. Are you good?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. You don't need to use the restroom or anything?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, just a couple more things. So, with you going UA, what do you think--do you think the command's going to get pissed off at you? And like anything--like, do you think you're in trouble with them?

CSSN COPELAND: What you mean?

SA GOKEY: Like, do you think they're going to--you're going to---

MS. BEA: Yeah. You're going to----

SA GOKEY: ----put you on restriction or, you know, anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, with me going UA? Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Okay. So, one thing I wanted to pitch is--so, you said with--you told us that you were in the barracks the whole weekend, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: So, it's not like you were out, you know, in another state doing whatever God knows what, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: And a lot of times when Sailors go UA, that's what we're worried about, is you guys are out doing dumb shit, getting arrested, doing dumb things.

Hell, some of them, the defect to frigging North Korea. So, I would like then to look at your phone and place you in the room, and that could potentially maybe help you with your command.

Like, we could pitch it to him like, 'Hey, man, he didn't go to work, but it's not like he was fucking missing or gone or whatever.' Right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: You would be cool with that?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Cool. What's your passcode?

CSSN COPELAND: 982--wait. [redacted].

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, [redacted]

CSSN COPELAND: [redacted].

SA GOKEY: [redacted]. Okay. All right. I'm just going to fill this out real quick. It's June, oh, Lord, have mercy on my soul.

And I spell your name wrong. I'm tired too. J-E-R-M-I-A-H, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: And then Copeland. What kind of phone you got?

CSSN COPELAND: iPhone 15.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Working--86 and 107. So, you said iPhone. I'm sorry, what?

CSSN COPELAND: 15.

SA GOKEY: iPhone 15. Okay. Conducting on June 25, by NCIS. Okey-dokey. All right.

So, I'm going to scoot back over to you and we're going to go over this. All right. So, did I spell your name correct that time?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, I'll read this to you.

So you, Jeremiah Copeland, after being advised by me, Special Agent Jessica Gokey, that the Naval Criminal Investigative Service is conducting an investigation into the Article 86 and 107, which was the two we discussed earlier.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: You have been--have--excuse me. Our goal 86 and 107 have been requested to permit a search of my iPhone 15.

You have been informed of count--of your constitutional right to refuse to permit this search in the absence of a search warrant.

So, what that means is, again, I don't have a search warrant to go into it----

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: ----but you're just giving me permission to go ahead and go into that, okay?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay.

In full understanding of this right, you have nevertheless decided to permit this search to be made. This search may be conducted on 03 June 25 by NCIS, and you hereby give your permission to remove and retain any property or papers found during the search, which are desired for investigative purposes.

You make this decision freely and voluntarily, and is made with no threats having been made or promises extended to you?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. I'll say it again.

Do you--did I--have I threatened you today?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Have I made you any promises?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you agree with this statement?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm going to be able to get my phone back. Like, I got to call my mom.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: It's too much shit going on.

SA GOKEY: No. That's fair. Are you good with signing this?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But is it cool if I can call my mom?

SA GOKEY: Yeah. You want to call your mom?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you want to call her right now?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right. Do you want to go ahead and sign that, and then I will----

CSSN COPELAND: Can I wait first?

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Sure. Absolutely.

MS. BEA: Let me--so, just to make sure that everything on the phone is like essentially, pristine, no problem with you calling your mom. I'll give you my phone to do it. You know her number by heart, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. Do you mind if we ask you a couple more questions before we do that, or do you want to just call her right now?

CSSN COPELAND: Go ahead and ask the questions.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Okey-dokey. Okay. So, like I told you earlier, we're conducting a cast in your room, and you do have that roommate that lives in there.

Can you tell me what electronics are his?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, everything that's on his side.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, nothing would be on--nothing on his side would be yours and vice versa?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you have any other additional electronics in that room?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I have another phone. That's my phone that I have to go turn into AT&T.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I got my PS5, and that should be it.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Out in the common room, are there any electronics that stay out there?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, my PS5 is what I was saying. It's also in the living room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, your PS5's out there. Okay.

Is there anything else out there that's yours or anybody else's that you know of?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm mean, the TV.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But the TV's the barracks, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, the PS5 out in the common area is yours, and then you have another phone in your room.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: What kind of phone is that?

CSSN COPELAND: It's an iPhone 15 as well.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know what color it is?

CSSN COPELAND: It's gray.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Is it broken?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It's not broke, but I fucked it up, so I broke it, but I got it fixed. They replaced the front, so I have to go turn it in.

So, they basically gave me like 31 days in order for me to turn it in, or else they're going to charge me for that phone---

SA GOKEY: Oh.

CSSN COPELAND: ----with the one I'm already purchasing, so.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha. Okay. So, it's like a trade thing, so you get to keep----

CSSN COPELAND: It was part of my insurance.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha. Oh, that's nice. Okay. Do you have any, like iPads or laptops?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. What about any--nope. There wasn't a desktop in there. Right? That desktop's his, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.] Yeah. It's an Xbox.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Oh, it's a Xbox. It's just--okay. I got you. Okay. All right. I want to kind of talk about--go back to

V/A.R. Can I just call her [inaudible 02:13:05]--yeah,

V/A.R. Just a couple more questions. Okay?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: I know you're tired.

When she came over to your house, did she--she had her phone, right? What kind of phone does she have?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe it was the same as mine. It was a black iPhone 15.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she have any other electronics?

CSSN COPELAND: She just had her phone.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And she was just wearing that bracelet, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Does she have an Apple watch that you know of?

CSSN COPELAND: [Negative response.] I don't think she's ever had one.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Have you ever had an Apple Watch?

CSSN COPELAND: I do have an Apple Watch.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Where's that at?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe it's in my desk.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. When V/A.R. was on the phone with whoever, when she was--I'll use your word on like a rampage, did she--when she was on the phone, did she ever ask anybody to come pick her up or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so. I mean, like I said, I was on the couch. I know she did call Rich. And she was on the phone with her ex, but from what I recall, I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

So, you don't recall hearing her tell somebody like, yo, come get me, come pick me up, I want to leave, or anything like that?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Who--what roommate was it again that walked in and was like, yo, is she good?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know his name, but it is--it's the other one that's across the room. Not the African one, but the other-

---

SA GOKEY: The other guy?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Cool. Not stinky white boy?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then you guys--when you went to bed, you guys went to bed in your bed?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, I just wanted to clarify that.

So, this--this statement is the true statement, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. True and accurate to the best of your knowledge, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. It says, on--and I might've heard you wrong on Sunday. So, I'm not trying to come at you sideways. Okay. I just want to make sure everything I got it right.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Because on Sunday, I thought you told me that either you had slept on the couch and she slept in the bed, or vice versa.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't think so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I must have misspoke or misheard. I apologize. But you guys did sleep together in the bed?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But you guys didn't have sex?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What did you guys wear whenever you went to sleep?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe I had the same thing on. It was just blue shorts and a black shirt.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Is it the same black shirt you got on right now?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, what was she wearing?

CSSN COPELAND: The same thing she had on the whole night.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And what was that again?

CSSN COPELAND: Black shirt, black pants.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, the--another reason why I'm bringing that up, so FCC, we talked to him, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: He has a bit of a different story, right? He said that when he walked into the common space----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: ----that you two were on the ground in front of the couch completely naked.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Is that true?

CSSN COPELAND: When chief walked in, he knocked on the door. So, obviously, when he knocked, I was in my room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you weren't on the floor naked with her?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I was in my room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And she was also in the room with you, though?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes. When I opened the door, she was there.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And he watched her when she was in the bed, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did she say anything to him?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She was asleep.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, FCC's not telling the truth?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He is not.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: When he--when I opened my door when he knocked on it, she was asleep. I opened the door, and he's standing right there.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: He asked me was it a late start, and I said, "Yes, Chief."

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. I'm just going back through my notes real quick. Okay.

So, just to reiterate, so, Thursday--Thursday was the day that FCC got to your barracks?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then Friday, Saturday, you sat in the barracks all day?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And went from various lounges?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then Sunday, the MAs got there, knocked on the door, and was like, yo, bro, you're UA?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. All right.

So then, the Jeep, so you went to go pick V/A.R. up, right?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. Did you ask permission to take the Jeep at that time?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. He let me.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay. I wasn't sure if, like, maybe he had left the keys on the counter, and he's just like, yo bro, you can use my car whenever, as long as I get to work, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, you did ask permission to take those keys?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: To go get her, to bring her back?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. And then, the next morning, whenever you guys were up--so, you added a couple more details. So, I just want to make sure.

So, you guys got up after FCC was there, and y'all cleaned the room?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. And then, can you give me an about what time she may have left?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know because I don't even know what time she had came into the room, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. So, the reason again, I'm asking is because on Sunday you told me that you, your roommate, and her got in the car and y'all dropped her off at Miller Hall.

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't say that Sunday.

SA GOKEY: You sure?

CSSN COPELAND: I said, "It--it was me, my roommate that--like, two roommates.

SA GOKEY: Oh, I'm sorry. Not Sunday. I do apologize. When you guys took her home Thursday morning. I'm sorry. You--you're right. You didn't say that Sunday.

So, Thursday, you told me that you, the roommate, and her got in the car car and then y'all dropped her off at Miller Hall.

CSSN COPELAND: Miller Hall is my barracks.

SA GOKEY: And you're at X2?

CSSN COPELAND: Which is Miller Hall, isn't it?

SA GOKEY: That's Willis Hall. Miller Hall is the one right down the road. Her barracks.

CSSN COPELAND: Now, I'm confused. Miller Hall is my barracks.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, then, let's just say it this way, then. Sunday, you told me--on Sunday when we talked, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Right.

SA GOKEY: That you, roommate, her got in the car and y'all together dropped her off at her barracks.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't remember saying that.

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, what--so, she got in an Uber then now?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know it was Uber or zTrip?

CSSN COPELAND: Probably a zTrip.

I mean, obviously, most Ubers, you have to be like on base or base access.

SA GOKEY: Right.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: I was just asking if you knew either way, because again, she's still UA, right?

CSSN COPELAND: When I say Uber, it's like, zTrip.

SA GOKEY: You're talking interchangeably?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Okay. That's fine. I just wanted to clarify. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Did she tell you she was taking a zTrip?

CSSN COPELAND: No. That's what suspected. She was like, she's trying to go----

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: ----back to her room.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But she didn't tell you she was taking it? She just----

CSSN COPELAND: No. I assumed it was a zTrip.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Why did you assume it was a zTrip and her not just not walking home like she normally walks?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. I mean----

SA GOKEY: I'm just asking.

CSSN COPELAND: I never said she likes walking, so why would I assume she walks?

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, she left the room sometime that morning. You guys--you never got in a car with her and took her anywhere?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. What time--so, the roommate that you gets rides from mostly, do you know his work schedule?

Is he on days or nights?

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know what his schedule is.

SA GOKEY: Okay. But Thursday morning, he had already gone to work then?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay. So, presumably, he would be at work for the entire day.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: But you told FCC you're going to wait until he gets home to go to work.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Which would've been 16, 1700.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

SA GOKEY: Did you have anybody else to call or anything like that to get you a ride to work?

CSSN COPELAND: That's the only person. I'm not fin'to go out my day and ask other--somebody else to come pick me up.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Obviously, everybody works on a daily. I mean, I know my schedule's a little bit different with me being a CS.

SA GOKEY: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: So, theoretically, everybody's like daily duty and they have to report every day, Monday through Friday.

SA GOKEY: Yeah. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: And theoretically get the weekends off, so.

SA GOKEY: Fair.

CSSN COPELAND: He would be the only person I call. Sometimes I call my homeboy, or I'll call my CS2, but they're already at work, so there's only to call them because I know they're not going to come pick me up.

SA GOKEY: Okay. I gotcha. It just seems like you presumably should have known he was going to be at work all afternoon.

CSSN COPELAND: I didn't know, because usually I'll tell him or sometimes I'll wait. Sometimes he comes home early, sometimes he doesn't. Same with my roommate.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Because obviously, Squadron, they're--they're so much different from being--working on the ship.

SA GOKEY: Yeah.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, Squadron is honestly love, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. You brought up this homeboy a couple times.

So, you guys--you go sleep in his room sometimes because of the stinky boy?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's his name?

CSSN COPELAND: It's a lot of them. It just depends on who--like, where we're going.

SA GOKEY: I gotcha. Who would you consider like your best friend out here?

CSSN COPELAND: Probably my homeboy on the Truman, but they just got back, so.

SA GOKEY: Okay. What's his name?

CSSN COPELAND: His name's Devonte Williams.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Well, since they got back, that's not one that you sleep in his room?

CSSN COPELAND: Nah.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Who do you mostly--whose room do you mostly sleep in?

CSSN COPELAND: So, my homeboy's name is Dee Dee?

SA GOKEY: Dee Dee?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

SA GOKEY: Is that a nickname?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe that's his name.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Do you know the last name?

CSSN COPELAND: Williams.

SA GOKEY: Williams. What command's he with?

CSSN COPELAND: I believe he's on the Ike.

SA GOKEY: Okay.

Anybody else that you sleep in the room?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Just his.

SA GOKEY: Okay. Okay. Let's see.

Do you have anything?

MS. BEA: Not right now. You know, because of our interactions in the past, you know, that like I shoot straight and I'm not trying to bullshit you or anything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: You know that we're just trying to find V/A.R. right?

So, do you know where she is?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Did you have anything to do with her disappearance?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: If you were to take a polygraph and we asked you those questions, would you pass?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay. So, you got nothing to hide?

CSSN COPELAND: No, ma'am.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: I've been straight up, everything you've been asking, I've been responded to.

MS. BEA: Okay. Yeah. I think a lot, you know--I know you're tired. I know you're frustrated. I know that this--it sucks being in this situation.

I know that, like, you know, we're asking questions like a 5-year-old would ask, but most of that is because we want to make sure that we understand you.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: And you know, kind of like we've been through this before, right? So, we talk to everybody, and everybody's got something different to say, usually.

So, sometimes people say pretty much the same thing, and sometimes there's wild shit differences. And what FCC told NCIS is just like real different. So, that's why, like, we really want to talk more about that, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Like, why--would this man lie on you?

CSSN COPELAND: I wouldn't say he would. I mean, he hasn't given me a reason to, but he literally walked in, and he knocked on my door. I opened--physically opened my room door and saw him.

MS. BEA: Yeah. Just want to make sure we're talking about the same thing. He knocked on the door to your suite, like with those two bunks in it, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Not to the main door, into the main living area. He knocked on your door?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yes.

MS. BEA: Okay. And--I mean, that's--because FCC told NCIS that y'all were naked.

CSSN COPELAND: I wasn't naked. I had shorts on.

MS. BEA: Oh, were you like not wearing a shirt?

Is that maybe why he got confused?

CSSN COPELAND: I mean, I didn't have a shirt on when I opened the door.

MS. BEA: Okay. What about V/A.R.

CSSN COPELAND: She was laying in the bed.

MS. BEA: And what about her clothes?

CSSN COPELAND: She had on a black top.

MS. BEA: When we're talking top, what kind of top were we talking? Like, a t-shirt. We talking a crop top bra?

CSSN COPELAND: Yes. The same t-shirt she's been wearing the whole night.

MS. BEA: Okay. Yeah. I guess that's kind of where I'm at. Right. Is like, he said that he saw her like nude up top, and he saw her breasts.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Do you know, like, what's the deal with that? It's hard for you to speculate you're not him, right? But do you know, like, why he would think that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

I mean, I don't know why he's saying that. He walked in, and we were both butt naked on the floor when he specifically knocked on my door.

MS. BEA: Were any of your roommates home at this time----

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: ----that you know of?

CSSN COPELAND: No. They were all at work.

MS. BEA: Okay. Tell me what Ms. Mary's schedule is. Like, does--do you think she would've been working at the time? Because it seems like y'all get along pretty well.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure. I mean, she works pretty much every day.

MS. BEA: Okay. Does she usually work during the day or at night?

CSSN COPELAND: During the day.

MS. BEA: During the day. Okay.

Is there anybody else we could talk to who would know--like, did you maybe talk to somebody at work about, like, V/A.R. spending the night? Anything else? Anybody come at you sideways about that?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Did Gilispe talk to you about it?

CSSN COPELAND: I've already stated, "he did."

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.] You said that it was like--was it twice afterwards?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. And help me remember when that was.

CSSN COPELAND: Sunday, when I went to do urinalysis, and then the day after that, when I had work on Monday.

MS. BEA: Did you get the vibe he was being accusatory?

CSSN COPELAND: No. He was just asking me questions about V/A.R. or where she would be. That was Sunday.

Like, he was just like asking where she would be. And then Monday, he was just asking the same shit, and then was just saying like, was she being weird or anything? I was like, no. And then that was it.

MS. BEA: Okay. I'm going to do a hard left question, but it's mostly because I'm concerned about you----

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: ----because, you know, we've--we've talked about your mental health struggles in the past and not feeling so great and everything else.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Is that why your mom was worried when she couldn't get in touch with you?

CSSN COPELAND: About what?

MS. BEA: Your mental health.

CSSN COPELAND: I don't know. Like, at the end of the day, I don't answer my phone sometimes, and she knows that. Cool.

There was a female that I'm talking to, like she was calling, I didn't answer either. It just comes to times I would just want a break. My mom knows this, and I don't talk to nobody for days.

MS. BEA: Why?

CSSN COPELAND: Just because. I mean, at the end of the day, that's my life. If I don't want to pick up the phone, I don't got to pick up the phone.

MS. BEA: I mean, that's true. I have no problem with that. Sometimes I don't want to talk to my fucking family, but like, usually that coincides with times in my life where I'm having a hard time.

So, that's why I'm asking. You know, Jeremiah, you might not believe me, but I do care about you. I've always cared about you.

Are you doing okay?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm fine.

MS. BEA: Okay. If you weren't--I mean, I know that, you know, on the ship, you have mental health resources. I don't know what it's like on the--on the James E. Williams.

Do you--do you have somebody you can talk to?

CSSN COPELAND: Always.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Like, on top of that, I have my homeboy that's on the ship. Whenever I'm down or something, I'll go talk to him, or whenever I'm frustrated, I need somebody to talk to, he's like the only person I really talk to on the ship, so.

MS. BEA: Which one's that? I'm sorry. I don't know any----

CSSN COPELAND: J.J. He is a CS as well.

MS. BEA: That's J.J. Okay.

So--so, you're feeling okay right now? You--you just didn't answer the phone because you just didn't feel like--it's not because you're not feeling good mentally?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. I mean, on top of that, I--it's the weekend. My CS2s--especially everybody within that I work with, they know I'm not going to answer if I'm not at work.

Like, my CS2s told me multiple times--even like, they've been serious situations--like, for instance, when I said the female tried to stab me, where--when I was chilling at home, they were calling me. I wouldn't answer my phone. Or it will be like, I'll call them and they don't answer, and they call me back because they saw that, you know, they missed my call and I don't answer.

So, they get mad because my phone stays on do not disturb. So, they'd be like, you need to take your phone off or do not disturb. If you see, obviously, I'm trying to call you. And I'd be like, okay. I just leave it at that.

If I'm in the mood to call them, then I'll call them. If not, I'll just be like, all right. If I see them at work, then I'll just talk to them at work.

MS. BEA: Okay. I mean--and another reason I ask too is like, sometimes when we have Sailors go UA, it's because like they have like, personal problems.

Have you--have you been UA before? Is this the first time?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It's my first time.

MS. BEA: Okay. What made it--so, what got you to the point that when they were like, you know, come into work or--or chief came by and was like, Hey, you got to come into work, that you were just like--you said fuck it, right?

What--what got you to that point? because I know you talked about not being happy there.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm saying like, my roommate didn't come. So, by the time he got home, they were off work.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. So, it was like, this isn't worth it, essentially?

CSSN COPELAND: It--it is not really about----

MS. BEA: Not a shitty thing.

CSSN COPELAND: ----not worth it, but I'm just like, fuck. Like, there--there ain't shit I could do about it.

MS. BEA: Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: They're off work. So, who am I reporting to? Cool.

So, from there I was just like--when I got work on Monday, I'm going to just go to work and tell them what happened, which I told them this whole time. Whole time, my chief kept saying it was a misunderstanding or miscommunication. All right. Cool. I'm not finna argue.

MS. BEA: Yeah. I don't blame you. Okay.

And then--just for my own curiosity, right. Don't they have shuttles that take you to the different bases?

CSSN COPELAND: No. They don't.

MS. BEA: because like, how the fuck are you supposed to get--there's--how are you supposed to get where you're going?

CSSN COPELAND: They don't have shuttles. They have a shuttle----

MS. BEA: They just expect you to figure it out?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. They have shuttles on base that take you different parts on base.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: But they don't have a shuttle that goes different places off base.

MS. BEA: Okay. because I remember----

CSSN COPELAND: They used to.

MS. BEA: ----the Truman was in Portsmouth, they had--yeah. because like, a lot of people were up at Little Creek, and then they just had duty drivers take people down. Nothing----

CSSN COPELAND: They had a shuttle bus that went from Little Creek to Norfolk Base when I first checked on board, which was after A School, and then months down the road, they ended up closing it down.

So, it was there for a minute, and then they ended up shutting that shuttle down.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it.

CSSN COPELAND: But I don't think I was on the Truman when they were in--in wherever you just said.

MS. BEA: Yeah. Portsmouth. Okay.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. Got it. And, you know, has your mom ever had to call the police before to see if you were okay?

Is this the first time?

CSSN COPELAND: I'm not sure.

I mean, there's been times where, like, she called other people to make sure I'm fine, but it's due to the fact that I--I think somebody texted her and they were asking, like, have they heard from me? And she was like, no.

So, from there, obviously, she called me a couple times and then text me, and I didn't respond. So, then, that's what made her call my command or whatever.

MS. BEA: Do you know who texted her and asked if she could get in touch with you? Was it the command?

CSSN COPELAND: No. It was a female that I talked to.

MS. BEA: Okay. Is she a Sailor as well?

CSSN COPELAND: No. She's a civilian.

MS. BEA: Okay.

Does she live around here, or is she back in----

CSSN COPELAND: No. She's back home.

MS. BEA: Back home. Home, Whidbey, or home Carolina?

CSSN COPELAND: Whidbey.

MS. BEA: Whidbey. Okay. Got it.

So, she got in touch with your mom because she hadn't heard from you either? I'm understanding now. That's why you mentioned her to begin with. Okay. Got it. Okay.

So--I mean, you kind of had--you kind of know how we work at this point, right?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: All we're really interested in is finding V/A.R. Everybody we talked to is going to get the same questions that you just answered for me about having anything to do with her disappearance or knowing where she's at.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: You know, and at the end of the day, what I really want you to know is that is all we are interested in.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: So, if we could like--theoretically coordinate a polygraph for you tomorrow, is that something you'd be willing to do?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. Fuck it.

MS. BEA: Fuck it. Yeah. I feel you. Okay. We're going to take another quick break. Unless you--I'm sorry.

SA GOKEY: No.

MS. BEA: Didn't mean to speak for you.

SA GOKEY: No. You're fine.

MS. BEA: Okay. We're going to take another quick break, and then we'll be back. All right.

CSSN COPELAND: All right.

MS. BEA: Do you need to use the bathroom?

CSSN COPELAND: Naw.

MS. BEA: You want more CheezIt?

CSSN COPELAND: Naw.

MS. BEA: Okay.

SA GOKEY: Oh, I'm sorry. I just kicked you.

MS. BEA: No. You're good. You're good.

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 02:36:41 and returned to the room at timestamp 02:58:21.]

SA GOKEY: Okay-dokey. Sorry, Jeremiah.

MS. BEA: You okay? I know you're tired. We're about done. Okay. I just had a couple more things that we wanted to ask you about. As always, it is your choice.

Like we talked about, we are really, really interested in finding V/A.R. and we don't know what's going to be important when we start investigating. We just got to try to get as much as we can. Okay?

So, I wanted to ask you if it's okay--we're, you know, we're searching the barracks and everything else. Specifically, we wanted to go into spaces, like, you know, any kind of backpacks you have or anything else like that. You can be present for that as well. It's no problem either way.

And then, you know, I know we already talked about your phone and you were okay with us, you know, looking through that. And I wanted to ask you about the other iPhone that you have in your room. Is that something you would also be okay with us going through?

CSSN COPELAND: It's broke.

MS. BEA: Will it turn on?

CSSN COPELAND: No.

MS. BEA: Won't even turn on?

CSSN COPELAND: No. Like, it's broke.

MS. BEA: Okay. And then other electronic devices we talked about that was your PS5.

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: And then the watch. Does the watch work?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Okay. And what does that one look like? Like, what kind of band do you have? Do you have like a----

CSSN COPELAND: It's a white band.

MS. BEA: A white band. Okay. So, if you'd be okay with us looking through that stuff, that would be cool, but again, it is completely up to you. It is always your decision.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Is that something you're all right with?

CSSN COPELAND: That's fine. Go ahead.

MS. BEA: Okay.

So, I have the--the same kind of verbiage of the--I can read this over to you again. You want me to?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Yeah. Okay.

So, I, CSSN, Jeremiah Copeland, after being advised by me, that the Naval Criminal Investigative Service is conducting an investigation into Articles 86 and 107, have been requested to

permitt a search of my backpack, barracks room, and electronic devices that we talked about.

And you telling us--essentially, like, you tell us what's okay for us to search and what's not.

CSSN COPELAND: Okay.

MS. BEA: Okay. I have been informed of my constitutional right to refuse to permit this search in the absence of a search warrant. In full understanding of this right, I have nevertheless decided to permit this search to be made. This search may be conducted on today's date by NCIS, and I here grant my permission to remove any--and retain any property or papers found during the search which are desired for investigative purposes. I make this decision freely and voluntarily is made no--with no threats having been made or promises extended to me. All sound good? Okay.

So, if you could sign where it says sign.

CSSN COPELAND: When you say like, sign, like you say backpack, bedroom, and electronic devices.

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: When is that going to be?

MS. BEA: Tonight. Like, right now. I'm tired too.

CSSN COPELAND: I'm just trying to go home.

MS. BEA: Yeah. No. I feel you. I'm tired too.

CSSN COPELAND: And you say--what'd you say? When you said, whenever I choose, right?

MS. BEA: [Affirmative response.]

CSSN COPELAND: But if I'm putting this on paper for--you saying all three of those, then you have by--what by choice do you have? You're obligated to go through all three with me, sign that, right?

MS. BEA: I--yeah. If you want to be present for when we go through those things, you're welcome to be there because we're also trying to go.

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah. But I'm just saying, like, let's say I don't want you going through a certain backpack, but I already signed you--you're obligated to go through my backpack.

MS. BEA: So, this means consent. So, if at any point you say, "No, I don't want you to search this specific thing," we cannot search in there.

Does that make sense?

CSSN COPELAND: Yeah.

MS. BEA: Answer that question well enough?

CSSN COPELAND: [Affirmative response.]

MS. BEA: Okay. Okay. And then, I wanted to revisit the one we talked about with your phone. Are you still okay with that?

CSSN COPELAND: No. I just--can we just--I'm just trying to go home.

MS. BEA: Understood. Okay. All right. So, let's make some moves to do that and we will make those coordination and we will get right back. Okay.

[SA Gokey and Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 03:02:09 and Ms. Bea returned to the room at timestamp 03:03:35.]

MS. BEA: Hey, Jeremiah. I'm just realizing that I didn't give you my phone in order to call your mom. You want to do that?

CSSN COPELAND: I'll just wait.

MS. BEA: You just wait. Okay. Cool. I don't want to deprive you that opportunity.

CSSN COPELAND: How--how long is this going to take?

MS. BEA: How long until we leave this office----

CSSN COPELAND: Yes, ma'am.

MS. BEA: ----to get back to you? 10 minutes.

[Ms. Bea departed the room at timestamp 03:03:56.]

[SA Gokey returned to the room at timestamp 03:16:21.]

SA GOKEY: Okay, Jeremiah. You ready to go? Got your stuff.

(b) Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963)
(c) Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972)
(d) JAGINST 5803.1E (20 Jan 15) Rule 3.8

1. On 3 December 2025, CDR Lauren Mayo, JAGC, USN, LCDR Chris Dempsey, JAGC, USN, and LN1 Kathleen Vanetti, USN, spoke to SA Bea Duffy, NCIS in the Chief Special Trial Counsel office. The following disclosures are provided:

a. SA Duffy stated CSSN Copeland's phone would not have physically been in the interview room because, procedurally, cell phones are not permitted in the interview room unless there is something that the agent wants to review on the phone with the interviewee. SA Duffy considered the phone seized upon arrival at the interview facility in this case.
b. SA Duffy specified that the interview, PASS, and seizure of the phone were conducted as investigative steps for CSSN Copeland's suspected violations of Article 86 and 107, and to gain any information into the possible whereabouts of V/A.R who remained UA.
c. While SA Duffy was aware that the search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room was being conducted at the same time as the interview, she did not know if blood had been found in the closet while conducting the interview. She is certain that if she had that information while conducting the interview, she would have asked CSSN Copeland about it.
d. This was not the first time SA Duffy had interviewed CSSN Copeland. She had previously interviewed him 3 or 4 times regarding other investigations. SA Duffy confirmed that CSSN Copeland did not appear too tired to be interviewed and was not in any way unfit to complete the interview.
e. SA Duffy stated that CSSN Copeland gave verbal consent to have his phone searched earlier in the interview but was unwilling to sign the PASS specifically for that phone by the end of the interview because he just wanted to go home. She did not believe that wanting to go home was an unequivocal revocation of his earlier consent. SA Duffy's experiences led her to feel that a signed PASS was a best practice for a search and would have sought a CASS, regardless of the verbal consent, to avoid any litigation issues. She stated that the phone was seized, regardless of consent, as a probable cause seizure.
f. When asked if she thought the signed PASS that included the backpack and electronic devices was intended to include the phone that was physically with CSSN Copeland when he arrived to NCIS, she said she did not because there was a separate PASS for that specific device. This did not affect her belief that he consented.

g. SA Duffy described CSSN Copeland as a "person of interest" at that time and recalled leaving the interview she did not consider him a suspect of any foul play regarding V/A.R.'s disappearance. She expressed disbelief he would be involved in something as serious as this.
h. he should not be suspected as having harmed CS3 A.R.
i. During the search of CSSN Copeland's barracks room later that evening, CSSN Copeland asked for his phone back, but SA Duffy advised him at that point it had been seized or something to that effect.

1. On 3 December 2025, CDR Lauren Mayo, JAGC, USN, LCDR Chris Dempsey, JAGC, USN, and LN1 Kathleen Vanetti, USN, spoke to SA Danielle Ortiz, telephonically. The following disclosures are provided:

a. SA Ortiz explained that while the cadaver dog was working through CSSN Copeland's barracks room, the dog "signaled" at the bookbag that was placed between CSSN Copeland's desk and bed. She described it as not a "full" signal. She explained that "signaling" can be occur when any bodily odor is detected, including sweat.
b. The bag was moved to the side as the search of the room continued. The bag was searched, with the assistance of CSSN Copeland, upon his return to the room and his consent to the PASS. CSSN Copeland withdrew consent for NCIS to take his water bottle.
c. SA Ortiz explained that scope of the search included areas that may have the personal belongings (uniform, Hello Kitty bag, phone, etc.), or physical person, of V/A.R. It was logical to check in the CSSN Copeland's closet as V/A.R.'s personal items could be in the closet, or she could be hiding in there herself.
d. The closet floor was sticky, as if from a cleaning solution, and the impression of the bottom of a bucket was visible in the stickiness. Upon inspecting the closet floor, SA Ortiz identified a sticker with a brownish/red substance on it. The substance was checked using a Hemastix test and was presumptively positive as blood.
e. SA Ortiz then prepared the surface for BlueStar testing and subsequently found additional areas within the closet that illuminated, indicating blood or bodily fluids had been present. SA Ortiz caveated that BlueStar can illuminate material that is not a bodily fluid, such as bleach/cleaning supplies. The rest of CSSN Copeland's barracks room was then prepared for BlueStar testing and SA Ortiz followed the trail of illumination into the common area of the barracks suite.
f. SA Ortiz expressed that she communicated the presence of blood in the barrack's room to SA Gokey but does not remember the specific time she did so and believed it was when SA Gokey arrived at the scene. She explained that she was excited to communicate her findings to the investigatory team because as a forensic analyst this was an exciting discovery.

g. SA Ortiz specified that if she had thought it was a murder investigation or investigation into any foul play, she would have insisted on the barracks room being secured as a crime scene. As it was, there was no way of knowing when the blood detected was put there, whose blood it was, or if it was from clothing or from an injury.

1. I, Jessica Gokey, am a Special Agent with the Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS) assigned to the NCIS Resident Agency Norfolk, VA and have been employed with NCIS since March 2022. During my tenure as a Special Agent, I have completed approximately 900 hours of instruction at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC) in Glynco, GA, where I attended the Special Agent Basic Training Integrated Program (SABTI). I was provided instruction on investigations, federal law, and other various practice issues for investigators. I am a member of the Military Criminal Investigative Organization Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force. I have attended the National Criminal Justice Training Center's Internet Crimes Against Children certification course and additional training through ICAC for an approximate total of 90 hours. I spent eight (8) years as an active duty member of the United States Navy, where I was a Master-at-Arms (MA). As a MA, I was a first responder to base incidents, misdemeanor crimes, and traffic accidents. During my tenure as a MA, I was employed with the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) where I worked various cases to include Domestic Violence cases, simple assaults, and other misdemeanor crimes. I have a Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice from Fort Hays State University, Hays, KS.

2. The following facts and information are known to your Affiant based upon information gained from the conduct of this investigation, witness observations, training and experience, and/or through information relayed through other law enforcement officers.

3. This affidavit is submitted in support of an application for a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure to search the residence belonging to CSSN Jermiah COPELAND as annotated in Attachment A.

4. Since this affidavit is being submitted for the limited purpose of securing a Command Authorization for Search and Seizure, your Affiant has not included each and every fact known concerning this investigation. Your Affiant has set forth the facts believed necessary to establish probable cause to believe that evidence of violations of Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) Article 86 (Absence without leave).

FACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES ESTABLISHING PROBABLE CAUSE

5. This United States is investigating violations of Article 86 (Absence without leave).

6. On May 28, 2025, CSSN V/A.R. was known to be in the barracks room located at X-2 room 335B Rack A located onboard Naval Station Norfolk, who is occupied by CSSN Jermiah COPELAND.

7. According to COPELAND, V/A.R. came to his barracks room to have dinner and have a couple drinks.

8. COPELAND stated V/A.R. called a "ex-boyfriend from Texas" and was confronting the person about returning personal items. COPELAND stated, V/A.R. became emotional and began to cry.

9. COPELAND stated the relationship with V/A.R. was platonic and he is a friend from work and no sexual acts have happened between them.

10. During an interview with PSSN Irbin GORDILLOCRUZ, who is a roommate of COPELAND, at approximately 0645 on 29 May 2025, GORDILLOCRUZ stated he was leaving for work and saw his roommate, later clarified to be COPELAND and an unknown female on the floor naked.

11. GORDILLOCRUZ stated the female looked to have darker skin, and black curly hair. He could see V/A.R. breasts and could see COPELAND's head resting on V/A.R. stomach area. GORDILLOCRUZ stated he could not see if V/A.R. was wearing anything below COPELAND's head. GORDILLOCRUZ stated COPELAND was also naked but his back was facing upwards.

12. GORDILLOCRUZ stated he could tell V/A.R. was breathing by her chest moving up and down. GORDILLOCRUZ stated, he had never seen the female before and has not seen her since.

13. COPELAND stated, he was late for work on the morning of 29 May 2025 and FCC Brad PARKER knocked on his door to say COPELAND was going to be labeled as Unauthorized Absence (UA). FCC PARKER stated COPELAND and V/A.R. were in a state of undress and V/A.R. waved and rolled over into a blanket. FCC PARKER told COPELAND to report to work and left the barracks room.

14. COPELAND continued explaining, the two of them got dressed and a roommate took him and V/A.R. to V/A.R. residence located at Miller Hall onboard Naval Station Norfolk at approximately 1000.

15. COPELAND's movements after dropping V/A.R. off at Miller Hall. However, we know after speaking with Command, COPELAND was marked UA for the days of 29-31 May 2025 and on 01 June 2025.

16. On 02 June 2025, NCIS spoke to FCC PARKER to verify V/A.R. work schedule. FCC PARKER stated V/A.R. was scheduled to work day shift Friday, May 30, 2025 - Sunday, June 1, 2025 with a report time of 0500-0530 hours. FCC PARKER stated V/A.R. failed to report all three (3) days.

17. NCIS interview all remaining roommates of COPELAND who stated they did not give a ride to COPELAND and V/A.R. on the morning of 29 May 2025.

18. The whereabouts of V/A.R. are still unknown. Her cellphone last pinged on 31 May 2025 for last known location. The last known was approximately Latitude 36.896558 Longitude -76.435536, which appears to be located in Suffolk, VA.

19. Additionally, NCIS spoke with her mother in Texas and she conveyed V/A.R. has attempted suicide in the past and suffers from depression, for which she is prescribed medication. Emergency Room's, psychology departments, morgues, and jails were all negative for her presence when called.

20. On 03 June 2025, NCIS executed a Command Authorized Search and Seizure on the barracks room belonging to COPELAND. During the search, a pair of black rimmed glasses were located within the residence. It was unknown at the time, V/A.R. was known to wear black rimmed glasses.

CONCLUSION

21. Based upon the information, your Affiant asserts there is probable cause to believe items in COPELAND's barracks room located at X-2 room 335B Rack A and the common room area onboard Naval Station Norfolk may constitute evidence of Article 86 (Absence without leave) of the UCMJ.

22. Your affiant respectfully requests a CASS be issued, authorizing NCIS Agents, forensic examiners tasked by NCIS, and other law enforcement entities and their forensic components to search and retain evidence as described above.

EVIDENCE

1. On 04Jun25, DFE BUSH obtained the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND maintained on NCIS evidence custody log number NFFO 13Y9L Item XUQP3 for examination from SA Caroline ROBINSON, NCISRA Norfolk, VA.

2. DFE BUSH copied the GrayKey extraction of the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND to a Seagate hard drive with serial number Z9A4RSFN. On 12Jun25, DFE BUSH enter the hard drive into evidence under NCIS evidence custody log number NFFO K8J9D Item 8JY7H to the Temporary Evidence Locker, NCISRA Norfolk, VA.

FORENSIC ACQUISITION AND VERIFICATION

1. On 04Jun25, DFE BUSH obtained a full file system extraction of the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND using the Graykey Extraction Tool OS version 1.26.3.31482045, App Bundle: 6.3.1.31921520. SA ROBINSON provided DFE BUSH the Personal Identification Number (PIN) 980377 to access the device. The device was isolated from network connectivity via airplane mode and could not be write-protected due to established forensic processes. The digital forensic extraction was verified through established forensic processes.

WORKING COPY

1. On 05Jun25, SDFE DAVISON obtained a working copy of the Graykey extraction of the iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND from DFE BUSH for examination.

EXAMINATION DETAILS

1. Between 05Jun25 and 08Aug25, SDFE DAVISON conducted a digital forensic examination of an iPhone 15 Pro Max belonging to S/COPELAND using Magnet Axiom Version 9.2.1.44383, Magnet Axiom Version 9.4.1.45125, Cellebrite Inseyets Physical Analyzer version 10.5.0.1027, and ILEAPP version 2.2.0. The Apple ID associated with the iPhone 15 Pro Max listed as [redacted] and the Directory Services Identifier (DSID) listed as 17163425203. A DSID is a unique numerical value associated with an Apple ID account to ensure each account has a unique number in case a user changes an email address associated with an Apple account. The phone number associated with device is PII -4307 and the device phone name is listed as "Jermiah's iPhone." SDFE DAVISON took the following screenshot from the device information displayed in Axiom and took a screenshot of the Graykey Extraction report.

May 30, 2025 - Sunday, June 1, 2025 with a report time of 0500-0530 hours. FCC PARKER stated V/A.R. failed to report all three (3) days.

13. NCIS interviewed all remaining roommates of COPELAND who stated they did not give a ride to COPELAND and V/A.R. on the morning of 29 May 2025.

14. The whereabouts of V/A.R. are still unknown. Her cellphone last pinged on 31 May 2025 for last known location. The last known was approximately Latitude 36.896558 Longitude -76.435536, which appears to be located in Suffolk, VA.

15. Additionally, NCIS spoke with her mother in Texas and she conveyed V/A.R. has attempted suicide in the past and suffers from depression, for which she is prescribed medication. Emergency Room's, psychology departments, morgues, and jails were all negative for her presence when called.

16. On 03 June 2025, NCIS executed a Command Authorized Search and Seizure on the barracks room belonging to COPELAND. During the search, a pair of black rimmed glasses were located within the residence. It was unknown at the time, V/A.R. was known to wear black rimmed glasses.

17. On 03 June 2028, NCIS conducted a follow-up interview with COPELAND who stated he remained in his barracks room and the common space lounges within X-2. COPELAND stated he never left the X-2 building during his period of unauthorized absence.

18. COPELAND also stated, contrary to his 01 June 2025 interview, that neither he nor his roommate dropped V/A.R. off at her barracks on the morning of 29 May 2025. COPELAND stated he believed V/A.R. had taken an Uber or Z-Trip back to her barracks.

BIOMETRIC ACCESS TO DEVICES

19. This warrant permits law enforcement to compel CSSN Jermiah COPELAND to unlock any DEVICES requiring biometric access subject to seizure pursuant to this warrant. The grounds for this request are as follows:

a. I know from my training and experience, as well as from information found in publicly available materials published by device manufacturers, that many electronic devices, particularly newer mobile devices and laptops, offer their users the ability to unlock the device through biometric features in lieu of a numeric or alphanumeric passcode or password. These biometric features include fingerprint scanners, facial recognition features and iris recognition features. Some devices offer a combination of these biometric features, and the user of such devices can select which features they would like to utilize.

b. If a device is equipped with a fingerprint scanner, a user may enable the ability to unlock the device through his or her fingerprints. For example, Apple offers a feature called "Touch ID," which allows a user to register up to five fingerprints that can unlock a device. Once a fingerprint is registered, a user can unlock the device by pressing the relevant finger to the device's Touch ID sensor, which is found in the round button (often referred to as the "home" button) located at the bottom center of the front of the device. The fingerprint sensors found on devices produced by other manufacturers have different names but operate similarly to Touch ID.
